5 However, while I crawl upon this planet I think myself obliged to do what good I can in my narrow domestic sphere, to all my fellowcreatures, and to wish them all the good I cannot do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter to the Bishop of Waterford, 22 Jan., 1780.

6 I expect to pass through this world but once.
Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

Attributed to STEPHEN GRELLY, an American Quaker of French birth (1773-1855), but not found in his writings. This quotation shares with the "mouse-trap" quotation the honor of being the best known and the most mysterious as to authorship. It has been credited to Emerson; to Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, owing to a slight resemblance to his epitaph (see under Gifts: Giving and Receiving); to John Wesley, William Penn, Thomas Carlyle, and many others. It is probable that Grellay was the author. The sentiment is, of course, a very old one.

The old Quaker was right: I expect to pass through life but once. If there is any kindness, or any good thing I can do to my fellow beings,
let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once.

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw, within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold:—
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?"—The Vision rais'd its head,

And, with a look made all of sweet accord,
Answer'd, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"

Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerly still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."

The angel wrote, and vanish'd. The next night

It came again with a great wakening light,
And show'd the names whom love of God had blest,

And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. (1869)

11 Taking that terrible modern weapon, the pen, in his hand, he passed the remainder of his life [from 1830] in one fierce battle. What was that battle? the reader will ask. It was a life and death battle with Philistinism.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine. (1865)

It was in this essay that Arnold introduced into England from Germany the term "philistine." This word was his chief contribution to the process of disintegrating Victorianism.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 256.

12 Philistine must have originally meant, in the mind of those who invented the nickname, a strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the children of the light.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine.

Arnold defines a Philistine as a "strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the chosen people," a definition which, when one reflects what the chosen people were like, raises a doubt about the justice of using Philistine as a synonym for an enemy of art and culture.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 257.

Philistine, as a term applied to the ill-behaved and ignorant, or to persons of low and materialistic ideas, is said to have originated from a sermon preached from this text at Jena in 1693 at the funeral of a student killed in a "town and gown" quarrel. Ever afterwards the students at German universities called the townsmen "Philistines." Matthew Arnold probably heard it there.

Philistine—a term of contempt applied by priests to the rest of their species.

LESLIE STEPHEN.

13 Of all the places on the map,
Some queer and others queerer,
Arcadia is dear to me,
Philistia is dearer.

They never puzzle me with Greek,
Nor drive me mad with Ibsen;
Yet over forms as fair as Eve's
They wear the gowns of Gibson.

BLISS CARMAN, In Philistia.

14 The Philistines be upon thee, Samson.
Old Testament: Judges, xvi, 9.

The Philistines have invaded the land.
Old Testament: I Samuel, xlii, 27.

15 Philistia, triumph thou because of me.
Old Testament: Psalms, lx, 8. A plain in south-eastern Palestine, the land of commonplace.

16 Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Ascalon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 20.

Bid Fame be dumb, and tremble to proclaim
In beathen Gath, or Ascalon, our shame,
Lest proud Philistia, lest our haughty foe,
With impious scorn insult our solemn woe.

W. C. SOMMERVILLE, The Lamentation of David.

PHILOSOPHY

I.—Philosophy: Definitions

1 Unintelligible answers to insoluble problems.

HENRY ADAMS, defining philosophy. (Quoted by BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 154.)

2 All good and moral philosophy, as was said, is but a handmaid to religion.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism; but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion.

BACON, Essays: Atheism.

A little skill in antiquity inclines a man to Popery; but depth in that study brings him about again to our religion.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The True Church Antiquary.

3 Metaphysics is the finding of bad reasons for what we believe on instinct.

F. H. BRADLEY, Appearance and Reality. Ch. 14.

Metaphysics I detested. The science appeared to me an elaborate, diabolical invention for mystifying what was clear, and confounding what was intelligible.

W. E. AYTON, Norman Smelair.

4 Philosophy is common-sense in a dress suit.

OLIVER S. BRASTON, Philosophy.

5 Before Philosophy can teach by Experience, the Philosophy has to be in readiness, the Experience must be gathered and intelligibly recorded.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

6 Philosophy, the mother of all the arts. (Philosophia vero, omnium mater artium.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 64.

That great mother of the sciences.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. ii, bk. 1, aphor. 80. Referring to natural philosophy.

7 The true medicine of the mind is philosophy. (Est profecto animi medicina, philosophia.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 6.

I look to philosophy to provide an antidote to sorrow.

CICERO, Academicarum Questionum. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 11.

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 3, 55.

8 The science of sciences. (Scientia scientiarum.)

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12. Referring to philosophy.

9 Philosophy—the thoughts of men about human thinking, reasoning, and imagining, and the real values in human existence.

CHARLES W. KLOTZ, Inscription, Public Library, Warren, Pa.

10 Philosophy is the account which the mind gives to itself of the constitution of the world.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

11 The beginning of philosophy . . . is a consciousness of a man's own weakness and impotence with reference to the things of real importance in life.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 1.

Behold the beginning of philosophy!—a recognition of the conflict between the opinions of men.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 13.

12 What is the first business of one who practises philosophy? To part with self-conceit. For it is impossible for any one to begin to learn what he thinks he already knows.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 1.

What is philosophy? Does it not mean preparation to face the things which may come upon us?

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 5.

13 Philosophy goes no further than probabilities, and every assertion keeps a doubt in reserve.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

14 A modest confession of ignorance is the ripest and last attainment of philosophy.

R. D. HITCHCOCK, Eternal Atonement: Secret Things of God.

15 Philosophy is doubt. (Philosopher c'est doubter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

The first step towards philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT, Remark, during his last conversation.

16 Philosophy is the highest music. (Philosophia ut obortus perflatus sonans.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 61.

17 Philosophy is nothing but Discretion.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Philosophy.

18 Philosophy calls for plain living, but not for penance. (Frugalitatem exigit philosophia, non poenam.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. v, sec. 5.

Philosophy does the going, and wisdom is the goal. (Illa venit, ad hanc venitur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. 89, sec. 7.

19 The philosopher is Nature's pilot. And there you have our difference: to be in hell is to drift: to be in heaven is to steer.

WILLIAM SHAW, Man and Superman. Act III.

To be a philosopher is not merely to have subtle thoughts, nor even to found a school, but so to love wisdom as to live according to its dictates, a life of simplicity, independence, magnanimity, and trust.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

How can a man be a philosopher and not maintain his vital heat by better methods than other men?

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

II.—Philosophy: Apothegms

Those that study particular sciences and neglect philosophy are like Penelope's weavers, who made love to the waiting-women

ARISTIPPUS (BACON, Apothegms. No. 189.)

A deep occult philosopher.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 537.

I won't philosophise, and will be read.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 28.

But all be that he was a philosopher,
 Yet had he but little gold in coffer.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 297.

The Arabians say that Abul Kharin, the mystic, and Abu Ali Seena, the philosopher, conferred together; and, on parting, the philosopher said, "All that he sees I know"; and the mystic said, "All that he knows I see."

RAMBOLD, Representative Men: Swedenborg.

To a philosopher no circumstance, however trifling, is too minute.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 30.

A countryman, one of nature's philosophers, with rough mother-wit. (Rusticus, abnormis sapiens, crassaque Minerva.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 3.

Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act III, sc. 2,
 l. 22.

Be a philosopher; but, amidst all your philosophy, be still a man

DAVID HUME, Essays. No. 39.

The philosophic climate of our time inevitably forces its own clothing on us.

WALTER JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 432.

All men are philosophers, to their inches.

BEN JONSON, The Magnetic Lady. Act i, sc. 1.

It is neither possible nor necessary for all men,
 nor for many, to be philosophers.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographic Literaria. Ch. xiv.

There are philosophies which are unmeasur-able not because men are cowards, but because they are men

LEWIS LUTWIDGE, Modern Drama, p. 132.

[They] fetch their precepts from the Cynic tub.

MILTON, Comus, l. 708 The tub from which Diogenes lectured.

That stone, . . .

Philosophers in vain so long have sought.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 600

Philosophy drips gently from his tongue
 Who hath three meals a day in guarantee.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, So This Is Arden.

The whole life of the philosopher is a preparation for death (Τὸ μέλημα αὐτοῦ ἐστὶ τὸν φιλοσοφῆν, λόγος καὶ χειρισμὸς ψυχῆς ἀπὸ θάνατος)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 67D Cicero, (Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74) gives it: Totā philosophorum vita commentatio mortis est.

I am safe, he is now philosophizing (Salvus sum, jam philosophatur.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 974. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

There are more things in heaven and earth,
 Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 166.

Of your philosophy you make no use,

If you give place to accidental evils

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 145.

Clearness marks the sincerity of philosophers.
 (La clarté est la bonne foi des philosophes.)

VAUVENARQUE, Pensées Diverses. No. 365

Books bear him up awhile, and make him try
 To swim with bladders of philosophy.

 Against Mankind*, l. 20.

In years that bring the philosophic mind

Wordsworth, Ode on the Intimations of Immortality. St. 50

The bosom-weight, your stubborn gift,
 That no philosophy can lift.

WORDSWORTH, Presentiments, l. 25.

III.—Philosophy: Its Virtues

The calm lights of solid philosophy.

ANON., Cato. Act i, sc. 1, l. 14.

What I have gained from philosophy is the ability to feel at ease in any society

ARISTIPPUS (EUGENIUS LACURUS, Aristippus Bk. II, sec. 68.)

I have gained this by philosophy: that I do without being ordered what others do only from fear of the law.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 20.)

I have gained at least this from philosophy: to be prepared for every fortune.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 63.)

1 Natural philosophy, next to the word of God, is the surest medicine for superstition.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. ii, bk. i, aphor. 89.

2 To take things as they be—
That's my philosophy.

No use to holler, mope, or cuss—
If they was changed they might be wuss.

JOHN KENDERICK BANGS, A Philosopher.

To take what passes in good part
And keep the hiccup from the heart.

JOHN BYRON, Careless Content.

3 Sublime Philosophy!
Thou art the Patriarch's ladder, reaching heaven,
And bright with beck'ning angels.

BULWER-LITTON, Richelieu. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 4.

4 Philosophy can never be praised as much as she deserves, since she enables every man who obeys her precepts to pass every season of his life free from worry. (Numquam igitur laudari satis digne philosophia poterit, cui qui pareat omne tempus atatis sine molestia possit decere.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. i, sec. 2.

Divine philosophy! by whose pure light
We first distinguish, then pursue the right.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 254 (Gifford, tr.)

O philosophy, life's guide! O searcher-out of virtue and expeller of vice! What would we and every age of men have been without thee?

CICERO, Inscularum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 2, sec. 5.

5 Philosophy! the great and only heir
Of all the human knowledge which has been Unforfeited by man's rebellious sin.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To the Royal Society.

6 If you would enjoy real freedom, you must be the slave of philosophy. (Philosophie servas oportet, ut tibi contingat vera libertas.)

EPICURUS, Fragment. No. 109. (SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epist. viii, sec. 7.)

7 But above all 'tis pleasantest to get
The top of high philosophy, and sit
On the calm, peaceful, flourishing head of it.

LUCIUS, De Rebus. Epist. Bk. ii, l. 4. (Creech, tr.)

8 How charming is divine Philosophy!

Not harsh, and crabbed as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns.

MILTON, Cowley, l. 476.

9 The first thing which philosophy attempts to give is fellow-feeling with all men. (Hoc primum philosophia promittit, sensum communem.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epist. v, sec. 4. If there is any good in philosophy, it is this—that it never looks into pedigrees. (Si quid est aliquid in philosophia boni, hoc est, quod stemma non inspicit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epist. xiv, sec. 1. Without philosophy the mind is sickly, and the body, too, though it may be very powerful, is strong only as that of a madman is strong.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epist. xv, sec. 2. Life is the gift of the immortal gods, but living well is the gift of philosophy. (Deorum immortalium munus sit quod vivimus, philosophiae quod bene vivimus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epist. xc, sec. 1.

11 To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 28.

IV—Philosophy: Its Faults

12 As for the philosophers, they make imaginary laws for imaginary commonwealths; and their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge.

13 Beside, he was a shrewd philosopher,
And had read ev'ry text and gloss over;
Whate'er the crabbed'st author hath,
He understood b' implicit faith.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 127.

There was an ancient sage philosopher,
That had read Alexander Ross over,
And swore the world, as he could prove,
Was made of fighting and of love.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 1.

14 No statement is too absurd for some philosophers to make. (Nihil tam absurde dici potest quod non dicatur ab aliquo philosophorum.)

CICERO, De Diffinitione. Bk. ii, ch. 58, sec. 119.

15 I hate the philosopher who is not wise for himself. (Non est sapiens, qui non est sapiens pro se.)

7 Wild was the day; the wintry sea

Moaned sadly on New England's strand,

When first the thoughtful and the free,

Our fathers, trod the desert land.

BRYANT, The Twenty-Second of December.

8 They fell upon an ungenial climate . . . that called out the best energies of the men, and of the women too, to get a mere subsistence out of the soil. In their efforts to do that, they cultivated industry and frugality at the same time—which is the real foundation of the greatness of the Pilgrims.

ULYSSES S. GRANT, Speech, New England Society Dinner, 22 Dec., 1880.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, dinner of the Pilgrim Society at Plymouth, 21 Dec., 1855.

15 The Pilgrim spirit has not fled;
It walks in noon's broad light;

And it watches the bed of the glorious dead,
With the holy stars by night.

JOHN PIERPONT, The Pilgrim Fathers.

16 The Pilgrims rose, at this, God's word,
And sailed the wintry seas:

With their own flesh nor blood conferred,
Nor thought of wealth or ease.

They left the towers of Leyden town,
They left the Zuyder Zee;

And where they cast their anchor down,
Rose Freedom's realm to be.

And carved this graceful arabesque of vines;
No organ but the wind here sighs and moans,
No sepulchre conceals a martyr's bones,
No marble bishop on his tomb reclines.
Enter! the pavement, carpeted with leaves,
Gives back a softened echo to thy tread!
Listen! the choir is singing; all the birds,
In leafy galleries beneath the eaves,
Are singing! listen, ere the sound be fled,
And learn there may be worship without words

12 O willing hearts turned quick to clay,
Glad lovers holding death in scorn,
Out of the lives ye cast away

The coming race is born
LAURENCE HOUSTMAN, The Settlers.

13 There, till the vision he foresaw,
Splendid and whole arise,
And unimagined Empires draw
To council 'neath his skies,
The immense and breeding Spirit still Shall quicken and control.
Living he was the land, and dead,
His soul shall be her soul.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, C. J. Rhodes. Read at his

The gull shall whistle in his wake, the blind wave break in fire
He shall fulfil God's utmost will, unknowing His desire.

And he shall see old planets change and alien stars arise,
And give the gale his seaworn sail in shadow of new skies.
Stronger lust of power shall drive him forth and hunger spur his hand,

1 I ~~wish~~ you beforehand so to have pity on others that others may not have to take pity on you. (Præmonstro tibi Ut ita te aliorum miserescat, ne tui alios misereat.)

Who, to patch up his fame—or fill his purse—
Still pilfers wretched plans, and makes them worse;

Like gypsies, lest the stolen brat be known,
Defacing first, then claiming for his own.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 232.

Steal—to be sure they may; and egad, serve your best thoughts as gypsies do stolen children, disfigure them to make 'em pass for their own.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act I, sc. 1.

[Witches] steal young children out of their cradles, ministeria dæmonum, and put deformed in their rooms, which we call changelings.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. I, sec. II, mem. 1, suba. 3.

To copy beauties, forfeits all pretence
To fame—to copy faults, is want of sense.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 457.

Because they commonly make use of treasure found in books, as of other treasure belonging to the dead and hidden underground; for they dispose of both with great secrecy, defacing the shape and image of the one as much as of the other.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Gondibert: Preface.

The Plagiarism of orators is the art, or an ingenious and easy mode, which some adroitly employ, to change, or disguise, all sorts of speeches of their own composition, or that of other authors, for their pleasure, or their utility; in such a manner that it becomes impossible even for the author himself to recognise his own work, his own genius, and his own style, so skillfully shall the whole be disguised.

SEUR DE RICHE-SOURCE, The Mask of Orators. (Quoted by ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Curiosities of Literature: Professors of Plagiarism, who says that Riche-Source invented "plagiarism" to describe a peculiarly artful kind of literary theft.)

They steal my thunder!

JOHN DENNIS

Our author, for the advantage of this play [Appius and Virginia], had invented a new species of thunder, . . . the very sort that at present is used in the theatre. The tragedy itself was coldly received, notwithstanding such assistance, and was acted but a short time. Some nights after, Mr. Dennis, being in the pit at the representation of Macbeth, heard his own thunder made use of; upon which he rose in a violent passion, and exclaimed, with an oath, that it was his thunder. "See how the rascals use me!" said he. "They will not let my play run, and yet they steal my thunder!"

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 13.

My books need no title or judge to prove them; your page stares you in the face and says, "You are a thief!" (Indice non opus est nostris nec judice libris: Stat contra dicitque tibi tua pagina "Fur es.")

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. I, epig. 53.

Why, simpleton, do you mix your verses with mine? What have you to do, foolish man, with writings that convict you of theft? Why do you attempt to associate foxes with lions, and make owls pass for eagles? Though you had one of Ladas's legs, you would not be able, blockhead, to run with the other leg of wood.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. II, ep. 100.

Every generation has the privilege of stand-lay on the shoulders of the generation that went before; but it has no right to pick the pockets of the first-comer.

FRANKLIN MARSHALL, Representations of an Aristocrat, p. 20.

For such kind of borrowing as this, if it be not bettered by the borrower, among good authors is accounted piracy.

MILTON, Iconoclasts, Ch. 23.

MOLIERE, taking possession of and using several lines in his Les Fourberies de Scapin, the famous phrase, "What the devil was he doing in that gallery?" (Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère?), which he claimed Cyrano de Bergerac had stolen from him and used in his Pédant Joué (Act II, sc. 4). Emerson (Letters and Social Aims) attributed the poet to Marmontel.

He liked those literary cooks

BRYAN WALTON-PARSONS, Diary of a Month.

Liberty is not a thing to be sold.

Fine words—I wonder where you stole 'em.
SWIFT, Poems Occasioned by Whitshed's Motto on His Coach, 1724. Whitshed was the Chief Justice who twice prosecuted the "Drapier." The motto is mentioned repeatedly in the Drapier Letters.

I wrote these lines, another wears the bays
Thus you for others build your nests, O birds:
Thus you for others bear your fleece, O sheep:
Thus you for others honey make, O bees.
Thus you for others drag the plough, O kine!
(Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter homines:
Sic vos non vobis vellera fertis oves:
Sic vos non vobis mellificatis apes:
Sic vos non vobis fertis arata boves.)

VERGIL, Epigram (CAIUS TIBERIUS DONATUS, Life of Vergil, p. 17 Brummer's edn in Latin). The story is that a versifier named Bathylkus had stolen a distich of Vergil's in honor of Augustus, and, in the presence of the Emperor, Vergil wrote beneath the distich four lines beginning, "Sic vos non vobis," and challenged Bathylkus to complete them. He was unable to do so, and Vergil did it as above.

The seed ye sow, another reaps,
The wealth ye find, another keeps;
The robe ye weave, another wears;
The arms ye forge, another bears.
SHAKESPEARE, Song to the Men of England.

II—PLAGIARISM: EXCUSE

We can say nothing but what has been said
Our poets steal from Homer . . . Our storydressers do as much, he that comes last is commonly best.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Demotritus to the Reader.

When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,
He'd 'eard men sing by land an' sea;
An' what he thought 'e might require,
'E went an' took—the same as me!
RUBENS KIRKLAND, Barack-Room Ballads:
Introduction.

Thus the artless songs I sing
Do not deal with anything
New or novel and before.
BRYAN WALTON-PARSONS, A General Summary.

That's of no consequence; all that can be said is, that two people happened to hit on the same thought—and Shakespeare made use of it first, that's all.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act II, sc. 1.

1 Then why should those who pick and choose
The best of all the best compose,
And join it by Mosaic art,
In graceful order, part to part,
To make the whole in beauty snit,
Not merit as complete repute
As those who with less art and pains
Can do it with their native brains?

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire upon Plagiarism, l. 109.

2 It is as difficult to appropriate the thoughts of others as it is to invent.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

3 It has come to be practically a sort of rule in literature, that a man, having once shown himself capable of original writing, is entitled thenceforth to steal from the writings of others at discretion. Thought is the property of him who can entertain it, and of him who can adequately place it.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

Every man is a borrower and a mimic, life is theatrical and literature a quotation.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

Take the whole range of imaginative literature, and we are all wholesale borrowers. In every matter that relates to invention, to use, or beauty or form, we are borrowers.

The great pleasure in life is doing what people say you cannot do.

WALTER BAKER, Literary Studies. Vol. i, p. 171.

Pleasure may perfect us as truly as prayer.

W. E. CHANNING, Note-Book: Joy.

Nor do I call pleasures idleness, or time lost, provided they are the pleasures of a rational being.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747.

Distinguish carefully between the pleasures of a man of fashion, and the vices of a scoundrel, pursue the former, and abhor the latter, like a man of sense.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

Pleasure must not, nay, cannot, be the business of a man of sense and character; but it may be,
and is, his relief, his reward.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 May, 1750.

The pleasure of life is according to the man that lives it, and not according to the work or place.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Wherefore we call pleasure the alpha and omega of a blessed life. Pleasure is our first and kindred good (Ταύτην γὰρ ἀγαθὸν πρῶτον καὶ συγγενέστατον εὖρημα.)

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIODORUS
LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 128.)

When we say, then, that pleasure is the end and aim of life, we do not mean the pleasures of the prodigal or the pleasures of sensuality. . . .
By pleasure we mean the absence of pain in the body and of trouble in the soul.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIODORUS
LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 131.)

Some sages have defin'd
Pleasure the sovereign bliss of humankind.

Pope, January and May, l. 440

IV—Pleasure: Its Sting

No more deadly curse has been given by nature to man than carnal pleasure. From it come treason and overthrow of states. There is no criminal purpose and no evil deed which the lust for pleasure will not drive men to undertake. Since nature—or some god, perhaps—has given to man nothing more excellent than his intellect, therefore this divine gift has no deadlier foe than pleasure; for where lust holds despotic sway self-control has no place, and in pleasure's realm there is not a single spot where virtue can put her foot.

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM. (CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 39.)

There is nothing so hateful and so pernicious as pleasure, since, if indulged in too much and too long, it turns the light of the soul into utter darkness. (Quocirca nihil esse tam detestabile tamque pestiferum quam voluptatem, si quidem ea, cum major esset longior, omne animi lumen exstingeret.)

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM. (CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 41.)

✓ Carnal pleasure hinders deliberation, is at war with reason, blindfolds the eyes of the mind, so to speak, and has no fellowship with virtue. (Impedit consilium voluptas, rationi inimica est, mentis ut ita dicam praestringit oculos, nec habet ullum cum virtute commercium.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 42.

2 Punish not thyself with pleasure; glut not thy sense with palative delights.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 1.

✓ 3 Pleasure (whene'er she sings, at least) 's a siren,
That lures, to stay alive, the young beginner.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 36.

Though sages may pour out their wisdom's treasure,
There's no sterner moralist than Pleasure.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 65.

✓ 4 Pleasure is the rock which most young people split upon: they launch out with crowded sails in quest of it, but without a compass to direct their course, or reason sufficient to steer the vessel.

LOUIS CHRISTENSEN, Letters, 27 March, 1747.

Every virtue, they say, has its kindred vice; every pleasure, I am sure, has its neighbouring disgrace.

✓ VII—Pleasure: The Man of Pleasure

16 A man of pleasure, in the vulgar acceptation of that phrase, means only a beastly drunkard, an abandoned whoremaster, and a profligate swearer and curser.

✓ LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 March, 1747.

The true pleasures of a gentleman are those of the table, but within the bound of moderation; good company, that is to say, people of merit; moderate play, which amuses, without any interested views; and sprightly gallant conversations with women of fashion and sense.

✓ LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 34 Feb., 1747.

No man takes pleasure truly who does not earn them by previous business; and few people do business well who do nothing else.

POE, EDGAR ALLAN

Al, much he suffered in his day
He melted with Virtue, kissed with Sin—
Wild Passion's child, and Sorrow's twin,
A meteor that had lost its way!

He walked with goblins, ghouls, and things
Unightly,—terrors and despair;
And ever in the starry airs
A dismal raven flapped its wings!

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, A Poet's Grave.

I've an idea that if Poe had been an exemplary, conventional, tax-oppressed citizen, like Longfellow, his few poems, as striking as they are, would not have made so great a stir.

ALDRICH, Letter to Stedman, 15 Nov., 1900.

Proud, mad, but not defiant,

He touched at heaven and hell.

Poe found a rare soul pliant

And rung her changes well.

Alternately his lyre,

Stranded with strings of fire,

Led earth's most happy choir,

Or flashed with Israel.

J. H. DOWNE, Poe's College at Fordham.

We are not all as shadows, we who fare
Toward one dim bourne along life's fateful way,

The more a rebel's resting place,

Compelled the people every one

To hurl, in passing there, a stone,

Each passing critic has his throw,

Nor sees, defeating his intent,

How lofty grows the monument.

I—Poetry: Definitions

Poetry is simply the most beautiful, impressive, and widely effective mode of saying things, and hence its importance.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Home.

The eternal objects of poetry, among all nations, and at all times, are actions, human actions, possessing an inherent interest in themselves, and which are to be communicated in an interesting manner by the art of the poet.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Sohrab and Rustum.

Preface.

Poetry is dew's wine, (Poet's cat vinum deorum.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Contra Academicos. Ser. I.

Did not see of the fathers in great indignation and poetry, versus deorum?

BAIRD, Arrangement of Learning. Bk. II.

1 It [poetry] was ever thought to have some participation of divineness, because it doth raise and erect the mind.

BACON, Advancement of Learning, Bk. II.

Poetry is itself a thing of God;
He made His prophets poets; and the more
We feel of people do we become Like God in love and power.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem, l. 5.

God Himself is the best Poet,
And the Real is His song.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan, St. 36.

Poetry, the language of the gods.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy.

2 Poetry, not finding the actual world exactly conformed to its idea of good and fair, seeks to accommodate the shows of things to the desires of the mind, and to create an ideal world better than the world of experience.

FRANCIS BACON, paraphrasing Aristotle. (EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Milton.)

3 Poetry should be vital—either stirring our blood by its divine movements, or snatching our breath by its divine perfection. To do both is supreme glory, to do either is enduring fame.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: Ser. I, Browning's Poetry.

4 Poetry and religion are a product of the smaller intestines.

DR. CARANTIE. (CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.)

5 There is no heroic poem in the world but is at bottom a biography, the life of a man; also it may be said, there is no life of a man, faithfully recorded, but is a heroic poem of its sort, rhymed or unrhymed.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of Scott.

The finest poetry was first experience.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

6 Poetry which has been defined as the harmonious union of man with nature.

CARLYLE, Essays: Early German Literature.

7 Poetry, therefore, we will call musical Thought. The Poet is he who thinks in that manner.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Poet.

Giving a name, indeed, is a poetic art; all poetry, if we go to that with it, is but a giving of names.

CARLYLE, Journal, 18 May, 1832.

8 Poetry, the eldest sister of all art, and parent of music.

WILLIAM CONQUEST, The Way of the World: Dedication.

Poetry, the queen of arts.

THOMAS SPAT, Ode upon the Poems of Abraham Cowley.

Poetry is an art, and chief of the fine arts: the easiest to practise in, the hardest in which to reach true excellence.

E. C. STEINMAN, Victorian Poets, Ch. 5.

9 Poems come like bows
With sails for wings;
Crossing the sky swiftly
They slip under tall bridges
Of cloud.

HILDA CONKLING, Poems.

10 Good poetry could not have been otherwise written than it is. The first time you hear it, it sounds rather as if copied out of some invisible tablet in the Eternal mind, than as if arbitrarily composed by the poet. The feeling of all great poets has accorded with this. They found the verse, not made it. The muse brought it to them.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art.

11 It does not need that a poem should be long. Every word was once a poem.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Every poem should be made up of lines that are poems.

EMERSON, Journals, Vol. VII, p. 523.

12 Finally, most of us [imagist poets] believe that concentration is the very essence of poetry.

AMY LOWELL, Imagist Poetry.

13 Only that is poetry which cleanses and mans me.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

Poetry is faith. To the poet the world is virgin soil; all is practicable; the men are ready for virtue; it is always time to do right. . . The test of the poet is the power to take the passing day and hold it up to a divine reason. . . Poetry is the consolation of mortal men.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

14 Poetry is the only verity—the expression of a sound mind speaking after the ideal, not after the apparent.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Poetry must be as new as foam and as old as the rock.

12. The true poem is the poem which expresses the deepest truth of life.

CHRISTOPHER MOSELEY, Bivalves.

13. The essence of all poetry is to be found, not in high-wrought subtlety of thought, nor in pointed cleverness of phrase, but in the depths of the heart and the most sacred feelings of the men who write.

4 Poetry is nothing but healthy speech.
H. D. THORAU, Journal, 4 Sept., 1841.

5 Whatever may have been the case in years gone by, the true use for the imaginative faculty of modern times is to give ultimate vivification to facts, to science, and to common lives, endowing them with the glows and glories and final illustriousness which belong to every real thing, and to real things only. Without that ultimate vivification—which the poet or other artist alone can give—reality would seem incomplete, and science, democracy, and life itself, finally in vain.

WALT WHITMAN, A Backward Glance O'er Travel'd Roads.

The messages of great poems to each man and woman are. Come to us on equal terms, only then can you understand us. We are no better than you, what we induce you in close, what we enjoy you may enjoy.

WALT WHITMAN, Leaves of Grass: Preface.

6 Poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings it takes its origin from emotion recollected in tranquillity.

III—Poetry: Rhyme and Reason

Still may syllables jar with time,
Still may reason war with rhyme,
Resting never!
BEN JONSON, A Fit of Rhyme Against Rhyme.
Here is rhyme, not empty of reason.
BEN JONSON, Volpone: Prologue.

Yea, surely, now it is somewhat, for now it is rhyme, whereas before it was neither rhyme nor reason.

SIR THOMAS MORE, to a friend who had written an indifferent book. (FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 287.)

Rosalind: But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orlando: Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act III, sc. 2, l.
418. Also Comedy of Errors, II, 2; Merry Wives of Windsor, I, 3. Used frequently thereafter by other writers.

Rhyme yet out of reason

JOHN SKELTON, Against Gornesche No. III,
l. 128. (c. 1520)

I was promised on a time
To have reason for my rhyme;
From that time unto this season,
I received not rhyme nor reason.

EDMOND SPENSER, Letter to His Promised Patron. An apocryphal story relates that in 1590 Queen Elizabeth ordered Lord Burghley, the Lord Treasurer, to pay Spenser a hundred pounds, and when he objected to the amount, she said, "Then give him what is reason." Whereupon Burghley let the matter rest altogether, until the poet, by a rhymed appeal to his sovereign, secured the hundred pounds. It is certain that, in February, 1591, he did secure a pension of fifty pounds.

IV—Poetry: Its Power and Beauty

Gold, glory, greed! I loved you not for long;
Wine, women, war! seductive, but not strong;
One passion lasts—the deathless heat of Song.
EDMOND VINCE COOKE, From the Book of Rhapsodies: David.

And the shamed matchers know the spell
That will enchain the years,
When the world's commingling self
In the love of man
Is the love of man.
JOHN BURNHAM, A Ballad of a Fair Boy.
To ransom our lost covenant with a rhyme,
Or, if fate still will, with a rhyme,
To clutch life's web and weave the old fable.

Like a love song, but with a rhyme,
A love song, but with a rhyme,
A love song, but with a rhyme,
A love song, but with a rhyme.

Olympian hands who sing
Divine ideas below,
Which always find us young,
And always keep us so.
RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Poet.

Shake, Homer, Job, and you,
Have made old wine-skins new.
Your energies have wrought
Stout continents of thought.

MARIANNE MOORE, That Herp You Play So Well.

God sent his Singers upon earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to heaven again.
LONGFELLOW, The Singers.

Never did Poesy appear
So full of heaven to me, as when I saw how it would pierce through pride and fear
To the lives of coarsest men.
LOWELL, Incident in a Railroad Car. St. 18.

Gently touching with the charm of poetry.
(Musea contigens cuncta lepore.)
LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, sec. 9.

We hold that the most wonderful and splendid proof of genius is a great poem produced in a civilized age
MACAULAY, Essays: On Milton

Let the crowd delight in worthless things;
for me may golden-haired Apollo minister full cups from the Castalian spring.
(Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.)
Ovid, Amores. Bk. I, eleg. 15, l. 35. This couplet was used as the motto on the title page of Shakespeare's Venus and Adonis.

Great poets need no gentle reader; they hold him captive, however unwilling or hard to please.
(Non opus est magnis placido tectore poetas; Quamlibet invitum, dissiplique tenent.)
Ovid, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. III, epim. 4, l. 9.

Thanks, Muse, to thee, for thou dost lead me comfort, thou dost come as rest, as balm, to my sorrow. Thou art guide and comrade both.
(*Gentia, Musa, tibi: nam tu salacia, prebes
Tu curas propius, tu medicina venis
Tu dux et comes es*.)
Ovid, Tristia. Bk. IV, eleg. 10, l. 117.

Drive my dead thoughts over the universe,
Like widowed doves, to quicken a new birth;
And, by the incensation of this verse,
Scatter, as from an unextinguished hearth,
A downward-pointing torch, with words among mankind!
The torch is lit, the torch is lit, the torch is lit,
The torch is lit, the torch is lit, the torch is lit,
The torch is lit, the torch is lit, the torch is lit,
The torch is lit, the torch is lit, the torch is lit.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act III, sc. 1, l. 117.

- 1 A poem round and perfect as a star.
ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 2.
- 2 Yea, is not even Apollo, with hair and harp-string of gold,
A bitter God to follow, a beautiful God to behold?
SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 7.
- 3 Your lay, heavenly bard, is to me even as sleep on the grass to the weary, as in summer heat the slaking of thirst in a dancing rill of sweet water.

Dulcis aque saliente ætini restinguere rivo.)
VIRGIL, Eclogues. No. vi, l. 45.

V—Poetry and Immortality

- 4 No slightest golden rhyme he wrote
That held not something men must quote;
Thus by design or chance did he
Drop anchors to posterity.
T. B. ALDRICH, A Hint from Herrick
- Only write a dozen lines, and rest on your oars forever
(EMERSON, Journals Vol. vii, p. 539.)
- I would rather risk for future fame upon one lyric than upon ten volumes
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES
- One simile that solitary shines
In the dry Desert of a thousand lines,
Or lengthen'd thought, that gleams thro' many a page,
Has sanctified whole poems for an age.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. II,
ep. i, l. 111.
- 5 Sappho survives, because we sing her songs;
And Æschylus, because we read his plays!
ROBERT BROWNING, Cleon.
- 6 Poets alone are sure of immortality; they are the truest diviners of nature.
BULWER-LUTYEN, Castiglione. Essay 27.
- 7 Like him I strive in hope my rhymes
May keep my name a little while,—
O child, who knows how many times
We two have made the angels smile!
WILLIAM CANTON, A New Poet.
- 8 Poets by Death are conquer'd but the wit
Of poets triumphs over it.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Praise of Poetry. Ode
4, l. 13.
- 9 Even the gods must go;
Only the lofty Rhyme
Not countless years o'erthrow,—
Not long array of time.
ALFRED DOBSON, Art Poetica.

- 10 His instant thought the poet spoke,
And filled the age his fame;
An inch of ground the lightning strook
But lit the sky with flame.
EMERSON, The Poet.
- 11 Let no one honor me with tears, nor bury me with lamentation. Why? Because I fly from lip to lip, living in the mouths of men.
(Nemo me lacrymis decoret nec fletibus fletu Faxit. Cur? volito vivus per ora virum.)
ENRIUS Part of his epitaph. (CICERO, Tusculan-arum Disputationum Bk. I, ch. 13, sec. 34.)
- I have reared a monument more enduring than bronze and loftier than the royal pyramids, one that no wasting rain, no unavailing north wind can destroy, no, not even the unending years nor the flight of time itself. I shall not wholly die. The greater part of me shall escape oblivion (Exegi monumentum ære perennis Regalique ætu pyramidum altius, Quod non imber edax, non Aqualis impotens Possit diruere aut innumerabiles Annorum series et fuga temporis. Non omnis moriatur, multaque pars mei Vitabit Libitina.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. III, ode 30, l. 1.
- I've reared a monument alone
More durable than brass or stone;
Whose cloudy summit is more hid
Than regal height of pyramid.
HORACE, Odes, III, 30, l. 1. (Coles, tr.)
- Now have I finished a work which neither the wrath of Jove, nor fire, nor steel, nor all-consuming time can destroy. Welcome the day which can destroy only my body in ending my uncertain life. In my better part I shall be raised to immortality above the lofty stars, and my name shall never die.
OVID, Metamorphoses Bk. xv, l. 271.
- Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets No. 19.
- 12 Homer's harp is broken and Horace's lyre is unstrung, and the voices of the great singers are hushed; but their songs—their songs are immortal. O friend! what moots it to them or to us who gave this epic or that lyric to immortality? The singer belongs to a year, his song to all time
EUGENE FRAIN, Love Affairs of a Bibliomane,
p. 99.
- What difference does it make who spoke the words? They were uttered for the world. (Quid interest quis dixit? Omnibus dixit.)
SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xiv, 18.
- Only to Beauty Time belongs;
Men may perish, But not their songs.
LOUIS GIBBARD, Only to Beauty.
- 13 Singing and rejoicing,
As eys since time began,
The dying earth's last poet
Shall be the earth's last man.
ANASTASIUS GRÜN, The Last Poet.

1 Thou shalt not all die; for while Love's fire shines

Upon his altar, men shall read thy lines.
ROBERT HERICK, Upon Himself.

2 In his own verse the poet still we find,
In his own page his memory lives enshrined,
As in their amber sweets the smothered bees,—

As the fair cedar, fallen before the breeze,
Lies self-embalmed amidst the mouldering trees.

O. W. HOLMES, Bryant's Seventieth Birthday.

3 Where go the poet's lines?—

Answer, ye evening tapers!

Ye auburn locks, ye golden curls,

Speak from your folded papers!

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet's Lot.

4 Still breathes the love, still glows the ardor imparted to the lyre by the Æolian girl.
(Spirat adhuc amor, Vivuntque commissi calores Æolice fidibus puellæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 10. Referring to Sappho.

The poet remains, dismember him as you will.
(Invenias etiam disiecta membra poetæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 62.

5 Little snatch of ancient song,
What has made thee live so long?
Flying on thy wings of rhyme
Lightly down the depths of time.

W. E. H. LECKY, On an Old Song.

All things perish, and the strongest
Often do not last the longest;
The stately ship is seen no more,
The fragile skill attains the shore;
And while the great and wise decay,
And all their trophies pass away,
Some sudden thought, some careless rhyme,
Still floats above the wrecks of Time.

W. E. H. LECKY, On an Old Song.

The birds sublime,
Whose distant footsteps echo
Through the corridors of Time.
LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done.

6 Doth it not thrill thee, Poet,
Dead and dust though thou art,
To feel how 'I press thy tingling
Close to my heart?

REUBEN LE GALLIENET, *The Passionate Reader
to His Poet*.

Like the river, swift and clear,
Flows his song through many a heart.
LONGFELLOW, After Beethoven. St. 11.

7 O ye dead Poets, who are living still Immortal in your verse, though life be fled,
And ye, O living Poets, who are dead
Through ye are living, is the poet's lot.

Tell me if in the darkest hours of ill,
With drops of anguish falling fast and red
From the sharp crown of thorns upon your head,

Ye were not glad your errand to fulfil?

LONGFELLOW, The Poets.

8 The Poet is the only potentate;
His sceptre reaches o'er remotest zones;
His thought remembered and his golden tones
Shall, in the ears of nations uncreate,
Roll on for ages and reverberate
When Kings are dust beside forgotten thrones.

LLOYD MINTON, The Sovereigns.

9 Lap me in soft Lydian airs,

Married to immortal verse.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 136.

Wisdom married to immortal verse.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 536.

10 Remember me a little then, I pray,

The idle singer of an empty day.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Barthly Paradyse: Apology.

11 Gowns will be rent to rags and gems and gold broken to fragments, but the fame which song brings lasts for ever. (Scindentur vestes, gemme frangentur et aurum; Carmina quam tribuent, fama perennis erit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 61.

Yea, though hard rocks and though the tooth of the enduring ploughshare perish with passing time, song is untouched by death. (Ergo, cum silices, cum dens patientis aratri Depereant ævo, carmina morte carent.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 31.

The poet's work endures. (Durat opus vatium.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 29.

12 'Twas he that ranged the words at random flung,
Pierced the fair pearls and them together strung PILPAY, Arvor-i Sukaili (Eastwick, tr.)

Go boldly forth, my simple lay,
Whose accents flow with artless ease,
Like orient pearls at random strung.
HAFFZ, Song. (Sir William Jones, tr.)

These pearls of thought in Persian gulf were bred,
Each softly lustrous as a rounded moon;
The diver Omar plucked them from their bed,
FitzGerald strung them on an English thread
J. R. LEWELL, in a Copy of Omar Khayyam

Jewels five-words-long
That on the stretch'd forefinger of all Time
Sparkle for ever.

TENNISON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 355.

It came to him in rainbow dreams,
Blent with the wisdom of the sages,
Of spirit and of passion born;
In words as lustrous as the moon
He prisoned it, and now it gleams
A jewel shining through the ages.
L. M. MURTAGHAN, The Poet's Thought.

Call it not vain:—they do not err
Who say that when the poet dies
Mute Nature mourns her worshipper,
And celebrates his obsequies.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 1.

I would rather be remembered by a song than by a victory.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dream-korp: Men of Letters.

There is no mere earthly immortality that I envy so much as the poet's. If your name is to live at all, it is so much better to have it live in people's hearts than only in their brains!

How best to build the imperishable lay.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Carmen Nuptiale: Proem.

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 10.

To have the deep Poetic heart
Is more than all poetic fame.

TENNISON, The New Timon.

Empires dissolve and peoples disappear:
Song passes not away.
Captains and conquerors leave a little dust,
And kings a dubious legend of their reign;
The swords of Cæsars, they are less than rust:

The poet doth remain.

WILLIAM WATSON, Lacrimæ Musarum.

VI—Poetry and Fame

How many, most famous while they lived,
are utterly forgotten for want of writers!
(Quam multos clarissimos suis temporibus vires scriptorum inops deleuit oblivio!)

BORTHUIS, Philosophicæ Consolationis. Bk. ii, prosa 7.

Verse, like the laurel, its immortal meed,
Should be the guerdon of a noble deed.

COWPER, Cherity, l. 292.

 Ofttimes with unseemly verse poets debase noble deeds. (Fere scriptores carmine lædo Splendida facta linunt.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epist. 1, l. 236.

9
 Their name, their years, spelt by th' unletter'd Muse.

GRAY, Elegy in a Country Church-yard. St. 20.

10
 'Tis the Muse forbids the hero worthy of renown to perish; she enthrones him in the heavens. (Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori: Cælo Musa beatæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 8, l. 28.

11
 Song forbids victorious deeds to die.

SCHILLER, The Artists.

 Many heroes lived before Agamemnon; but all are overwhelmed in unending night, unwept, unknown, because they lacked a sacred bard.

(Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona

Multi; sed omnes inlacrimabiles

Urgentur ignotique longa

Nocte, carent quia vate sacro.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, st. 7.

13
 Before Atreides men were brave:

But ah! oblivion dark and long

Has locked them in a tearless grave,

For lack of consecrating song.

HORACE, Odes, iv, 9. (Conington, tr.)

14
 Many valiant chiefs of old

Greatly lived and died before

Agamemnon, Grecian bold,

Waged the ten years' famous war.

But their names, unsung, unwept,

Unrecorded, lost and gone,

Long in endless night have slept,

And shall now no more be known.

HORACE, Odes, iv, 9. (Swift, tr.)

15
 Brave men were living before Agamemnon

And since, exceeding valorous and sage,

A good deal like him too, but quite the same none;

But then they shone not on the poet's page.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 5.

 Vain was the Chief's, the Sage's pride!

They had no Poet, and they died.

In vain they schemed, in vain they bled!

They had no Poet, and are dead.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 13.

17
 They built with bronze and gold and brawn,

The inner Vision still denied;

Their conquests . . . Ask oblivion! . . .

"They had no poet, and they died."

DON MARQUIS, They Had No Poet.

 Past ruined Ilion Helen lives,

Alceste rises from the shades;

Verse calls them forth; 'tis verse that gives

Immortal youth to mortal maids.

 Soon shall Oblivion's deepening veil

Hide all the peopled hills you see,

The gay, the proud, while lovers hail

These many summers you and me.

W. S. LAMOND, Past Ruined Ilion.

 How mighty, how sacred is the poet's task!

He snatches all things from destruction and gives immortality to mortal men.

(O Sacer et magnus vatum labor! omnia fatis Eripis et populis donas mortalibus ævum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 980.

21
 Song makes great deeds immortal, cheats the tearful,

And hands down fame to ages yet to come.

A Poet without Love were a physical and metaphysical impossibility.

CARLYLE, Essays: Burm.

A poet not in love is out of season;
He must have a lay-figure.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

Test of the poet is knowledge of love,
For Eros is older than Saturn or Jove.

EMERSON, Quotations: Caesars.

Oh love will make a dog howl in rhyme.

FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1.

Poetry has not often been worse employed than in dignifying the amorous fury of a raving girl!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 15.

Touchstone: Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Audrey: I do not know what "poetical" is:
is it honest in deed and word? is it a true thing?

Touchstone: No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 3,
l. 15.

Never dost poet touch a pen to write
Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 346.

But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxii.

Song, made in lieu of many ornaments
With which my love should duly have been deck'd

EDMUND SPENSER, Epithalamion, l. 427.

Had his fingers been able to toy with her hair
Would they then have written the verses fair?

JAMES THOMSON, Art. St. 5.

If Thought and Love desert us, from that day
Let us break off all commerce with the Muse.

Tour*. No. 48

VIII—Poetry and Poverty

A man should live in a garret aloof,
And have few friends, and go poorly clad,
With an old hat stopping the chink in the roof,
To keep the Goddes constant and glad.

THOMAS BAILEY ALBANY, The Fights of the Goddesses.

For who sings ceaselessly to merry a note
As he that cannot chop or change a groat?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Shepherd's Content.
St. 39.

Poets evermore are starved of gold.

E. B. SNOWDEN, Marston Leigh. Bk. v, l. 1199.

Poverty is the Muse's patrimony.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
I, sec. 2, mem. 3, sub. 15.

It is not poetry that makes men poor,
For few do write that were not so before,
And those that have writ best, had they been rich,

Had ne'er been clapp'd with a poetic itch.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l.
440.

Let such forego the poet's sacred name,
Who rack their brains for lucre, not for fame.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 177.

No Muse is proof against a golden shower.
SAMUEL GARTH, Clarendon, l. 14.

The man who weds the sacred Muse
Disdains all mercenary views.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. III, l. 919.

Feel you the barren flattery of a rhyme?
Can poets soothe you, when you pine for bread,

By winding myrtle round your ruin'd shed?
GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. i.

If I'd as much money as I could tell,
I never would cry my songs to sell.

Quoting THOMAS SEWARD. See 911:1.

"My father discouraged me (from becoming a poet) by ridiculing my performances, and telling me verse-makers were generally beggars."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. I.

And thou, sweet Poetry, thou loveliest maid,
Still first to fly where sensual joys invade; ...
Thou source of all my bliss and all my woe,
That found'st me poor at first, and keep'st me so.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 407.

Could a man live by it, it were not unpleasant employment to be a poet.

GOLDSMITH, Letter to H. Goldsmith, Feb., 1759.

Poets, Being poor,
Must use words with economy.
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, Lucius.

1 Poets, henceforth for pensions need not care,
When call you beggars, you may call them
liars,

Veres are grown such merchantable ware,
That now for Sonnets, sellers are, and buyers.

See JOHN HARRINGTON, A Comfort for Poor Poets, 1633. (Epigrams Bk. i, epig. 41.)

2 In rhyme, fine tinkling rhyme and flowing verse,
With now and then some sense; and he was paid
for it,

Regarded and rewarded; which few poets are nowadays.

(Facit indignatio versum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 79.

5 And poets by their sufferings grow,—
As if there were no more to do,

To make a poet excellent,

But only want and discontent.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts. l. 437.

Most wretched men

Are cradled into poetry by wrong;

They learn in suffering what they teach in song.

SEDLICK, Julian and Modesto, l. 544.

6 Dreaming on nought but idle poetry,
That fruitless and unprofitable art,
Good unto none; but least to the professors.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 1.

7 You who compose sublime poetry in a cramped attic, that you may come forth worthy of an ivy wreath and an ugly statue.
Beyond this, you have no hope of anything.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 37.

Let such as have not got a passport from nature be content with happiness, and leave to the poet
the unrivalled possession of his misery, his garret, and his fame.

GOLDSMITH, The Poet. (Critical Review, 1759.)

8 Poverty! thou source of human art,
Thou great inspirer of the poet's song!

EDWARD MOORE, Hymn to Poverty.

Necessity may be the mother of lucrative invention, but it is the death of poetical.

In a foolish world

The poet would be king.

WILLIAM GREENE, Demos.

11 The bard whom pilfer'd pastorals renown,
Who turns a Persian tale for half-a-crown,
Just writes to make his barrenness appear,
And strains from hard-bound brains eight lines a year.

Pope, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 179.

12 For ne'er

Was flattery lost on Poet's ear;

A simple race! they waste their toil

For the vain tribute of a smile.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Can. iv, st. 35.

Friendship, esteem, and fair regard,

And praise, the poet's best reward!

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 27.

13 Princess, inscribe beneath my name,

"He never begged, he never sighed,

He took his medicine as it came";

For this the poets lived—and died.

J. C. SQUIRE, Ballade of the Poetic Life.

14 And mighty Poets in their misery dead.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.

St. 17.

I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous Boy,

The sleepless Soul that perished in his pride;

Of him who walked in glory and in joy

Following his plough, along the mountain-side:

By our own spirits are we deluded:

We Poets in our youth begin in gladness;

But thereof come in the end despondency and madness.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.

Poetry has never brought in enough to buy shoes.

lating Homer.

1 Time was, ere yet in these degenerate days
Ignoble themes obtain'd ignoble praise,
When sense and wit with poesy allied,
No fabled graces, flourish'd side by side;
From the same fount their inspiration drew,
And, rear'd by taste, bloom'd fairer as they grew.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 103.

Yet Truth sometimes will lend her noblest fires,
And decorate the verse herself inspires.
This fact, in Virtue's name, let Crabbe attest,— Though Nature's sternest painter, yet the best.

Rhymes ere he wakes, and prints before Term ends,

Obliged by hunger and request of friends.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 37.

9 Wheresoe'er I turn my view,

All is strange, yet nothing new:

Endless labour all along,

Endless labour to be wrong:

Phrase that Time has flung away,

Uncouth words in disarray,

Trick'd in antique ruff and bonnet,

Ode, and elegy, and sonnet.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines in Imitation of a Well-Known Author. (BOSWELL, Life, 18 Sept., 1777. Croker's note.) A parody of Thomas Warton.

2 The fatal facility of the octosyllabic verse.

BYRON, The Corsair: Preface.

3 Trôchee trips from long to short;
From long to long in solemn sort

Slow Spondee stalks, strong foot! yet ill able

Ever to come up with dactyl trisyllable.

Iambics march from short to long;—

With a leap and a bound the swift Anapaests throng,

One syllable long, with one short at each side,

Amphibrachys hastes with a stately stride;—

First and last being long, middle short, Amphimacer

Strikes his thundering hoofs like a proud high-bred Racer

DRYDEN, Aeneid: Dedication.

Some force whole regions, in despite

O geography, to change their site;

Make former times shake hands with latter,

And that which was before come after.

But those that write in rhyme still make

The one verse for the other's sake;

For one for sense, and one for rhyme,

I think 's sufficient at one time

There have been many most excellent poets that never versified, and now swarm many versifiers that need never answer to the name of poets.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii.

One may be a poet without versing, and a versifier without poetry.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie. Pt. ii.

Men endowed with highest gifts,
The vision and the faculty divine;
Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 78.

XIV—Poetry and Prose

Who all in raptures their own works rehearse,
And drawl out measur'd prose, which they call verse.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Independence, l. 295

And with poetic trappings grace thy prose.

10

For all those pretty knacks you compose,
Alas, what are they but poems in prose?

SIR JOHN DENHAM, To the Five Members of the Hon. House of Commons, l. 41.

I wish our clever young poets would remember my homely definitions of prose and poetry; that is, prose,—words in their best order; poetry,—the best words in their best order.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 12 July, 1827.

Poetry has done enough when it charms, but prose must also convince.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 166.

A kind of hobbling prose,
That limped along, and tinkled in the close.
DRYDEN, To the Earl of Roscommon, l. 13.

13

Our poetry in the eighteenth century was prose; our prose in the seventeenth, poetry.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

Truth is enough for prose:
Calmly it goes
To tell just what it knows.

For verse, skill will suffice—
Delicate, nice
Casting of verbal dice.

Poetry, men attain
By subtler pain
More flagrant in the brain—

An honesty unfeigned,
A heart unchained,
A madness well restrained.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, At the Mermaid Cafeteria.

15

And he whose fustian 's so sublimely bad,
It is not poetry, but prose run mad.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 187.

Who says in verse what others say in prose.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 1, l. 202.

16

One merit of poetry few persons will deny: it says more and in fewer words than prose.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Poets.

There is in Poesy a decent pride,
Which well becomes her when she speaks to Prose,
Her younger sister.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 64.

XV—Poetry Old and New

18

And Marlowe, Webster, Fletcher, Ben,
Whose fire-hearts sowed our furrows when
The world was worthy of such men.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 400

God's prophets of the Beautiful,
These Poets were.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 292.

1 You speak as one who fed on poetry.
BUTLER-LITTLETON, Archæol. Act 1, sc. 1.

2 Oh, the bards of olden days, blessed bards in song-craft skilled,
Happy herchemen of the Muses, when the field was yet unfilled.

CHORICUS. (ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric Bk III, ch.
14, sec. 4. Sandys, tr.)

3 In every cell and every blooming bower
The sweetness of old lays is hovering still.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Whither Is Gone the Wisdom and the Power?

4 I love the old melodious lays
Which softly melt the ages through,
The songs of Spenser's golden days,
Arcadian Sidney's silver phrase,
Sprinkling our noon of time with freshest morning dew

WHITTIER, Proem

5 Subtract from many modern poets all that may be found in Shakespeare, and trash will remain

C C COLTON, Lacon No 568.

6 My Muse is rightly of the English strain,
That cannot long one fashion entertain.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea

7 You admire, Vacerra, only the poets of old and praise only those who are dead. Pardon me, Vacerra, if I think death too great a price to pay for your praise.

MARTIAL, Epigrams Bk. viii, ep. 49.

8 It stands on record, that in Richard's times
A man was hang'd for very honest rhymes

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Satires Bk. ii, sat.
1 l 145 Referring, perhaps, to John Ball, reputed author of "When Adam delved and Eve sown, Who was then the gentleman?", hanged
during the reign of Richard II. See ANCESTRY

9 Poets that lasting marble seek Must come in Latin or in Greek.

EDMUND WALLER, Of English Poets

10 Old-fashioned poetry but choicely good
WALTON, The Compleat Angler Pt. I, ch. 4.

It was written in the homespun verse of that time and people.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

11 Come Muse migrate from Greece and Ionia, Cross our phrase those miserably overpaid accountants.

Pleasant "Removing" and "To Let" on the rocks of yonder rocky Remembrance.

For know a better, fainter, better of them,
a wide, untold domain awaits, demands
you.

WALL-WATERMAN, Song of the Republic Song 1.

POETS

I—Poets: Definitions

1 Poets are all who love, who feel great truths,
And tell them

P J BAKLEY, Festus: Another and a Better World

Many are poets who have never penn'd
Their inspiration, and perchance the best
Many are poets but without the name,
For what is poetry but to create
From overfeeling good or ill, and aim
At an external life beyond our fate?

BYRON, The Prophecy of Dante Canto iv, l 1

12 For poets (bear the word),
Half poets even, are still whole democrats
E B BROWNING, Aurora Leigh Bk iv, l 314

13 All great poets have been men of great knowledge

BRYANT, Lectures on Poetry Relation of Poetry to Time and Place

No man was ever yet a great poet without being at the same time a profound philosopher

S T COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria Ch 15

14 He that works and does some Poem not he that merely says one, is worthy of the name of Poet

CARLYLE, *Cromwell's Letters and Speeches
Introduction*

How does the poet speak to men with power, but by being still more a man than they

CARLYLE, Essays Burns

It is a man's sincerity and depth of vision that makes him a poet

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship Lect. iii

15 Most joyful let the Poet be,
It is through him that all men see

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, The Poet of the Old and New Times

16 Party Poets are like wasps, who dart Death to themselves, but to their foes but smart

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper, l 11

17 A poet is the painter of the soul
ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character Ch 20

The poet must be alike polished by an intercourse with the world as with the studies of taste, one to whom labour is negligence, refinement a science, and art a nature

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Vers de Société

18 Poets should be law-givers; that is, the bold cat lyric imagination should not chide and inspire, but should announce and lead the civil code, and the day's work.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Of Prudence.

The sign and credentials of the poet are that he expresses that which he may have foretold

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet

1 What are our poets, take them as they fall, Good, bad, rich, poor, much read, not read at all?

Then and their works in the same class you'll find—

They are the mere wastepaper of mankind.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Paper.

2 The poet is the truest historian.

JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, History.

We call those poets who are first to mark
Through earth's dull mist the coming of the dawn,—

Who see in twilight's gloom the first pale spark,
While others only note that day is gone.

O. W. HOLMES, Memorial Verses: Shakespeare.

Poets, the first instructors of mankind.

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 449. (Dillon, tr.)

3 The true poet is all-knowing! he is an actual world in miniature.

NOVALIS, Fragment (Carlyle, tr.)

4 A poet is that which by the Greeks is called κατ' ἔκθερ, ὁ ποιητής, a maker, or a feigner;
... from the word ποιεῖν, which signifies to make, or feign. Hence he is called a poet

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Poeta.

5 If men will impartially, and not asquint, look toward the offices and function of a poet, they will easily conclude to themselves the impossibility of any man's being the good poet without first being a good man.

BEN JONSON, Volpone: Dedication.

6 A poet's soul must contain the perfect shape of all things good, wise and just. His body must be spotless and without blemish. His life pure, his thoughts high, his studies intense.

AROUSINE BERRELL, Obituary Dedications: Second Series: Milton.

7 They shall be accounted poet kings
Who simply tell the most heart-easing things.

JOHN KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 267.

8 Nothing is more certain than that great poets are no sudden prodigies but slow results.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Chaucer

9 He who would not be frustrate of his hope to write well hereafter in laudable things ought himself to be a true poem.

MILTON, Apology for Smectymnians.

10 He who would write heroic poems should make his whole life a heroic poem.

CARLYLE, Essays: Schiller.

11 A poet is a nightingale who sits in darkness and sings to cheer its own solitude with sweet songs.

SHELLEY, A Defence of Poetry.

12 Poets are the hierophants of an unapproachable inspiration; the mirrors of the gigantic shadows which futurity casts upon the present.

SHELLEY, A Defence of Poetry.

13 The tadpole poet will never grow into anything bigger than a frog; not though in that stage of development he should puff and blow himself till he bursts with windy adulation at the heels of the laureled ox.

SWINFURD, Under the Microscope.

II—Poets: Apothegms

14 An eager meagre servant of the Muses.
(Μουσῶν δούλος ἐκπνέων)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 909.

15 They all are off their native heath—

Shake, Mullaery and Go-ethe.

H. C. BUNNEN, Shake, Mullaery and Go-ethe

16 When people say, "I've told you fifty times,"

They mean to scold, and very often do;

When poets say, "I've written fifty rhymes,"

They make you dread that they'll recite them too

BYRON, Don Juan Canto i, st. 108.

17 Spare the poet for his subject's sake.

COWPER, Charity, l. 636.

18 They best can judge a poet's worth,

Who oft themselves have known

The pangs of a poetic birth

By labours of their own

COWPER, To Dr. Darwin St. 2.

19 Poets' not in Arabia alone

You get beheld when your skill is gone

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, The World's Way.

20 Idleness, that is the curse of other men, is the nurse of poets

D'ARCY CRESSWELL, The Poet's Progress.

21 All men are poets at heart.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
Literary Ethics*.

22 Every man will be a poet if he can; otherwise a philosopher or man of science. This proves the superiority of the poet.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 11 April, 1852.

23 The experience of each new age requires a new confession, and the world seems always waiting for its poet.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

24 The poet's business is not to save the soul of man but to make it worth saving.

JAMES ELROY FLECKER, (UNTERMEYER, Modern British Poetry, p. 533.)

25 Those who err follow the poets.

The Koran. Ch. 26. The Oriental belief is that poets are prompted by devils with such straps of angels' converse as they can hear by stealth.

Next to being a great poet, is the power of understanding one.

LOWELL, Hyperion. Bk ii, ch. 3.

He is upbraidingly called a Poet, as if it were a most contemptible nickname.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Jam Litera Sordent.

Slight not the songsmith.

WILLIAM WATSON, England My Mother. Pt. i.

He does not write whose verses no one reads.
(Non scribit, cujus carmina nemo legit)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 9, l. 2.

Enthusiast, go, unstring the lyre;
In vain thou sing'st if none admire,

How sweet so'er the strain.
WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, The Enthusiast.

God's most candid critics are those of his children whom he has made poets.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH THE YOUNGER, Oxford Poetry, 1914: Preface.

The poet who does not revere his art, and believe in its sovereignty, is not born to wear the purple.

E. C. STEDMAN, Poets of America Ch. 9.

For pointed satire I would Buckhurst choose,
The best good man with the worst-natured muse.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, An allusion to HORACE, Satires. Bk i, sat. 10, l. 64.

Thou best humour'd man with the worst humour'd muse.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation: Postscript, last line. Quoted. Referring to Caleb Whitefoord.

But you're our partic'lar author, you're our patriot and our friend,

You're the poet of the cuss-word an' the swear.
EDGAR WALLACE, Tommy to his Laureate. Referring to Rudyard Kipling.

III—Poets: Born, Not Made

Sure there are poets which did never dream
Upon PARTASSUS, nor did taste the stream
Of Helicon; we therefore may suppose
Those made not poets, but the poets those.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill.

Each year new consuls and proconsuls are made; but not every year is a king or a poet born.
(Consules sunt quotannis et novi proconsules: Solus aut rex aut poeta non quotannis nascitur.)

FLAVIUS, De Qualitate Vite. Fragment 8.
Hence the proverb, "Poeta nascitur, non fit," the poet is born, not made.

And, "Therefore, is an old proverb, Ovidio St. poets' election."

SIR PHILIP SHELTON, Apology for Poets. (1694)

A good poet's made as well as born.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare.

The god makes not the poet; but
The thesis, vice-versa put,

Should Hebrew-wise be understood:

And means, the poet makes the god.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. i, l. 62.

No man is so born a poet but that he needs to be regenerated into a poetic artist.

JOHN STERLING, Essays and Tales: Thoughts and Images.

IV—Poets: Their Madness

All poets are mad

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Democritus to the Reader.

For that fine madness still he did retain,
Which rightly should possess a poet's brain.

DRAYTON, To Henry Reynolds: Of Poets and Poets, l. 109

The man is mad, or else he's writing verses. (Aut insanit homo aut versus facit)

HORACE, Satires Bk ii, sat. 7, l. 117. The line is spoken by Davus, Horace's slave, referring to his master's eccentric habits.

Perhaps no person can be a poet, or even enjoy poetry, without a certain unsoundness of mind

MACAULAY, Essays: Milton.

Prince of sweet songs made out of tears and fire.
A harlot was thy nurse, a God thy sire;

Shame soiled thy song, and song assailed thy shame

But from thy feet now death has washed the mire,

Love reads out first, at head of all our choir,
Villon, our sad had glad mad brother's name.

SWINBURNE, Ballad of François Villon: Envoy.

Mad verse, sad verse, glad verse and bad verse.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET. Title of book. (1644)

How sad and mad and bad it was,
But then, how it was sweet!

ROBERT BROWNING, Confessions.

V—Poets: Their Inspiration

Sheddering they drew her garments off—and found

A robe of sackcloth next the smooth, white skin.

Sack, poets, is your bride, the Muse! young, shy,

Radiant, adorn'd outside; a hidden ground
Of thought and of austerity within

MATTHEW ARMOUR, Authenticity of Poetry.

- 1 The world but feels the present's spell,
The poet feels the past as well;
Whatever men have done, might do,
Whatever thought, might think it too.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Bacchanalia. Pt. II, l. 65.
Nest deep the Poet sees, but wide.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Resignation, l. 212.
Poets, who bear buckets to the well
Of ampler draught.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 135.
2 For as nightingales do upon glow-worms feed,
So poets live upon the living light.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.
3 I cast my nets in many streams
To catch the silver fish of dreams.
KARL WILSON BAKER, Poet Songs.
4 The "vision and the faculty divine"
Come not by dreaming; he whose eye is clear
To read the present, reads the future sign,
The truest seer.
HENRY MONTAGU BUTLER, The Seer. See 1529:8.
5 Homer's words are as costly and admirable to Homer as Agamemnon's victories are to Agamemnon.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.
6 Like a Chimborazo under the line, running up from a torrid base through all the climates of the globe.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.
With a poet, as with a mountain, the altitude is reckoned by the highest point.
R. U. JOHNSON, Poems of Fifty Years: Preface.
7 Do not judge the poet's life to be sad because of his plaintive verses and confessions of despair. Because he was able to cast off his sorrows into these writings, therefore went he outward free and serene to new experiences.
EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 520.
8 Slow comes the verse that real woe inspires:
Grief unaffected suits but ill with art,
Or bowing numbers with a bleeding heart.
THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, on the Death of Mr. Addison, l. 6.
9 'Tis one of the mysteries of our condition that the poet seems sometimes to have a mere talent,—a chamber in his brain into which an angel flies with divine messages, but the man, apart from this privilege, commonplace. . . .
Poets are not to be seen.
EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 340.
10 Turnpike is one thing and blue sky another.
Let the poet, of all men, stop with his inspiration. The inexorable rule in the muse's court, either inspiration or silence, compels

the bard to report only his supreme moments.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

11 If bright the sun, he tarries,
All day his song is heard;
And when he goes he carries
No more baggage than a bird.
EMERSON, The Poet.

Ever the Poet from the land
Steers his bark and trims his sail;
Right out to sea his courses stand,
New worlds to find in pinance trail.
EMERSON, Quatrains: Poet.

Tell men what they knew before,
Paint the prospect from their door,
Give to barrows, trays, and pans
Grace and glimmer of romance.
EMERSON, Quatrains.

12 Whatever can happen to man has happened so often that little remains for fancy or invention. We have all been born; we have most of us been married; and so many have died before us, that our deaths can supply but few materials for a poet.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, II, 408. (Hawkins, ed.)

Knowledge of the subject is to the poet what durable materials are to the architect.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, II, 408.

To tell of disappointment and misery, to thicken
the darkness of futurity, and perplex the labyrinth of uncertainty, has always been a delicious employment of the poets
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, IV, 110.

13 A stewed poet? he doth sit like an unbraced drum, with one of his heads beaten out; for that you must note, a poet hath two heads as a drum has. one for making, the other repeating!

BEN-JONSON, The Staple of News: Induction.

14 Bards of Passion and of Mirth.
Ye have left your souls on earth!
Ye have souls in heaven too,
Double-lived in regions new.

JOHN KEATS, Ode. Written on the blank page before Beaumont and Fletcher's The Fair Maid of the Inn, and thus addressed to these bards in particular.

15 As fire is kindled by fire, so is a poet's mind kindled by contact with a brother poet.
JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 16.

16 Content, with meagre scrip and pilgrim staff,
Singing he journeys through the changeable years;
At whiles, he stays to laugh with those that laugh;
Anon, his way lies through the Vale of Tears.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Singing Pilgrim.

And, dear, he sings of nightingales
Or, blind, he sings of stars.
MARY SHERRILL LORRA, The Poet.

9 Nine-tenths of the best poetry of the world has been written by poets less than thirty years old; a great deal more than half of it has been written by poets under twenty-five.
H. L. MONTGOMERY, Poeticians. Ser. III, p. 147.

10 Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start;

Who, through long days of labor,
And nights devoid of ease,
Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.
LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done.

11 Poets have forgotten that the first lesson of literature, no less than of life, is the learning how to burn your own smoke; that the way to be original is to be healthy; . . . and that to make the common marvellous . . . is the test of genius.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Widens: Chaucer.

12 A poet, soaring in the high region of his fancies,
With his garland and singing robes about him.

MILTON, Church Government. Bk. II, Intro.

13 Through moving waters of his mind
He daily drags thought's seine along,
Hoping within its mesh to find
A song!

J. R. MORELAND, The Poet.

14 Dreamer of dreams, born out of my due time,
Why should I strive to set the crooked straight?

Let it suffice me that my murmuring rhyme
Beats with light wing against the ivory gate,
Telling a tale not too important
To those who in the sleepy region stay,
Led by the singer of an empty day.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Earthly Paradise: Apology.

15 Whether verses are good for aught, I doubt;
They have always been my bane. . . . Would that the Muses had looked away when I began to write, that Pegasus refused to aid me when my attempts were vain. (As prosing, distinctly, and with certain success. . . .) A verbal volume of the Muses' Muse, . . .
The Muse of the Muses' Muse, . . .
The Muse of the Muses' Muse, . . .

written. . . .

aspiration. (Est deus in nobis, et sunt com-mercium nobis: Sedulus æthere spiritus ille venit.)

OVIN, Ap. Augustus. Bk. II, l. 349.

There is a god within us, it is when he stirs that our bosoms warm, it is his impulse that sows the seeds of inspiration. (Est deus in nobis; agitante calcinabit ille: Impetus ille sacre seminis mensis habet.)

OVIN, Fasti. Bk. VI, l. 5.

17 To build from matter is sublimely great,
But gods and poets only can create.

WILLIAM PITT, To the Unknown Author of the Battle of the Sexes.

18 All good poets, epic as well as lyric, compose their beautiful poems not as works of art, but because they are inspired and possessed.

PLATO, Ion. Sec. 533.

Poets utter great and wise things which they do not themselves understand.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. II, sec. 5.

19 If I could dwell Where Israel

Hath dwelt, and he where I,—

He might not sing so wildly well

A mental melody,

While a bolder note than his might swell

From my lyre within the sky.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Israel.

20 While pensive Poets painful vigils keep,
Sleepless themselves to give their readers sleep.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. I, l. 93

21 Curs'd be the verse, how well soe'er it flow,
That tends to make one worthy man my foe,
Give Virtue scandal, Innocence a fear,
Or from the soft-eyed virgin steal a tear!

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 283.

22 Where stray ye, Muses! in what lawn or grove, . . .

In those fair fields where sacred Isis glides,
Or else where Cam his winding vales divides?

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 23

Rise, ho! and sing the Man of Ross.

POPE, Moral Essays: Epit. III, l. 230. The Man of Ross was John Kyrie, of Herefordshire.

23 Verse comes from Heav'n, like inward Light,
More human pains can ne'er come by't;

The god, not we, the poem makes;

We only tell folks what he speaks.

POPE, Epistle to Rector of St. Andrew's, l. 41.

24 Sweet the cadence of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter,

And never was poem yet writ, but the meaning outlasted the metre.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra.

25 These verses are the only ones that I have ever written. . . .

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra.

26 These verses are the only ones that I have ever written. . . .

The degree in which a poet's imagination dominates reality is, in the end, the exact measure of his importance and dignity.

GEORGE SANTARAKA, The Life of Reason. Vol. IV, p. 114.

O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V: Prologue, l. 1.

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth
to heaven;
And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act V, sc. 1, l. 12.

Thus, great with child to speak, and helpless
in my throes,
Biting my truant pen, beating myself for spite:

"Fool!" said my Muse to me, "look in thy heart, and write."

SIR PHILIP SINKY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet i. See 2251:10.

For voices pursue him by day,
And haunt him by night,
And he listens, and needs must obey,
When the Angel says, "Write!"
LONGFELLOW, The Poet and His Songs.

Would you have your songs endure?
Build on the human heart!

ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. Bk. II.

"Give me a theme," the little poet cried,
"And I will do my part."
"Tis not a theme you need," the world replied;
"You need a heart."

R. W. GILMER, Wanted, a Theme.

The poet in a golden clime was born,
With golden stars above;
Dower'd with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn,

The love of love.

TENNISON, The Poet.

Vex not thou the poet's mind
With thy shallow wit;
Vex not thou the poet's mind,
For thou canst not fathom it.
Clear and bright it should be over,
Flowing like a crystal river,
Bright as light, and clear as wind.

THOMSON, The Poet's Mind.

The Poet gathers fruit from every tree,
You, grapes from thorns and figs from thistles
he.

Plucked by his hand, the basest weed that grows

Towers to a Bly, reddens to a rose.

WILLIAM WATSON, Four Epigrams.

The statue—Bionarroti said—doth wait,
Thrall'd in the block for me to liberate.
The poem—with the poet—wanders free
Till I betray it to captivity.

WILLIAM WATSON, Four Epigrams.

VI—Poets: Their Virtues

Happy who in his verse can gently steer
From grave to light, from pleasant to severe.
(Heureux qui, dans ses vers, sait d'une voix légère

Passer de grave au doux, du plaisant au sévère.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Canto I, l. 75. (Dryden, tr.)

Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe.

Pope, Essay on Man. Epistle IV, l. 379.

O brave poets, keep back nothing,
Nor mix falsehood with the whole!
Look up Godward; speak the truth in Worthy song from earnest soul:

Hold, in high poetic duty,
Truest Truth the fairest Beauty!

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 39.

I reckon, when I count at all,
First Poets—then the Sun—
Then Summer—then the Heaven of God—
And then the list is done.

But looking back—the first so seems
To comprehend the whole—

The others look a needless show,
So I write Poets—All.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. VI, No. 9.

True poets are the guardians of the state.

WENTWORTH DILLON, *Essay on Translated
Verse*, l. 356.

There was never poet who had not the heart
in the right place.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

By many hands the work of God is done, Swart toil, pale thought, flamed dream, the spurneth none:

Yea! and the weaver of a little rhyme
Is seen his worker in his own full time.

RICHARD LE GALLIEN, English Poets: Inscription, p. 185.

All that is best in the great poets of all countries is not what is national in them, but what is universal.

LONGFELLOW, Severn. Ch. 20.

The clear, sweet singer with the crown of snow

Not sadder than the thoughts that housed below!

He could songs make and well indite.

CHAUCEY, Canterbury Tales: Prologus, l. 95

Let me for once presume t' instruct the times,
To know the Poet from the man of rhymes.

'Tis he who gives my breast a thousand pains,
Can make me feel each passion that he feigns,
Enrage, compose, with more than magic art,
With pity and with terror tear my heart,
And snatch me o'er the earth, or thro' the air,
To Thebes, to Athens, when he will, and where

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, Bk. II,
ep. i, l. 340.

The varying verse, the full resounding line,
The long majestic march, and energy divine.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, Bk. II,
ep. i, l. 266. Referring to Dryden.

I learnt life from the poets.

MARSHALL DE STAIR, Corinna, Bk. xiv, ch. 5.

He is a poet strong and true
Who loves wild thyme and honey-dew;
And like a brown bee works and sings
With morning freshness on his wings,
And a golden burden on his thighs,—
The pollen-dust of centuries!

MERRILL THOMPSON, Wild Honey.

Blessings be with them—and eternal praise,
Who gave us nobler loves, and nobler cares,—

The Poets, who on earth have made us heirs
Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!
WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk, Sonnet iv.

His virtues formed the magic of his song.

VII.—Poets: Their Shortcomings

I agree with one of your reputable critics that a name for derision has spoiled more poets than ever did a taste for gutters.

THOMAS BAYLY, The Mistletoe, p. 115.

"Poets, need, must be
Or men or women—never the play."—Ally

But men, and still less women, happily,
Scarce need be poets.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh, Bk. II, l. 90.

I do distrust the poet who discerns
No character or glory in his times.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh, Bk. v, l. 189

Your poet who sings how Greeks
That never were, in Troy which never was,
Did this or the other impossible great thing

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr Sludge "The Medium"

Yet half a beast as the great god Pan,
To laugh as he sits by the river,

Making a poet out of a man.

The true gods sigh for the cost and the pain—
For the reed that grows nevermore again

As a reed with the reeds in the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument.

I have never yet known a poet who did not

Poor slaves in metre, dull and addle-pated,
Who rhyme below even David's Psalms translated

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel, Pt. II, l. 402

Poets, like disputants, when reasons fail,
Have one sure refuge left, and that's to rail.

DRYDEN, All for Love: Epilogue, l. 1.

Poets have often nothing poetical about them except their verses.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior

Poets are proxy in their common talk,
As the fast trotters, for the most part, walk.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret.

Well-pleased, I tune
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 3.
- I, too, have songs; me also the shepherds call a poet, but I trust them not. For as yet, methinks, I sing nothing worthy of a Varius or a Cinna, but gabble as a goose among melodious swans (Sed argutus inter strepere anser olores.)
VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ix, l. 33
- When to my haughty spirit I rehearse
My verse,
Faulty enough it seems; yet sometimes when
I measure it by that of other men,
Why, then—
I see how easily it might be worse.
J. T. TOWLERIDGE, An Odious Comparison.
- Wake, Betsey, wake, my sweet galoot!
Rise up, fair lady, while I touch my lute!

- If I had peace to sit and sing,
Then I could make a lovely thing;
But I am stung with goads and whips,
So I build songs like iron ships
Let it be something for my songs,
If it is sometimes swift and strong.
ANNA WICKHAM, The Singer.
- Surely there was a time I might have trod
The sunlit heights, and from life's dissonance Struck one clear chord to reach the ears of God.
OSCAR WILDE, Helios. Lines prefixed to his poems, Paris edition, 1903.
- I have seized life by the poetic side.
FRANK WOODCOCK, (Emerson, Journals, 1868.)
- The moving accident is not my trade;
To freeze the blood I have no ready arts:
Tis my delight, when in the wilderness,
To pipe a simple song for thinking hearts.

I—Politics: Definitions

1 Man is a political animal. (Πολιτικὸν ἄνθρωπος.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. 1, ch. 1, sec. 10. The complete quotation is: "And why man is a political animal in a greater measure than any bee or any gregarious animal, is clear. For nature does nothing without purpose, and man alone of the animals possesses speech."

Learn'd or unlearn'd, we all are politicians.

SOAME JENYNS, Imitations of Horace. Bk. II, epis. 1.

2 There is no gambling like politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 82.

There is nothing in which the power of circumstances is more evident than in politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Life of Benvenuto.

3 A good deal of our politics is physiological.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

4 Politics, like religion, hold up torches of martyrdom to the reformers of error.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 69.

There is a holy mistaken zeal in politics as well as religion. By persuading others we convince ourselves.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 35, 19 Dec., 1769.

5 Those who would treat politics and morality apart will never understand the one or the other.

JOHN MORLEY, Rousseau, p. 380.

In politics the choice is constantly between two evils, and action is one long second best.

Blindness we may forgive, but baseness we will smite.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, An Ode in Time of Retraction.

With what grace could I face the men who were driven out of the Republican party by the crooked work at the convention of 1912, and ask them to support for President the head devil [Elihu Root] of the whole thing? How could I face them and say, "The emergency is so great that I must ask you to forget the burglary of 1912, and put this unconvicted felon in the White House?"

THEODORE ROOSEVELT. (THEODORE, Presidents for America, p. 264.)

In public life, instead of modesty, incorruptibility, and honesty, shamelessness, bribery, and rapacity hold sway. (Address, publicans

... pro pudore, pro abstinentia, pro virtute, audacia, largito, avaritia vigebant.)

SALTWATER, Castiline, Sec. 3.

In politics I am sure it is even a Machiavellian holy maxim, "That some men should be ruined for the good of others."

SWIFT, Essay on English Bubbles.

The public path of life is dirty.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 373.

IV—Politics: Their Reformation

To convince a poor voter by the common argument of promised reforms is merely to corrupt him with hope.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintille Juris.

When shall the softer, saner politics, Whereof we dream, have play in each proud land?

THOMAS HARDY, Departure, l. 11.

The purification of politics is an iridescent dream. Government is force. . . . The Decalogue and the Golden Rule have no place in a political campaign. . . . The commander who lost the battle through the activity of his moral nature would be the derision and jest of history.

JOHN J. INCALLS, Article, New York World, 1890.

Most schemes of political improvement are very laughable things.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, II, 102.)

As it was in the beginning,
Is to-day official sinning.

And shall be for evermore.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A General Summary.

V—Politics: Measures Not Men

Measures, not men.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter, 6 March, 1742;

EARL OF SEKELBURNE, Letter, 11 July, 1765.

Measures, not men, have always been my mark.
GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act II, sc. 1. (1768)

It is necessary that I should qualify the doctrine of its being not men, but measures, that I am determined to support. In a monarchy it is the duty of parliament to look at the men as well as at the measures.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons, Nov., 1830.

Of this stamp is the cant of "Not men but measures"; a sort of charm by which many people get loose from every honourable engagement.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. (1770)

Away with the cant of "Measures, not men!"—the idle supposition that it is the harness and not the horses that drive the chariot along. No Sir, if the comparison must be made, if the distinction must be taken, men are everything, measures comparatively nothing.

GEORGE CANNING, Speech, against the Addington Ministry, 1801.

It used to be an applauded political maxim, "Measures, not men." I venture to denounce the soundness of this maxim, and to propose "Men, not measures." . . . Better a hundred times an honest administration of an erroneous policy than a corrupt administration of a good one.

E. J. PHILLIPS, Address, at dinner N. Y. Chamber of Commerce, 19 Nov., 1889.

VI—Politics: Parties

All political parties die at last of swallowing their own lies.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT (RICHARD GARNETT, Life of Emerson, p. 165.)

When great questions end, little parties begin.

WALTER BAGEHOT, English Constitution, p. 261.

Party divisions, whether on the whole operating for good or evil, are things inseparable from free government.

EDMUND BURKE, Observations on a Publication, "The Present State of the Nation."

Being of no party,
I shall offend all parties:—never mind!
My words, at least, are more sincere and hearty

Than if I sought to sail before the wind.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 26.

In these days, more emphatically than ever, "to live, signifies to unite with a party or to make one."

CARELLE, Signs of the Times.

Party honesty is party expediency.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Interview, New York Commercial Advertiser, 19 Sept., 1889.

They have proved themselves offensive partisans and unscrupulous manipulators of local party management.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter to George William Curtis, 25 Dec., 1884.

To sacrifice one's honour to one's party is so unselfish an act that our most generous statesmen have not hesitated to do it.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintille Juris.

I always voted at my party's call,
And never thought of thinking for myself at all
I thought so little, they rewarded me . . .

By making me the ruler of the Queen's navee!
W. E. GLANVILLE, Paraphrase, Act I.

1. . . .
Party is organized opinion.

BENJAMIN DICKKIN, Speech, Oxford, 25 Nov., 1864.

2
I believe that without party Parliamentary Government is impossible.

BENJAMIN DICKKIN, Speech, Manchester, 3 April, 1872.

All free governments are party governments.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Remarks, on the death of Oliver H. P. Morton, House of Representatives, 18 Jan., 1878.

Still violent, whatever cause he took,
But most against the party he forsook;
For renegadoes, who ne'er turn by halves,
Are bound in conscience to be double knaves.
DAVIDEN, Absalom and Achitophel, Pt. II, l. 364.

4
At home the hateful names of parties cease,
And factious souls are wearied into peace.
DAVIDEN, Astrea Redux, l. 312.

5
The vice of our leading parties in this country is that they do not plant themselves on the deep and necessary grounds to which they are respectively entitled, but lash themselves to fury in the carrying of some local and momentary measure, nowise useful to the commonwealth. Of the two great parties which at this hour almost share the nation between them, I should say that one has the best cause, and the other contains the best men.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

In our political parties, compute the power of badges and emblems. See the great ball which they roll from Bakimore to Bunker Hill! Witness the cider-barrel, the log-cabin, the hickory-wick, the palmetto.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Who, born for the universe, narrow'd his mind,
And to party gave up what was meant for mankind.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 31.

The best party is but a kind of conspiracy against the rest of the nation. . . . Ignorance maketh men go into a party, and shame keepeth them from going out of it.
LORD BALMORAL, Works, p. 225.

8
He serves his party best who serves the country best.

FRANCISQUE B. HAZEN, Inaugural Address, 5 March, 1872.

He serves his most who serves his country best:
HOLMES, Ibid. ib. v. l. 321. (Bope, tr.)

If I could not go to heaven but with a party,
I would not go there at all.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Francis Hopkinson, 1789.

10
Faction, Disappointment's restless child.

SOAME JENTEN, On the Late Attempt on His Majesty's Life.

And clamorous Faction, gagged and bound,
Gaspeth its life out on the ground.

RICHARD REALE, Apocalypse.

11
Our differences are policies, our agreements principles.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Speech, at Des Moines, 1901.

12
A party of order or stability and a party of progress or reform are both necessary elements of a healthy state of political life.

13
Any party which takes credit for the rain must not be surprised if its opponents blame it for the drought.

DWIGHT W. MORROW, Campaign Speech, Oct., 1930.

Party-spirit, which at best is but the madness of many, for the gain of a few.

POPE, Letter to Blount, 27 Aug., 1714.

Party is the madness of the many for the gain of a few.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects. Sometimes mistakenly ascribed to Swift.

15
A good party is better than the best man that ever lived.

THOMAS B. REND. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

16
The first advice I have to give the party is that it should clean its slate.

LORD ROSEBURY, Speech, Chesterfield, 16 Dec., 1901.

You tell me I am a party man. I hope I shall always be so.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters, No. 1.

He shall be disfranchised who, in time of faction, takes neither side.

SOLOH, Tables of the Law. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon, Sec. 20.)

When I first came into Parliament, Mr. Tierney, a great Whig authority, used always to say that the duty of an Opposition was very simple—it was to oppose everything and propose nothing.

LORD STANLEY, Debate, 4 June, 1841.

The Duty of an Opposition is to oppose.
LORD ROSEBURY, Speech, quoting George Tierney.

VII—Politics: Liberal and Conservative

1 He belonged to the third party, the quiddists or quids, being the tertium quid, . . . which had no name, but was really an anti-Madison movement.

HENRY ADAMS, John Randolph, p. 182.

2 You want a seat? Then boldly sate your itch;

Be very radical, and very rich.

ALFRED AUSTIN, The Golden Age.

3 The Right Honourable gentleman [Sir Robert Peel] caught the Whigs bathing and walked away with their clothes.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 28 Feb., 1845.

4 A conservative government is an organized hypocrisy.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 17 March, 1845. See CONSERVATISM

5 It [Liberalism] is the introduction into the practical business of life of the highest kind—namely, politics—of philosophical ideas instead of political principle.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 5 June, 1848

The liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxii, 8.

6 What is a communist? One who has yearnings

For equal division of unequal earnings.

EBENEZER ELLIOT, Epigram.

Parlor bolshevism.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Metropolitan Magazine, June, 1918

7 The Democratic party is the party of the Poor marshalled against the Rich. . . . But they are always officered by a few self-seeking deserters from the Rich or Whig party.

EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

The Democratic party is like a mule—without pride of ancestry or hope of posterity.

EMORY STORRS, Speech, during campaign of 1888 Also attributed to William C. Linton, Ignatius Donnelly and Judge Gay Gordon.

The Democratic party is like a man riding backward, in a railroad car, it never sees anything until it has got past it.

—THOMAS B. REEP. (ROBINSON, Life.)

The penguin flies backwards because he doesn't care to see where he's going, but wants to see where he's been.

FRED ALLEN, The Backward View.

Yes, I am a Democrat still, very still.

DAVID B. HILL. When asked, on his return from the Democratic convention of 1896 if he was still a Democrat

8 Deprived of all they had [by Cromwell], they took to a wild life of robbery, and were called Tories, from the Irish word meaning a plunderer.

W. S. GREGG, Irish History, p. 62.

A gentleman had a red Ribband in his hat . . . he said it signified that he was a Tory. What's that? said she. He answered, An Irish rebel . . . I hear that . . . Instead of Cavalier and Round-head, they are now called Tords and Wiggas.

OLIVER HAYWOOD, Diaries, 24 Oct., 1681.

9 Where you see a Whig you see a rascal. . . . The first Whig was the devil.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellaneous. Vol. II, p. 393; and BOSWELL, Life, 1778.

Whig: The name of a faction.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language

10 A wise Tory and a wise Whig, I believe, will agree Their principles are the same, though their modes of thinking are different.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Of Tory and Whig Written statement given to Boswell, 1783.

11 There is always some basic principle that will ultimately get the Republican party together. If my observations are worth anything, that basic principle is the cohesive power of public plunder.

A. J. McLAURIN, Speech, U. S. Senate, May, 1906

Stalwart Republicans.

JAMES G. BLAINE. Coined in 1877 to describe the group in Congress who fought to sustain the privileges of Republicans in the South.

The Republicans have their splits right after election and Democrats have theirs just before an election

WILL ROGERS, Syndicate Article, 29 Dec., 1930.

12 Socialism is simply the degenerate capitalism of bankrupt capitalists Its one genuine object is to get more money for its professors.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. III, p. 109.

13 I have never given way to that puritanical feeling of the Whigs against dining with Tories.

Tory and Whig in turn shall be my host; I taste no politics in boiled and roast.

STEWART SMITH, Letter to John Murray, 1834.

14 He thinks like a Tory and talks like a Radical, and that's so important now-a-days.

OSCAR Wilde, Lady Windermere's Fan Act II.

15 Toryism is an innate principle o' human nature—Whiggism but an evil habit.

JOHN WILSON, Notes Ambrosianae, No. 4.

16 By "radical" I understand one who goes too

by "conservative" one who does not go to the right; by "reactionary" one who won't go to the left. I suppose I must be a "progressive", which I take to be one who insists on recognizing new facts, adjusting policies to facts and circumstances as they arise.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, N. Y., 20 Jan., 1911.

By a progressive I do not mean a man who is ready to move, but a man who knows where he is going when he moves.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, St. Paul, Minn.,
9 Sept., 1919.

1 A man of hope and forward-looking mind.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, Bk. vii, l. 276.
For "right" and "left" as applied to conservatives and liberals, see APPENDIX.

VIII—Politics: Expediency

2 I am invariably of the politics of people at whose table I sit, or beneath whose roof I sleep.

GEORGE BURROW, The Bible in Spain Ch. 16.

And so God save the regent, church, and King!
Which means that I like all and every thing
BYRON, Beppo, St. 48.

3 In politics if thou wouldst mix,
And mean thy fortunes be,
Bear this in mind: Be deaf and blind,
Let great folks hear: and see.
ROMNEY BURNS, At the Globe Tavern, No. 4.

4 Principle is ever my motto, not expediency.
BENJAMIN DRAKE, Sybil, Bk. II, ch. 2.

5 He [Sir Cooey] . . . was very ill-used by the Government about a place that was promised him and never given, after his supporting them against his conscience very honourably, and being greatly abused for it, which hurt him greatly, he having the name of a great patriot in the country before.

MARIA EDGEMORTH, Castle Rackrent: Continuation of Memoirs.

6 The greatest superstition now entertained by public men is that hypocrisy is the royal road to success.

R. G. HENNINGSON, Speech, Thirteen Club Dinner, 13 Dec., 1886.

7 A merciful Providence fashioned us holler,
O' bosome that we might our principles walter.

J. K. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. 1, No. 4.

8 My present course is decided:
I must not serve the best, nor then be late it is decided.

J. K. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. 1, No. 6.

9 In my philosophy I glory
In being stuck to the wall.

I ain't a Whig, I ain't a Tory,
I'm just a candidate, in short.

J. K. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. 1, No. 7.

Now warn't that a system with pains in progression?

Where the people found flats an' their frien' done the carvin'?

J. K. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. II, No. 5.

10 I keep my principle, that of living and dying
the vicar of Bray

REV. SYMON SYMONDS. Bray is a village in Berkshire, England, and tradition asserts that Symon Symonds, the vicar there, preserved his incumbency for half a century by being twice Protestant and twice Catholic under Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth. (FULLER, Works of Berkshire)

In good King Charles's golden days,
When loyalty no harm meant,
A zealous high-churchman was I,
And so I got preferment . . .
And this is law that I'll maintain
Until my dying day, sir,
That whatsoever king shall reign,
Still I'll be Vicar of Bray, sir.

UNKNOWN, The Vicar of Bray, (c. 1700)

Sometimes ascribed to a Colonel Fuller, an officer in the army of George I.

He held it safer to be of the religion of the King or Queen that was in being, for he knew that he came raw into the world, and accounted it no point of wisdom to be broiled out of it.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, *The Old,
Old, Very Old Man*, (1635)

Whatever I can say or do,
I'm sure not much avail;
I shall still Vicar be of Bray,
Whichever side prevails.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Tale of the Cobbler and the Vicar of Bray.

I dare be bold, you're one of those
Have took the covenant,
With cavaliers are cavaliers
And with the saints, a saint.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Tale of the Cobbler and the Vicar of Bray.

I loved no King since Forty One
When Prelacy went down,
A Cloak and Band I then put on,
And preached against the Crown.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Two-Coach.

I never doubted of the prudent versatility of your Vicar of Bray.

IX—Politics: The Politician

² It is as hard and severe a thing to be a true politician as to be truly moral.

BACON, Advancement of Learning Bk. II.

³ Surely, as there are mountebanks for the natural body, so there are mountebanks for the political body—men who undertake great cures; and perhaps have been lucky in two or three experiments, but want the grounds of science, and therefore cannot hold out.

BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

⁴ There are three classes of politicians—those who under pressure of an existing evil seek for change; . . . those who, with conscious and definite aim, plant the great Hereafter in the Now . . . and thirdly, those who with clear eye discern the dependence of the Hereafter upon the Now, and because they shrink from the Hereafter, refuse to take the step which renders it inevitably certain.

WILLIAM WATSON, Sketch of a Political Character.

7 Things get very lonely in Washington sometimes. The real voice of the great people of America sometimes sounds faint and distant in that strange city. You hear politics until you wish that both parties were smothered in their own gas.

WOMENOW WATSON, Speech, St. Louis, Mo., 5
Sept., 1919.

It is easy enough to see why a man goes to the poor house or the penitentiary. Its because he

X—Politics: Office-Holding

8 No man who ever held the office of President would congratulate a friend on obtaining it.

He will make one man ungrateful, and a hundred men his enemies, for every office he can bestow.

JOHN ADAMS, referring to the election of his son, John Quincy Adams, to the Presidency. (QUINCY, Figures of the Past, p. 74.)

Every time I bestow a vacant office I make a hundred discontented persons and one ingrate.
(Toutes les fois que je donne une place vacante, je fais cent mécontents et un ingrat.)

LOUIS XIV. (VOLTAIRE, Siecle de Louis XIV.)

9 In order to distribute the offices according to merit it is necessary for the citizens to know each other's personal characters. . . . Haphazard decision is unjust, and this must obviously prevail in a numerous community.

DRYDEN, Abdolon and Achitophel. Pt. I, l. 985.

⁴ Take from the United States the appointment of postmasters and let the towns elect them, and you deprive the Federal Government of half a million defenders.

EMERSON, Journals, 1860.

I have heard in highest places the shameless doctrine avowed by men grown old in public office that the true way by which power should be gained in the Republic is to bribe the people with the offices created for their service.

GEORGE F. HOAR, Speech, at impeachment trial of Secretary W. W. Belknap, in 1876. (HOAR, Autobiography of Seventy Years, I, 307.)

What are we here for, except the offices?

WEBSTER PLANAGAN, leader of the Republican party in Texas, at the national Republican convention, in 1880. (Dict. Amer. Biog., vi,

⁶ Of the various executive duties, no one excited more anxious concern than that of placing the interests of our fellow citizens in the hands of honest men, with understanding sufficient for their stations. No duty is at the same time more difficult to fulfil.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Elias Shipman,
12 July, 1801.

No duty the Executive has to perform is so trying as to put the right man in the right place.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. As quoted by J. B. Mc-Master, History of the People of the United States. Vol. 5, p. 586.

I have always believed that success would be the inevitable result if the two services, the army and the navy, had fair play, and if we sent the right man to fill the right place.

SIR AUSTEN HENRY LAYARD, Speech, in Parliament, 15 Jan., 1855.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to a Committee of Merchants of New Haven, 12 July, 1801.

The exact words were, "If a due participation of office is a matter of right, how are vacancies to be obtained? Those by death are few: by resignation, none."

XI—Politics: Public Office a Public Trust

For the administration of the government, like the office of a trustee, must be conducted for the benefit of those entrusted to one's care, not of those to whom it is entrusted.
CAMERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 25, sec. 85.

All political power is a trust.
CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, 1788.

To execute laws is a royal office; to execute orders is not to be a king. However, a political executive magistracy, though merely such,
is a great trust.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution
in France (1790)

All persons possessing any portion of power ought to be strongly and awfully impressed with an idea that they act in trust, and that they are to account for their conduct in that trust to the one great Master, Author, and Founder of society.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution
in France.

All power is a trust; that we are accountable for its exercise; that from the people and for the people all springs, and all must exist.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch.
2. (1826)

The English constitution is a trust for the public good.
MACAULAY, Essays on English Literature. (1833).

It is not in the public trust should be lodged in the hands of any man who is not proved and found fit for the business they are to be entrusted with

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Timothy,
III. (1708)

No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

Constitution of the United States Art. vi, sec.
3. (1787)

When a man assumes a public trust, he should consider himself as public property

THOMAS JEFFERSON In a conversation with Baron Humboldt (RAYNER, Life of Jef- erson, p. 356.)

Government is a trust, and the officers of the government are trustees, and both the trust and the trustees are created for the benefit of the people

HENRY CLAY, Speech, at Lexington, Ky., 16
May, 1829

The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts, bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or a party.
JOHN C. CALHOUN, Speech, 13 Feb., 1835.

An' in convertin' public trusts

J. R. LOWELL, The Baglow Papers Ser. I, No.
6. (1848)

The phrase, "public office is a public trust," has of late become common property.
CHARLES SUMNER, Speech, U. S. Senate, 31
May, 1872.

The public offices are a public trust
W. W. CRAPO, Speech, Republican State Convention, Mass., 1881

Public office is a public trust, the authority and opportunities of which must be used as absolutely as the public moneys for the public benefit

DORRMAN B. EATON, The "Spoils" System and
Civil-Service Reform. Ch. II.

Public officials are the trustees of the people.
GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomina- tion for Mayor of Buffalo, 1881

Public officers are the servants and agents of the people to execute laws which the people have made.

GEORGE CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomina- tion for Governor of New York, 7 Oct., 1882

But what man is fit to hold office? Only he who regards political office as a public trust

A. S. HOWARD, Address, at opening Brooklyn bridge, 24 May, 1886.

Public office is a public trust.
WILLIAM C. HUNTING, A pamphlet man who was asked to write a campaign document summarizing the achievements of Grover Cleveland, at the opening of his first Presidential campaign, in June, 1884, and who produced this slogan from various utterances by Cleveland. Sometimes attributed to Dan Lamont, Cleveland's campaign manager

1 Your every voter, as surely as your chief magistrate, under the same high sanction, though in a different sphere, exercises a public trust.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Inaugural, 4 Mar., 1885.

Mugwump D. O. Bradley.

Headline N. Y. Sun, 23 March, 1884—Applied by the Sun, 15 June, 1884, to the "Independents" of the Blaine-Cleveland campaign

A mugwump is a person educated beyond his intellect.

HORACE PORTER, Speech, during Cleveland-Blaine campaign, 1884 The Nation defined a mugwump as "a man who, for some reason or other, is unable to vote his regular party ticket." An Algonquin Indian word, meaning "Big Chief," used in Eliot's translation of the Bible, 1661. Said to have been first used in its political sense by the Indianapolis Sentinel in 1872 Thomas B. Reed called them "long-tailed birds of Paradise."

Very few . . . take an active part in politics, however interested they may be in public affairs.

BYRNE, American Commonwealth, ii, iii, 379.

A mugwump is one of those boys who always has his mug on one side of the political fence and his wump on the other.

ALBERT J. ENGER, Speech, House of Representatives, 23 April, 1886, credited also to Harold Willis Doody, President of Princeton University.

10 I shall not help crucify mankind upon a cross of gold. I shall not aid in pressing down upon the bleeding brow of labor this crown of thorns.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Speech, House of Representatives, 22 Dec., 1894.

You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Speech, before National Democratic Convention, Chicago, 10 July, 1896. Concluding sentence.

1 The enemy's country.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN. Phrase used by him in the 1896 campaign to describe the East, specifically New York.

I never said, "Great is Tammany and Croker is its prophet," Bryan did.

CHAMPE CLARK, Memories.

In a consistent, albeit futile gesture, therefore, he [Bryan] resolved to invade "The enemy's country" and formally accept his nomination at Madison Square Garden—"the champion of Lazarus at the gates of Dives."

PAXTON HENRY, The Peerless Leader, p. 197.

The first quoted phrase was Bryan's, the second was coined by Edward C. Little.

Ours is no sapling, chance-sown by the fountain, blooming at Beltane, in winter to fade.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake: Canto II, st. 19.

Quoted by Senator Vest in nominating Richard Parks Bland for the Presidency at Chicago, in 1896, referring to Bryan.

2 We are Republicans, and we don't propose to leave our party and identify ourselves with the party whose antecedents have been rum, Romanism, and rebellion.

REV. SAMUEL DICKINSON BURCHARD, Speech of Congratulation, to James G. Blaine, at Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York City, 29 Oct., 1884, as spokesman for a party of clergymen gathered to assure him of their support in his presidential campaign. There is good reason to believe that the phrase "rum, Romanism, and rebellion," which Blaine failed to repudiate promptly, lost him the Presidency. Cleveland carried New York by a plurality of 1047, and the state's electoral vote decided the election. Burchard was a Presbyterian clergyman, whom Edward P. Mitchell in the New York Sun described as "a Shugian or early Paleozoic bigot."

The combined power of rebellion, Catholicism and whiskey.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Letter, 1876, when he thought Tilden elected, explaining how it had happened. (Caldwell, James A. Garfield, p. 251.)

3 One of those damn literary fellows.

SIMON CAMERON, Speech, U. S. Senate, 7 March, 1876, referring to Richard Henry Dana, whose nomination as Minister to Great Britain had just been sent to the Senate by President Grant. Cameron was Senator from Pennsylvania, and shocked in defeating the nomination. (C. F. Adams, Life of R. H. Dana, II, 376.)

What could you expect from a man who had snubbed seventy Senators!

SIMON CAMERON, in 1870, referring to Judge Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar, whose nomination to the Supreme Court by President Grant the Senate had rejected. Judge Hoar had antagonized the Senate, while Attorney-General by refusing to treat appointments to judgeships as Senate patronage. (Proceedings: Mass. Hist. Society, 2d series, ix, 304; Dict. Amer. Biog., ix, 86.)

4 He has peculiar powers as an assailant, and almost always, even when attacked, gets himself into that attitude by making war upon his accuser; and he has, withal, an instinct for the jugular and the carotid artery, as unerring as that of any carnivorous animal.

RUFUS CHOATE, referring to John Quincy Adams. (SAMUEL GILMAN BROWN, Memoir of Rufus Choate, p. 417. A note states that this is "from the memorandum of Hon. Charles A. Peabody." Quoted in ALEXANDER, Four Famous New Yorkers, p. 17.)

5 I would rather be right than president.

HENRY CLAY. To Preston, of Kentucky, when told that his advocacy of the Missouri compromise measures of 1850 would injure his chances for the Presidency.

The gentleman need not worry. He will never be either.

THOMAS B. REED. Retorting to Congressman Springer, when he quoted Clay's statement (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

Bargain and Corruption.

The cry that "barred the door of the Presidency to Henry Clay." (Dictionary of American Biography, II, 324.)

6 It is a condition which confronts us, not a theory.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1887. Referring to the tariff.

7 Let it alone; let it pass. (Laissez faire; laissez passer.)

JEAN-BAPTISTE COLBERT, finance minister of Louis XIV of France. (See speech by Lord John Russell, London Times, 2 April, 1840.) Attributed also to Gournay, Minister of Commerce, 1751. Quoted by Adam Smith, Wealth of Nations.

8 A halcyon and vociferous occasion.

ROSCOE CONKLING, Speech.

9 I do not choose to run for President in 1928, CALVIN COOLIDGE. Statement to press in 1927.

"I do not choose" means in the Yankee language "I am determined not to."

C. W. THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 345.

In my opinion, it was never meant to bring about the results it did. . . . The President hoped to be the nominee, expected to be the nominee, and was disappointed and distressed when he was not chosen by the convention.

IRWIN HOOD ("IKE") HOOVER, Forty-Two Years in the White House, p. 177.

I should like to be known as a former president who tries to mind his own business.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, (Cosmopolitan Magazine, May, 1930.)

He looks as if he had been weaned on a pickle.

ALICE ROOSEVELT LONGWORTH, characterizing Mr. Coolidge, by quoting her physician. (Crowded Hours, p. 337.)

1 The convention will be deadlocked, and after the other candidates have gone their limit, some twelve or fifteen men, worn out and bleary-eyed for lack of sleep, will sit down, about two o'clock in the morning, around a table in a smoke-filled room in some hotel, and decide the nomination. When that time comes, Harding will be selected.

HARRY M. DAUGHERTY, campaign manager for Warren G. Harding, predicting with uncanny accuracy the method of Harding's nomination for the Presidency by the Republican National Convention at Chicago, 12 June, 1920. The "smoke-filled room" was Colonel George Harvey's room at the Blackstone Hotel. The convention was deadlocked between General Leonard Wood and Governor Frank O. Lowden, and about two o'clock on the morning of Saturday, 12 June, a small group of the "party elders" got together and selected Harding as a compromise candidate. (See the New York Times, 13 June, 1920; MARK SULLIVAN, Our Times, vol. vi, p. 37.)

We drew to a pair of deuces and filled.

WARREN G. HARDING, commenting on his nomination, just after it had been made, to a group of reporters who had rushed to him, demanding a statement. The phrase is familiar to every poker player. To "fill" means to succeed in getting a "full house," a hand consisting of a pair and three of a kind.

2 "Hargrave," said his Lordship, "if you want any information upon points of practical politics."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Ch. 14. (1826) The first known appearance in print of the phrase, "practical politics."

Out of the range of practical politics.

GLADSTONE. Referring to the abolition of the Established Church in Ireland, April, 1867. (O'CONNOR, The Parnell Movement, p. 216.)

It would be interesting to imagine the first President of the United States confronted with some one who had ventured to approach him upon the basis of what is now commonly called "practical politics."

HARVEY COSMAN PERRY, Address, Washington Centennial service, 30 April, 1889.

3 The first favourite was never heard of, the second favourite was never seen after the distance post, all the ten-to-ones were in the rear, and a dark horse which had never been thought of, and which the careless St. James had never even observed in the list, rushed past the grand stand in sweeping triumph.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1831)

Who is the dark horse he has in his stable?

THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip.

4 We went across, but they won't come across.

A. VICTOR (VIC) DONAHUE, U. S. Senator from Ohio, explaining his vote against American adherence to the World Court, 30 Jan., 1935, referring to American participation in the World War and the refusal of the Allies to pay their debts to the United States. To "come across" is American vernacular for paying up.

5 I could travel from Boston to Chicago by the light of my own effigies.

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, in 1854, after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, which he had supported. (RHODES, History of the United States, Vol. 1, p. 496.)

6 Water flowed like wine.

WILLIAM M. EVARTS, describing a dinner at the White House in 1877, during the administration of Rutherford B. Hayes, whose wife was a Prohibitionist.

7 I am a bigger man than old Grant.

LAFAYETTE FITZBUGH, of Texas, Letter, written to a constituent in 1875. Fitzbush, who had been sergeant-at-arms of the Confederate Senate, had managed to secure an appointment as file clerk of the document room of the House of Representatives, when the Democrats recovered control of the House and its patronage in 1875. (See New York Sun, 8 Oct., 1916.) The saying has been attributed also to Webster Fennagan and to Tom Ochiltree.

8 I will leave the leader of the opposition, for the present, floundering and foundering in the Straits of Malacca.

GLADSTONE, Speech, at Greenwich, Jan., 1874. Referring to Disraeli's accusation that the Liberal government had neglected British interests in the Straits of Malacca.

The country has, I think, made up its mind to close this career of plundering and blundering.

DISRAELI, Letter to Lord Grey de Wilton, Oct., 1873.

Support of a conspiracy against a native, however the former may blunder or phudor

"W. H. Woodcock, Speeches of the Highway of Death, Vol. I, p. 12. (c. 1869)

"The foreign policy of the noble earl . . . may be summed up in two truly expressive words, "meddle" and "muddle."

Lord Derby, Speech, House of Lords, Feb., 1864, referring to Earl Russell

What's the use of wasting dynamite when insect-powder will do?

SENATOR CARTER GLASS, in an unpublished speech, Democratic caucus, 1913

Here comes another of the Spell-binders! WILLIAM CASPER GOODLOE. Referring to the Republican stump-speakers in campaign of 1888, who were publicized as holding their audiences spell-bound

I have the courage of my opinions, but I have not the temerity to give a political blank cheque to Lord Salisbury

Sir WILLIAM EDWARD GOSCHEN, Speech, in Parliament, 19 Feb., 1884.

Who will burden himself with your liturgical parterre when the burning questions [brennende Fragen] of the day invite to very different toils?

HAGENBACH, Grundrissen der Liturgik und Homiletik (1883)

The burning question of the day BENJAMIN DISELLI, Speech, House of Commons, March, 1873.

We'll stand pat!

MARK HAYMA When asked by a reporter to state the issue of the 1906 campaign to re-elect McKinley Hence the sobriquet, "stand-patters." (See STONEMAN, As I Knew Them, p. 259) "Stand pat" is a poker term, meaning that the player is satisfied with the cards dealt to him, and desires no new ones

I felt as if I were before this speech tamed with the brush of being a thick-and-thinist

A. J. BALFOUR, Speech, 9 Jan., 1900. The British for standpatter

One thing, if no more, I have gained by my custom-house experience—to know a politician. It is a knowledge which no previous thought, or power of sympathy, could have taught me, because the animal, or the machine rather, is not in nature.

MASTERSMAN, Notes Book, 16 March, 1840

Said to be the origin of "machine politics"

Such is the speciality of the machine, as now established, that . . . strictly an individual is excluded by political influence.

STONEMAN, As I Knew Them, Editor As I Knew Them

(*) Quoted, 12 Sept., 1887. (London-Whitings Correspondence, p. 364.)

They call this system—I do not call the phrase, I adopt it because it carries its own meaning—the system they call "invisible government."

BARNEY BOOR. Referring to boss rule, specifically to Thomas C. Platt, of New York.

If the Man Higher Up is ever found, take my assurance for it, he will be a large, pale man with blue wristlets showing under his cuffs, and he will be sitting to have his shoes polished within sound of a bowling alley, and there will be somewhere about him turquoises

O HENRY, Man About Town.

We in America today are nearer to the final triumph over poverty than ever before in the history of any land. The poorhouse is vanishing from among us. We have not yet reached the goal, but given a chance to go forward with the policies of the last eight years, and we shall soon, with the help of God, be within sight of the day when poverty shall be banished from this nation

HERBERT HOOVER, Speech, 11 Aug., 1928, accepting the Republican nomination for President

Ours is a land filled with millions of happy homes, blessed with comfort and opportunity

In no nation are the fruits of accomplishment more secure. I have no fears for the future of our country. It is bright with hope

HERBERT HOOVER, Inaugural, 4 March, 1929

They are playing politics at the expense of human misery

HERBERT HOOVER, Statement to the Press, 9 Dec., 1930. Referring to members of Congress who had introduced bills for unemployment relief

Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American Congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of every traitor to his country and every maligner of his fair reputation

ROBERT G. LUCASOITZ, Speech, nominating Blaine for President, at the National Republican Convention, Cincinnati, 15 June, 1876 (Proceedings of the Convention, p. 73-75)

Let us believe that in the silence of the receding world, he heard the great waves breaking on a farther shore, and felt already upon his wasted brow the beaute of the Eternal Morning

R. G. LUCASOITZ, Eulogy of James G. Blaine

Malignant letters.

Letters supposed to show corruption on the part of James G. Blaine in various railroad and land deals in 1869. Used with deadly effect during his campaign against Cleveland, they "probably turned the chair of the Presidency to the victor" (Dict. Amer. Biog., II, 324.)

1 No sooner does he hear any of his brothers mention reform or retrenchment, than up he jumps.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: John Bull. (1820)

I am for peace, for retrenchment, and for reform,—thirty years ago the great watchwords of the great Liberal Party.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, Birmingham, 28 April, 1859. The phrase dates from 1830, when it was probably said by William IV to Earl Grey in an interview, 17 Nov., 1830, and is in H. B.'s Cartoons, No. 93, 26 Nov., 1830. (See MOLLESWORTH, History of the Reform Bill of 1832, p. 98. Also WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year, 1839, where it is inscribed on the banner of Tittlebat Titmouse.)

2 John Marshall has made his decision: now let him enforce it!

PRESIDENT ANDREW JACKSON, referring to the Supreme Court decision in Worcester vs. Georgia, 3 March, 1832, which upheld the right of the Cherokee Indians to remain in possession of their land, from which the state was trying to eject them. (GRIFFIN, The American Conflict, vol. 1, p. 106.)

3 We are swinging round the circle.

ANDREW JOHNSON, Speech, on the Presidential Reconstruction tour, August, 1866.

4 It was not free silver that frightened the plutocratic leaders. What they feared then, what they fear now, is free men.

TOM JOHNSON, My Story, p. 109.

5 Allow me to introduce to you my particular friend, Mr. George O. Evans. . . . He understands Addition, Division, and Silence.

WILLIAM H. KEMBLE, while State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, in a letter to Titian J. Coffey, recommending a political protégé, March, 1867. Published in the New York Sun, 20 June, 1872, the phrase soon became famous.

Multiplication, Division and Silence.

MATTHEW STANLEY QUAY, political boss of Pennsylvania, when asked the qualification for a ring or trust. (Every schoolboy knows that "Addition, Division and Silence" was not spoken by Bill Tweed, but written by Matt Quay.—BRANDEN MATTHEWS, New York Times Book Review, 1 Jan., 1922.)

6 The brains trust.

JAMES M. KILGAM, of the New York Times, in a conversation with Franklin D. Roosevelt, at Hyde Park, N. Y., in August, 1932, referring to the group of Columbia University professors with whom Mr. Roosevelt was consulting concerning his campaign speeches. The phrase was promptly picked up by the newspapers, and soon modified to "brain trust."

When the first American general staff was appointed from among the army's bright young men and fair-haired boys, some of the old Indian fighters and plains soldiers grumbled, and one of them said, "It's a damned brain trust."

Paraphrasing, this was the same old Commissary General Weston who once wise-cracked on General Greely's fitness to be entrusted with the command of many men. Greely had won his rank in the Signal Corps, where the duties are largely technical. He achieved glory in his historic Arctic expedition with a small squad—not all of whom came back. Weston's comment was—"He never commanded more than ten soldiers—and he ate three of them."

Weston's crack about the Brain Trust lived. One day at Krum Elbow, in the summer of 1932, some bright news-bawk saw a group of young "intellectuals" hanging about Hyde Park and recalled Weston's old wise-crack—"Moley and the brain trust." It stuck.

HUGH S. JOHNSON, Syndicated Article, 12 July, 1935. The General Greely referred to was Major General Adolphus Washington Greely, who headed a disastrous government Arctic expedition in 1881. Hyde Park is the country residence of Franklin D. Roosevelt, in Dutchess County, New York. "Moley" is Raymond Moley, a college professor who, in 1932 and for some time thereafter, was one of Mr. Roosevelt's most trusted advisers.

7 If the policy of the government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court, . . . the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their government into the hands of that eminent tribunal.

8 I do not allow myself to suppose that either the convention or the League have concluded to decide that I am either the greatest or best man in America, but rather they have concluded it is not best to swap homes while crossing the river, and have further concluded that I am not so poor a horse that they might not make a botch of it in trying to swap.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, to a delegation of the National Union League, which had called to congratulate him on his nomination as the Republican presidential candidate, 9 June, 1864. (RHODES, Hist. of the U. S., iv, 470; NICHOLAY AND HAY, Complete Works of Abraham Lincoln, ii, 532.)

I have not permitted myself, gentlemen, to conclude that I am the best man in the country, but I am reminded in this connection of an old Dutch farmer who remarked that it was not best to swap horses while crossing a stream.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. Version of above speech by W. O. Stoddard. (RAYMOND, Life and Public Services of Abraham Lincoln, p. 500.)

Boon-doggie.

JOHN H. LINT, Eagle Scout, of Rochester, N. Y., claims to have coined the word in 1926, and to have applied it, in 1929, to the plaited leather neck-strap on his son's Boy Scout uniform. (See Literary Digest, 1 June, 1935, p. 3.) The English Dialect Dictionary, however, states that it is of Scottish origin, and means a marble obtained as a gift. It came to public attention in the spring of 1935 during an investigation in New York City of the relief activities conducted by the F. D. Roosevelt administration there. It was discovered that there were classes in boon-doggling, that is the plaiting of leather neck-straps, and the public at once hilariously adopted the word to describe any occupation which was a waste of time and money, especially if connected with New Deal activities.

Boon-doggies are like old-type lanyards. They are made of plaited leather. Scouts have been making them for years as uniform ornaments all over the world.

UNKNOWN, Boon-doggies. (Scouting, March, 1930)

If we can boon-doggie our way out of the depression, that word is going to be enshrined in the hearts of the American people for years to come.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Speech, Newark, N. J., 18 Jan., 1936.

2 The cordial understanding. (L'entente cordiale.)

LOUIS PHILIPPE, Speech, from the throne, January, 1843, referring to the friendly relations existing between France and England, during Guisot's administration of foreign affairs. QUEEN VICTORIA, Letter to Lord John Russell, 7 Sept., 1848.

The cordial understanding which exists between the governments of France and Great Britain (La cordiale entente qui existe entre le gouvernement français et celui de la Grande-Bretagne)

UNKNOWN, Article, in Le Charivari, Paris, 6 Jan., 1844, reviewing a speech by Guisot.

The people of two nations [French and English] must be brought into mutual dependence by the supply of each other's wants. There is no other way of counteracting the antagonism of language and race. It is God's own method of producing an entente cordiale.

4 There are some things so elastic that even the heavy roller of democracy cannot flatten them altogether down.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

The steam-roller was first heard of in American politics in June, 1908, when it was applied by Oswald F. Schuchette, of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, to the methods employed by the Roosevelt-Taft majority in the Republican National Committee in over-riding the protests against seating Taft delegates from Alabama and Arkansas.

H. L. MENCKEN, American Language, p. 372.

5 What piece of work have you now in hand? None in hand, if it like your Majesty, but I am devising a platform in my head.

JOHN LILLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act v, sc. 4. (1584)

The wisdom of a lawmaker consisteth not only in a platform of justice, but in the application thereof.

BACON, Advancement of Learning, ii, 355 (1623)

Because the things did not work forth your platform.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Letters. Vol. iii, p. 89. (1655)

He can soon quit the way wherein he was, and become religious, after the manner of this novel platform.

PATRICK, Parable of the Pilgrim, p. 206. (1687)

The Whigs, whether on the Lexington platform or some other non-committal platform, will be and must be at once known as the party that opposed their country in her just and generous war.

UNKNOWN, Resolutions of the Democratic National Convention, 30 May, 1844. So far as known, the first recorded use of platform in this sense in America. (See the New York Herald, 6 May, 1848)

6 Frauds of which a lame duck on the stock exchange would be ashamed.

MACAULAY, Mirabeau. (Miscellany, ii, 95.) In England a lame duck is a defaulter on the Exchange, in America a defeated Congressman, but lame-duck Congresses were abolished in 1934.

I'll have no lame duck's daughter in my family.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 13.

President Lincoln selected Hale [John Parker Hale, appointed minister to Spain] out of general kindness and good will to the lame ducks.

E. L. PIERCE, Memoirs and Letters of Charles Sumner. Vol. iv, p. 255.

NOTE: This section of familiar political phrases is continued in the APPENDIX.

XIII—Politics: Campaign Slogans

7 Tippecanoe and Tyler too.

Republican campaign slogan, 1840. "Tippecanoe" was William Henry Harrison, who had won an indecisive victory over the Indians in 1811, at the spot where Tippecanoe Creek empties into the Wabash. Attributed to Orion E. Woodbury.

1 Fifty-four forty, or fight!

WILLIAM ALLEN, Speech, U. S. Senate, 1844. Adopted as the slogan of the war party, in the presidential election of James K. Polk, 1844. "During the same session war with England regarding the Oregon question seemed imminent. . . . The Democratic convention of 1844 had demanded the reoccupation of the whole of Oregon up to 54° 40', with or without war with England. Stephen A. Douglas was one of the small band of congressmen who shouted for 'fifty-four forty' to the bitter end. It was therefore humiliating to find the new President willing to compromise with Great Britain on the forty-ninth parallel."—Dic. Am. Biog., v, 398.

2 We stand for free soil.

LEONARD BACON. Motto for the Independent, which he helped to found and edited in 1848.

3 Young America!

Slogan of an important group of the Democratic party during campaign of 1852.

The position and duties of Young America.

EDWIN DE LEON (Charleston, 1845), first formulation of Young America idea, in commencement address at South Carolina College, in 1845. The idea was that if there was to be a Young America, the younger generation must seize political power and participate directly in the affairs of the world. (M. E. CURTIS, American Historical Review, xxxii, 34.)

4 Free soil, free men, free speech, Fré-mont. Republican slogan in campaign of 1856.

Oh! we'll give 'em Jessie

When we rally round the polls.

Song used by FRÉMONT's supporters in the Presidential campaign of 1856.

5 Peace at any price; peace and union. Rallying cry Fillmore Campaign, 1856.

6 Repudiate the repudiators.

WILLIAM PITT FESSENDEN, Speech, presidential campaign of 1868. The phrase became one of the slogans of the campaign.

7 Turn the rascals out!

CHARLES A. DANA, used first in the New York Sun, and afterwards as the slogan of Greeley's campaign against Grant in 1872.

8 Hurrah for Maria, Hurrah for the kid, I voted for Grover

And am damn glad I did.

Campaign song, Blaine-Cleveland campaign, 1884, the reference being to Maria Halpin, of Buffalo, N. Y., the mother of Cleveland's reputed illegitimate child. Cleveland always doubted his paternity. (For full story, see NEWS, Grover Cleveland, pp. 163-167.)

Ma! ma! where's my Pa?

Up in the White House, darling,
Making the laws, working the cause,
Up in the White House, dear.

H. R. MONROE, Ma! Ma! Where's My Pa? (1884) Referring to the Maria Halpin scandal. Adopted by the Democrats as a campaign jingle in the form: "Ma! Ma! where's my pa? Gone to the White House, ha, ha, ha!" Tell the truth.

GROVER CLEVELAND, when asked by his campaign managers what they should do about the scandal. (Harper's Weekly, 16 Aug., 1884.)

9 Blaine, Blaine, Blaine,

The continental liar from the State of Maine,
Burn this letter!

Campaign jingle used by Democrats during Blaine-Cleveland campaign, referring to an incriminating letter written by Blaine to a business associate named Warren G. Fisher, which he had endorsed on the back, "Burn this letter." (NEWS, Grover Cleveland, p. 161.)

I do not engage in criminal practise.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, when asked why he did not speak for Blaine during the Blaine-Cleveland campaign of 1884 (NEWS, Grover Cleveland, p. 178.) MURDER (Life of Blaine, p. 307) attributes the phrase to Roscoe Conkling.

10 We'll hang Jay Gould to a sour apple tree. Sung by campaign crowd in New York during Blaine-Cleveland campaign of 1884. (NEWS, Grover Cleveland, p. 186.)

11 He's all right!

Prohibition campaign slogan, 1884, referring to John P. St. John, candidate for President. He had been a Republican party leader, and the Republicans started the cry, "What's the matter with St. John?" The reply was, "Oh, he's all right!" Intended to be ironic, it was promptly adopted by the Prohibitionists. Isaac Goldberg (Tin Pan Alley, p. 64) asserts that Tony Pastor originated the phrase in New York City in 1884, when Abram S. Hewitt was running for Mayor. Pastor wrote a song with the refrain, "What's the matter with Hewitt?" To which the orchestra, and as many of the audience as agreed, would bellow back, "He's all right!" Used also in the Harrison campaign in 1888.

12 Yes, grandfather's hat fits Ben—fits Ben; He wears it with dignified grace, Oh yes! So rally again and we'll put Uncle Ben Right back in his grandfather's place.

UNKNOWN, Campaign Song, 1888. "Ben" was Benjamin Harrison, Republican candidate for President, whose grandfather was General William Henry Harrison.

Grandpa's Pants Won't Fit Benny.

Democratic slogan in campaign of 1888.

13 If the American people want me for this high office, I shall be only too willing to serve them. . . . Since studying this subject I am convinced that the office of President is not such a very difficult one to fill. ADMIRAL GREGOR DREW, announcing his candidacy, 4 April, 1900.

1 Grover, Grover, Four years more of Grover;
In we'll go, Out they'll go,
Then we'll be in clover

Democratic campaign song in 1892. Sung to the air of the berceuse in Wang:
Baby, baby, Bless the darling baby;
Down she goes, Up she goes,
Ninety times high as the moon.
J. CARRISON GOODWIN, Wang, Act I.

Wanamaker runs the Sunday School,
Morton runs the bar,
Baby McKee runs the White House,
And by God, here we are!

UNKNOWN Democratic campaign slogan, 1892, referring to Postmaster-General John Wanamaker, superintendent of a Philadelphia Sunday School, Vice-President Levi P. Morton, who owned the Shortham hotel, in Washington; and "Baby" McKee, Harrison's small grandson

The prophet and the ballot-box—both stuffed
THOMAS B. RYAN, suggested as a slogan for the Democratic party in 1892.

2 Lihoukalani,
Give us your little brown hannie.
Popular jingle, referring to the Hawaiian annexation question, Feb., 1893. Lihoukalani was Queen of the Hawaiian Islands

3 Elert McKinley, the Advance Agent of Prosperity!
Republican campaign slogan, 1896.

4 The full dinner pail.
Republican campaign slogan, 1900, offered to have been coined by the editor of Judge.

5 Ev'ry time I come to town,
The boys keep kickin' my dawg aroun';
Makes no difference if he is a houn',
They gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'.
WAS M. OLMSTED, They Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'. Published in 1912, and the slogan of the campaign for Champ Clark in that year.

6 The New Erasmian.
WOODROW WILSON. Used as the slogan of his first campaign. Grover Cleveland said of it: "Souped See—I wonder what it means."

7 You have laid upon me this double obligation: "We are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep us out of war, but we are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep the honor of the nation unstained."
WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Cleveland, 29 Feb., 1916.

I am the friend of peace and mean to preserve it for America so long as I am able. War can come only by the wilful acts and aggressions of others

WOODROW WILSON, Address to Congress, 26 Feb., 1917

He kept us out of war!

MARTIN H. GRYNN, Keynote Speech, National Democratic Convention, St. Louis, June 13, 1916. Referring to Woodrow Wilson. The phrase became the Democratic slogan of the campaign.

8 The fathers who gave us this government were not graduated from soap-boxes

And left the flunked pun in a poppy there.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Poppy.

POPULARITY

See also Applause; People, The

11 An ordinary song or ballad that is the delight of the common people cannot fail to please all such readers as are not unqualified for the entertainment by their affectation or ignorance. . . . For it is impossible that anything should be universally tasted and approved by the multitude, though they are only the rabble of the nation, which hath not in it some peculiar aptness to please and gratify the mind of man.

WALT WHITMAN, A Backward Glance o'er Travel'd Roads.

He thinks posterity a packhorse, always ready to be loaded.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 June, 1862.

Posterity is a most limited assembly. Those gentlemen who reach posterity are not much more numerous than the planets.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 June, 1862.

The love of posterity is the consequence of the necessity of death. If a man were sure of living forever here, he would not care about his offspring.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, l. 1, 14.

What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity

Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,

If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 757.

We are always doing, says he, something for Posterity, but I would fain see Posterity do something for us.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 583. (1712)

The man was laughed at as a blunderer who said in a public business: "We do much for posterity;
I would fain see them do something for us."

MRS. ELIZABETH MONTAGU, Letters, 1 Jan. 1742.

As to posterity, I may ask (with somebody whom I have forgot) what has it ever done to oblige me?

THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Dr. Warton, 8
March, 1758.

As though there were a tie,
And obligation to posterity!
We get them, bear them, breed and nurse.
What has posterity done for us,

That we, lest they their rights should lose,
Should trust our necks to gripe of noose?
JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. Canto II, l. 121.
(1775)

Why should we put ourselves out of the way to do anything for posterity? What has posterity done for us?

SIR BOYLE ROCHE, Speech, in Irish Parliament,
1780. (FLAXINGER, Studies in Irish History.)

Few can be induced to labor exclusively for posterity. Posterity has done nothing for us.

UNKNOWN. Motto of 18th century potters, often used on glazed ware. Another version was used by Longfellow in an introduction to Kéramos, and is sometimes mistakenly ascribed to him.

Turn, turn, my wheel! Turn round and round
Without a pause, without a sound:
So spins the flying world away!
This clay, well mixed with marl and sand,
Follows the motion of my hand;
For some must follow, and some command,
Though all are made of clay!

20 Happier he, the peasant, far,

From the pangs of passion free,

That breathes the keen yet wholesome air

Of ragged penury.

THOMAS GRAY, On the Pleasure Arising from

Viciitudo. This stanza is said to have been added to Gray's poem by his biographer, the Rev. William Mason.

21 Poverty has no means to end its passion, yet it is not worth while to wish to be poor because of that. (Non habet, unde suum pauperis pascit anorem: Non tamen hoc tantu est, pauper ut esse velit.)

OWN, Remediorum Amoris, l. 749.

1 Poverty, when it is voluntary, is never deplorable, but takes an heroic aspect.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Pt. 1, ser. 2.

2 The loss of wealth is loss of dirt,
As sages in all times assert;
The happy man's without a shirt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry, Friends.

I hold him dch, al had he not a shirt.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 330.

3 Who can sing so merry a note
As he that cannot change a groat?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Rich men never whistle, poor men always do;
bird-songs are in the hearts of the people.

STEPHEN B. ELKINS, Speech, 1906.

4 Wrapped in my virtue, I woo honest Poverty, undowered though she be. (Virtute me involvo probamque Pauperiem sine dote quero.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode, 29, l. 55.

Content with poverty, my soul I arm;
And virtue, though in rags, will keep me warm.

HORACE, Odes, iii, 29, 55. (Dryden, tr.)

5 Yes! in the poor man's garden grow,
Far more than herbs and flowers,
Kind thoughts, contentment, peace of mind,
And joy for weary hours.

MARY HOWITT, The Poor Man's Garden.

Cultivate poverty like a garden herb, sage.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

6 The penniless traveler may sing before thieves. (Cantabit vacuus coram latrone viator)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 22.

The traveller, freighted with a little wealth, Sets forth at night, and makes his way by stealth; . . .

While, void of care, the beggar trips along,
And, in the spoiler's presence, trolls his song.

JUVENAL, Satires, x, (Gifford, tr.)

If you are empty-handed, the highwayman passes you by; even along an infested road,
the poor travel in peace. (Nudum latro transmittit;
etiam in obsessa via pauperi pax est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xiv, 10.

A poor man, that beareth no riches on him by the way, may boldly sing before thieves.

CHAUCER, Boethius. Bk. ii, prose 5.

The poor man before the thief doth sing.

11 It is not poverty that we praise, it is the man whom poverty cannot humble or bend (Laudatur enim non paupertas, sed ille, quem paupertas non summittit nec incurvat.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. 82, 11.

12 The couch of turf, softer than Tyrian purple, often soothes to fearless slumber. (Cæpes Tyrio millior ostro solet inpauidos ducere somnia)

SENECA, Hercules Cælus, l. 644.

Less wildly does Fortune rage among humble folks, and more lightly does God smite the more lightly blessed. (Minor in parvis Fortuna furit Leuiusque ferit leviora deus.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1124.

13 The town's poor seem to me often to live the most independent lives of any.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

14 By breathing in content
The keen, the wholesome, air of poverty,
And drinking from the well of homely life.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 306.

15 No man should commend poverty but he who is poor. (Nemo paupertatem commen-daret nisi pauper.)

ST BERNARD, Sermons.

He must have a great deal of godliness who can find any satisfaction in being poor.

ERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 44.

'Tis mighty easy, o'er a glass of wine,
On vain refinements vainly to refine,
To laugh at poverty in plenty's reign,
To boast of apathy when out of pain.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Fareswell, l. 47.

To be poor, and to seem poor, is a certain method never to rise.
GOLDSMITH, On Concealing Our Wants.

To be poor and seem poor is the very devil.
SM ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council, II, 7.

This mournful truth is ev'rywhere confess'd,
Slow rises worth, by poverty depress'd.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 176.

It is the world's one crime its babes grow dull,
Its poor are ex-like, limp and leaden-eyed.
Not that they starve, but starve so dreamlessly.
Not that they die, but that they die like sheep.
VACHEL LINDSAY, The Leaden-Eyed.

A blind man is a poor man, and blind a poor man is;
For the former seeth no man, and the latter no man sees.

The poor man must labor while life lasts, for idleness cannot support even the frugal life.
ALEXANDER, Fragmenta. No. 434.

A poor man, though he speak the truth, is not believed. (Pauca verba non habent vim veritatis.)
ALEXANDER, Fragmenta. No. 436.

Reverly may be an insupportable misfortune, but that no man makes it harder than a cocked eye is made honorable by the same cause.
H. L. MERRICK, Prejudices. Ser. II, p. 17.

But to the world no bugbear is so great
As want of figure and a small estate.
To either India see the merchant fly,
Scared at the spectre of pale Poverty!
See him with pains of body, pangs of soul,
Burnt thro' the Tropics, freeze beneath the Pole!
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, I, l. 67.

The prevalent fear of poverty among the educated classes is the worst moral disease from which our civilization suffers.
WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 370.

In a change of rule among the citizens, the poor change nothing except the name of their master. (In principatu commutando civium, Nil preter domini nomen mutant pauperes.)

Muney.

Worse housed than your hacks and your pointers,
Worse fed than your hogs and your sheep.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Bad Squire.

The destruction of the poor is their poverty.
Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 15.

Poverty is the only load which is the heavier the more loved ones there are to assist in supporting it.
RICHTER, Flower, Fruit, Thorn Pieces Ch. 10.

Money is very slow to come where there is poverty.
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. cl, sec. 2

They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-faced villain,
A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
A threadbare juggler, and a fortune-teller,
A needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch;
A living-dead man

VI—Poverty and Riches

2 The rich feast, the poor fast;
The dogs dine, the poor pine.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 39. (1530)

3 Poverty is an anomaly to rich people. It is very difficult to make out why people who want dinner do not ring the bell.

BAGGOT, Literary Studies. Vol. II, p. 160.

At length I recollected the thoughtless saying of a great princess, who, on being informed that the country people had no bread, replied, "Then let them eat cake." (Enfin je me rappelai le pis-aller d'une grande princesse à qui l'on disait que les paysans n'avaient pas de pain, et qui répondit: "Qu'ils mangent de la brioche.")

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU, Confessions. Bk. vi, ninth paragraph from end. Usually attributed to Marie Antoinette, after her arrival in France in 1770, but the sixth book of the Confessions was written two or three years before that date. It is difficult to translate "brioche," which is not exactly cake, but a bun or fancy bread something like Scotch scones.

Marie Antoinette made only one mistake. She should have said, "Let them eat hokum."

WESTBROOK PROLER, Fair Enough, 5 Dec., 1934.

She had an idea from the very sound
That people with naught were naughty.

HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Education.

4 God only, who made us rich, can make us poor.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from Portuguese, 24.

5 There are only two families in the world,
the Haves and the Have Nots.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 20.

That these two parties still divide the world—
Of those that want, and those that have: and still
The same old sore breaks out from age to age,
With much the same result.

TENNYSON, Walking to the Mall, l. 69.

6 A poor man who does not flatter, and a rich man who is not proud, are passable characters; but they are not equal to the poor who are cheerful, and the rich who yet love the rules of propriety.

CONFUCIUS, Analecbs. Bk. I, ch. 15.

7 The rich grow poor, the poor become purse-proud.

COWPER, Hopes, l. 18.

8 Wealth is, crize enough to him that's poor.

10 The pleasures of the rich are bought with the tears of the poor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4707.

I don't 'old with Wealth. What is Wealth? Labour robbed out of the poor.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. II, ch. 4.

11 Ye friends to truth, ye statesmen, who survey
The rich man's joys increase, the poor's decay,

'Tis yours to judge, how wide the limits stand

Between a splendid and a happy land.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 265.

The nakedness of the indigent world may be clothed from the trimmings of the vain.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 4.

12 Poverty breeds wealth; and wealth in its turn breeds poverty. The earth, to form the mould, is taken out of the ditch; and whatever may be the height of the one will be the depth of the other.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

13 The greatest luxury of riches is, that they enable you to escape so much good advice. The rich are always advising the poor, but the poor seldom venture to return the compliment.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Brevia.

14 God could have made all rich, or all men poor;

But why He did not, let me tell wherefore:
Had all been rich, where then had Patience been?

Had all been poor, who had His Bounty seen?
ROBERT HERRICK, Riches and Poverty.

15 Two of a thousand things are disallow'd,
A lying rich man, and a poor man proud.

ROBERT HERRICK, Two Things Odious.

16 My soul . . . will not own a notion so unholy,
As thinking that the rich by easy trips
May go to heav'n, whereas the poor and lowly
Must work their passage, as they do in ships.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Ros Wilson, l. 129.

17 Stitch! stitch! stitch!
In poverty, hunger, and dirt,

And still with a voice of dolorous pitch,
Would that its tone could reach the Rich,
She sang this "Song of the Shirt!"

If you are poor, distinguish yourself by your virtues; if rich, by your good deeds.

JOHNSON, Pensées. No. 74.

Rich men direct you to their furniture, poor ones divert you from it.

LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Captain Jackson.

Neither locks had they to their doors nor bars
to their windows;

But their dwellings were open as day and the hearts of the owners;

There the richest was poor and the poorest lived in abundance.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 1, l. 36.

The Little Sister of the Poor . . .

The Poor, and their concerns, she has monopolized, because of which

It falls to me to labor as

A Little Brother of the Rich.

E. S. MARTIN, A Little Brother of the Rich.

Those whom we strive to benefit

Dear to our hearts soon grow to be;

I love my Rich, and I admit

That they are very good to me.

Succor the poor, my sisters,—I

While heaven shall still vouchsafe me health

Will strive to share and mollify

The trials of abounding wealth.

But Satan now is wiser than of yore,
And tempts by making rich, not making poor

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 351.

Who am I to condemn you, O Dives,
I who am as much embittered

With poverty

As you with useless riches?

EZRA POUND, To Dives.

Bear wealth; poverty will bear itself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The pride of the rich makes the labours of the poor.

W. GURNEY BENHAM, Quotations, Proverbs, and Household Words, p. 849. Sometimes stated the other way, "The labours of the poor make the pride of the rich."

Riches come better after poverty than poverty after riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

It is still her use
To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty.

sc. 1, l. 268.

But she was rich, and he was poor,
And so it might not be.

JOHN GOSWAMY SAGE, The Way of the World.

He who has made a fair compact with poverty is rich. (Cui cum paupertas bene con-venit, dives est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. iv, 11.

A man is sheltered just as well by a thatch as by a roof of gold. (Bene hominem culme quam auro tegit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. viii, 5.

That which makes poverty a burden, makes riches also a burden. It matters little whether you lay a sick man on a wooden or a golden bed, for whithersoever he be moved he will carry his malady with him.

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epist. xvii, sec. 12.

1 No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 3, l. 17.

2 If thou art rich, thou'rt poor; For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows, Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey, And death unloads thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 25.

3 When rich villains have need of poor ones Poor ones may make what price they will.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 121.

4 Poor and content is rich and rich enough, But riches fineness is as poor as winter To him that ever fears he shall be poor.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 172.

The world affords no law to make thee rich; Then be not poor, but break it.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 73.

5 For often evil men are rich, and good men poor;

But we will not exchange with them

Our virtue for their wealth, since one abides alway,

While riches change their owners every day.

SOLOM, Fragments. Frag. 15. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 3.)

6 Many who appear to be struggling with adverse fortune are happy; and many, that wallow in wealth, are most wretched (Multos qui conflictari adversis videantur, beatos; ac plerosque, quoniam magnas per opes, miserrimos.)

POWER

9 I am more and more convinced that man is a dangerous creature; and that power, whether vested in many or a few, is ever grasping, and like the grave, cries "Give, give!"

ARIGAIL ADAMS, Letter to Her Husband, 27 Nov., 1775.

10 Give me a lever long enough, and a fulcrum strong enough, and single-handed I can move the world.

ARCHIMEDES OF SYRACUSE. (PAPPUS ALEXANDER. Collectio, viii, 10; PLINY, Historia Naturalis, vii, 37.) Sometimes quoted: "Give me where to stand and I will move the world," or "Give me a base and I will move the world."

If there were another world, and I could go to it, I could move this.

ARCHIMEDES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcellus. Ch. 14, sec. 7.)

Don't talk to me of your Archimedes' lever. . . . Give me the right word and the right accent and I will move the world.

JOSEPH CONRAD, A Personal Record: Preface.

11 The seeds of godlike power are in us still: Gods are we, Bards, Saints, Heroes, if we will.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Written in Emerson's Essays.

12 It is the solecism of power, to think to command the end, and yet not to endure the mean.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

It is a strange desire, to seek power, and to lose liberty; or to seek power over others, and to lose power over a man's self.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

13 He hath no power that hath not power to use.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Visit.

14 Energy is Eternal Delight.

15 Then wakes the power which in the age of iron Burst forth to curb the great and raise the low.

BUTLER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act iv, sc. 2.

16 The greater the power the more dangerous the abuse.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 7 Feb., 1771.

Power gradually extirpates from the mind every humane and gentle virtue.

BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

17 Dim with the mist of years, grey fits the shade of power.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto II, st. 2.

Power is no far from being desirable in itself, that it sometimes ought to be refused, and sometimes to be resigned.

CICERO, De Officiis Bk. I, ch. 20, sec. 58.

Next to the assumption of power was the responsibility of relinquishing it.

BENJAMIN DIERKELL, Speech, House of Commons, 27 May, 1841.

By his own prowess. (Suo Marte.)

CICERO, Philippica. No. II, ch. 37, sec. 95.

To know the pains of power, we must go to those who have it; to know its pleasures, we must go to those who are seeking it: the pains of power are real, its pleasures imaginary.

C. C. COLTON, Lacer. Vol. I, No. 427.

You shall have joy, or you shall have power, said God; you shall not have both.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vi, p. 282.

What is grandeur, what is power?

Heavier toil, sorer pain.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 57.

I have never been able to conceive how any rational being could propose happiness to himself from the exercise of power over others.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 18.

Power, like a devastating pestilence,

Pollutes whatever it touches.

SUMLEY, Queen Mab. Canto II, l. 176.

Whoever can do as he pleases, commands when he entreats. (Qui peut ce qui lui plaît, commande alors qu'il prie.)

CORNELLIA, Sertorius. Act iv, sc. 2.

Increase of power begets increase of wealth.

COWLEY, The Task. Bk. IV, l. 580.

The depository of power is always unpopular.

BENJAMIN DIERKELL, Coningsby Bk. IV, ch. 13.

My opinion is that power should always be distributed in whatever hands it is placed.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Letter to Lord Althorpe, 3 OCT., 1782.

All empire is no more than power in trust.

DANIEL, Adam and Eve. Pt. I, l. 411.
See also POLITICS, sec. 11.

For what can Pow'r give more than food and drink.

To live at ease, and not be bound to think?
DANIEL, The Medes, l. 735.

There is always room for a man of force,
and he makes room for liberty.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life; Power.

It was Watt who told King George III that he dealt in an article of which kings were said to be lead.—Power.

HARTMAN, Letters and Social Aims; Inspiration.

From high to higher forces
The scale of power uprears,

The heroes on their horses,
The gods upon their spheres.
EMERSON, Life.

The love of power may be as dominant in the heart of a peasant as of a prince.

J. T. HENLEY, Miscellaneous; Abbot's History of Europe.

Power, in its quality and degree, is the measure of manhood.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks; Self-Help.

Power weakeneth the wicked.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 6.

Unlimited power corrupts the possessor.

WILLIAM PITT Referring to the case of John Wilkes, 1770.

Responsibilities gravitate to the person who can shoulder them, and power flows to the man who knows how.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 50.

Patience and Gentleness is Power

LEIGH HUNT, On a Lock of Milton's Hair.

To be out of place is not necessarily to be out of power.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Debates (Works, xi, 111.)
See also POLITICS; OFFICE-HOLDING.

For when was power beneficent in vain?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene.

'Tis god-like to have power, but not to kill.

BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Chances. Act II, sc. 2. See also under GIANT.

There is nothing which power cannot believe of itself, when it is praised as equal to the gods. (Nihil est quod credere de se Non possit, quum laudatur dis æqua potestas.)

JUVENAL, Satires Sat. IV, l. 70.

O what is it proud shame will not believe
Of his own worth, to hear it equal praised
Thus with the gods?

BEN JOHNSON, Sejanus. Act I, sc. 2.

From the summit of power men no longer turn their eyes upward, but begin to look about them.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books; New England.

Little he loved, but power the most of all;
And that he seemed to scorn, as one who knew.

By what foul paths men choose to crawl thereto.

J. R. LOWELL, A Legend of Brittany. St. 17.

1 His rod revers'd,
And backward mutters of dissembling power.
MILTON, Comus, l. 216.

2 Power admits no equal, and dismisses friendship for flattery.

EDWARD MOORE, The Foundling. Act 1.

3 A partnership with the powerful is never safe. (Nunquam est fidelis cum potente so-cietas.)

PHEDRUS, Fables Bk. 1, fab. 5, l. 1.

4 Whether with Reason or with Instinct blest, Know, all enjoy that power which suits them best.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 79.

5 So mightiest powers by deepest calms are fed,

And sleep, how oft, in things that gentlest be!
BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea in Calm, l.
13.

6 The highest power may be lost by misuse.
(Male imperando summum imperium amit-titur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 373.

7 The powers that be are ordained of God.
New Testament: Romans, xiii, 1.

8 Power is always passing to the best man from the hands of his inferior. (Imperium semper ad optimum quemque a minus bono transfertur.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 2.

Power is always gradually stealing away from the many to the few, because the few are more vig-ilant and consistent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer, No. 43.

Power is ever stealing from the many to the few.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address: Public Opinion,
Boston, 28 Jan., 1852.

9 Power is easily retained by the qualities by which it was first won. (Imperium facile eis artibus retinetur quibus initio partum est.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 2.

Power is more certainly retained by wary measures than by daring counsels. (Potentium cautis quam acribus consiliis tutius haberi.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xi, sec. 29.

10 Power on an ancient consecrated throne,
Strong in possession, founded in old custom;
Power by a thousand tough and stringy roots
Fixed to the people's pious nursery-faith.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Act iv, sc. 4. (Coleridge,
tr.)

11 The Monarch drank that happy hour,
The sweetest, holiest draught of Power.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 28.

Power laid his rod of rule aside,

And Ceremony doffed his pride.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto vi, Introduction, l. 40.

his power. (Quod non potest vult posse qui nimium potest.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 215.

14 No pent-up Utica contracts your powers,
But the whole boundless continent is yours.

JONATHAN MITCHELL SEWALL, Prologue to Addison's "Cato". Written for a performance of the play at the Bow Street Theatre, Portsmouth, N. H. Sewall is drawing a parallel between the events of the American Revolution and those of the play, in which (Act i, sc. 1) occur the words, "But what can Cato do . . . Pent up in Utica?" Park Benjamin adopted the couplet as the motto of his paper, The New World.

15 The awful shadow of some unseen Power
Floats, tho' unseen, amongst us.

SHELLEY, Hymn to Intellectual Beauty, l. 1.

16 Each would the sweets of sov'reign Rule devour,

While Discord waits upon divided power.

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. 1, l. 182. (Pope, tr.)

17 Lust of power is the most flagrant of all the passions. (Cupido dominandi cunctis affecti-bus flagrantior est.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 53.

Power acquired by guilt was never used for a good purpose. (Imperium flagitio acquiritum nemo unquam bonis artibus exercuit.)

I—Praise: Definitions

1 Praise undeserv'd is satire in disguise.

BROADHURST [?], To the Celebrated Beauties of the British Court. (Bell, Fugitive Poetry. Vol. iii, p. 118.)When one good line did once my wonder raise
In Br——st's works, I stood resolv'd to praise,
And had, but that the modest author cries,
"Praise undeserv'd is satire in disguise."UNKNOWN, On a Certain Line of Mr Br——.
(The Garland, London, 1721.) This epigram, which was signed B., is the only clue to the author of this famous line. It is assumed that the name was Broadhurst.

Praise undeserv'd is scandal in disguise.

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Epistles. Bk. ii,
ep. 1, l. 413. (1733) Pope encloses the line
in quotation marks.

Why, praise is satire in these sinful days.

Reigns, more or less, and glows, in ev'ry heart:

The proud, to gain it, toils on toils endure;
The modest shun it, but to make it sure.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. 1, l. 51.

As love of pleasure into pain betrays,
So most grow infamous through love of praise
YOUNG, To the Right Hon. Mr Dodington

IV—Praise of the Living

5 Every one that has been long dead has a due proportion of praise allotted him, in which, whilst he lived, his friends were too profuse and his enemies too sparing.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 101.

To hear the world applaud the hollow ghost
Which blamed the living man.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Growing Old.

6 Him who ne'er listen'd to the voice of praise,
The silence of neglect can ne'er appall.

JAMES BRATTLE, The Minstrel. Bk. 1, st. 2.

And hearts that once beat high for praise
Now feel that pulse no more.

THOMAS MOORE, The Harp That Once Thro' Yara's Hall.

Praise cannot wound his generous spirit now.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Voyage of Columbus.
Canto 1.

They have their passing paragraphs of praise,
And are forgotten.

ROBERT BOURNE, The Victory, l. 9.

7 The pathway of the living we can beautify and grace;

We can like it deep with roses and make earth a happier place.

But we've done all mortals can do, when our prayers are softly said

For the souls of those who travel o'er the pathway of the dead.

EDWARD SPOONER, For Pathways of the Living.

8 Don't strew me with roses after I'm dead.

When Death claims the light of my brow,
No flowers of life will cheer me: Instead

You may give me my roses now!

THOMAS F. HEALEY, Give Me My Roses Now.

A rose to the living is more

Than sumptuous wreaths to the dead.

NIGRA WATERMAN, A Rose to the Living.

9 Then wherefore waste the rose's bloom
Upon the cold, insensate tomb?

Can flowery breeze, or odour's breath,
Affect the still, cold sense of death?

Oh no; I ask no balm to steep

With fragrant tears my bed of sleep:

But now, while every pulse is glowing,

Now let me breathe the balsam flowing.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode xxxii.

10 And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown,
And by the cross on which the Saviour

bled,

And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Let Something

Good Be Said.

11 Oh, friends! I pray to-night,

Keep not your roses for my dead, cold brow:
The way is lonely, let me feel them now.

ARABELLA EUGENIA SMITH, If I Should Die

To-night. Erroneously attributed to Robert

C. V. Myers, Alice Cary and Abram J. Ryan

Claimed without foundation by Irvine

Dungan. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems)

If I should die to-night,
And you should come in deepest grief and woe,
And say, "Here's that ten dollars that I owe,"

I might arise in my large white cravat

And say, "What's that?" . . .

But I'd drop dead again!

BEN KING, If I Should Die To-night.

12 Closed eyes can't see the white roses;
Cold hands can't hold them, you know!

Breath that is stilled can not gather

The odors that sweet from them blow.

Death, with a peace beyond dreaming

Its children of earth doth endow;

Life is the time we can help them—

So give them the flowers now!

UNKNOWN, Give Them the Flowers Now.

Bring me all your flowers to-day—

Whether pink, or white, or red;

I'd rather have one blossom now

Than a truckload when I'm dead.

UNKNOWN, Kindness During Life.

13 Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and pettiness sealed up until your friends are dead. . . . Fill their lives with sweetness. . . . Postmortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin o'ert no fragrance backward over the weary way.

UNKNOWN, The Diabolist Sonnet, attributed to Warren P. Lovett, George W. Childs, Ben Selling, and others.

V—Praise of Gods and Men

The praise of so mean a creature was degrading to me. (Quæ quidem conlaudatio hominis turpissimi mihi ipse erat pene turpis.)

Praise, the fine diet which we're apt to love,
If given to excess, does hurtful prove.

JOHN OLDFHAM, A Letter from the Country to a Friend in Town.

Praise is like ambergris: a little whiff of it, and by snatches, is very agreeable; but when a man holds a whole lump of it to your nose, it is a stink, and strikes you down.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 2, l. 163.

To you! to you! all song of praise is due;
Only in you my song begins and endeth.

I praise loudly, I blame softly.
CATHERINE II of RUSSIA, Musins.

1 Thus neither the praise nor the blame is our own.

COWLEY, Letter to Mr. Newton.

2 This misery these dreary souls sustain
Who passed their lives without or praise or blame. (Questo misero modo

Tengon l'anime triste di coloro,
Che visser senza infamia e senza lodo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto III, l. 34.

Now God bless all true workers, let us pray:
The night-time cometh when we all must rest:
Strive we, and do, lest by-and-by we sit
In that blind life to which all other fate
Is cause for envy; with the naked souls
Who never lived, knowing nor praise nor blame,
But kept themselves in mean neutrality,
Hateful alike to God and to His foes

EMILY HENRIETTA HICKRY, Michael Villiers, Idealist.

3 It is more shameful to be praised faintly and coldly than to be censured violently and severely. For the man who reviles is regarded as unjust and hostile, but one who praises faintly is regarded as a friend, who would like to praise but can find nothing to commend.

FAVORINUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ.
Bk. xii, ch. 3, sec. 1.)

When needs he must, yet faintly then he praises;
Somewhat the deed, much more the means he raises:

So marreth what he makes, and praising most,
dispraises.

PERCIVAL FLITCHER, The Purple Island. Canto
vii, st. 67.

Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And, without sneering, teach the rest to sneer.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 201.

Well, well, is a word of malice.

PRAYER

I—Prayer: Definitions

13 Prayer is the spirit speaking truth to Truth.
P. J. BAILEY, Fertus: Elsewhere.

Truth is what prays in man, and a man is continually at prayer when he lives according to truth.
SWEDENBORG, Apocalypse Explained, p. 493.

14 This is that incense of the heart,
Whose fragrance smells to Heaven.
NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside St. 11.

15 Prayer is the little implement
Through which men reach
Where presence is denied them.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 80.

16 Ejaculations are short prayers darted up to God on emergent occasions.

19 A single grateful thought towards heaven is the most complete prayer.
LESSING, Minda von Barnheim. Act ii, sc. 7.

20 Prayer is a strong wall and fortress of the church; it is a goodly Christian's weapon.
LUTHER, Table Talk: Of Prayer.

21 Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed,
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward glancing of an eye
Whose note—but God is near.

Prayer, the sweet ambassador to God,
The herald to prepare a better life
FRANCIS ROUS, Thide

There is a bridge, whereof the span
Is rooted in the heart of man,
And reaches, without pile or rod,
Unto the Great White Throne of God.

Its traffic is in human sighs,
Fervently wafted to the skies;
Tis the one pathway from Despair,
And it is called the Bridge of Prayer.
GILBERT THOMAS, The Unseen Bridge.

Prayer is The world in tune,
A spirit-voice, And vocal joys,
Whose echo is heaven's bliss

More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act II, sc. 3, l. 67.

A man can pray unbidden from a thicket,
And, passing by the customary thicket,

Kneel down remote upon the simple sod,
And sue in forma pauperis to God.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Ros Wilson, l. 206

Thus she stood amid the stooks,
Praising God with sweetest looks.

THOMAS HOOD, Ruth.

You should pray for a sound mind in a sound body; for a stout heart that has no fear of death. (Orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano; Fortem posce animum mortis terrore carentem.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 356.

Pray for a sound mind and for good health, first of soul and then of body. . . . Call boldly upon God; you will not be asking him for that which belongs to another.

SENeca, Epistula ad Luciliam. Epist. x, sec. 4

Let our unceasing, earnest prayer
Be, too, for light,—for strength to bear
Our portion of the weight of care,
That crushes into dumb despair
One half the human race.

LONGFELLOW, The Goblet of Life. St. 10.

O, do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Going Up to Jerusalem.
(In Visions and Tasks, p. 330.)

Full on this casement shone the wintry moon,
And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair breast,
As down she knelt for heaven's grace and boon,
Rose-bloom fell on her hands, together prest,
And on her silver cross soft amethyst,
And on her hair a glory, like a saint:
She seemed a splendid angel, newly drest,
Save wings, for heaven.

3 The prayers of Abel linked to deeds of Cain.
BYRON, The Island. Canto ii, st. 4.

4 Two went to pray? O, rather say,
One went to brag, the other to pray;
One stands up close and treads on high,
Where the other dares not lend his eye;
One nearer to God's altar trod.
The other to the altar's God.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Two Went Up to the Temple to Pray.

Prayer that craves a particular commodity, anything less than all good, is vicious. . . . Prayer as a means to a private end is meanness and theft.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

5 He who prays without confidence cannot hope that his prayers will be granted.

FENELON, Maximes: On Prayer.

6 God He rejects all Prayers that are slight,

For the blue sky bends over all!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel: Pt. I, Conclusion

4. Our vows are heard betimes! and Heaven takes care

To grant, before we can conclude the pray'r:
Preventing angels met it half the way,
And sent us back to praise, who came to pray
DRYDEN, Brianus Redux, l. 1.

5. Grant folly's prayers that hinder folly's wish,
And serve the ends of wisdom

GEORGE ELDER, The Spanish Gypsy, Bk. IV.

6. God, who's in Heaven, will hear from thence,
If not to th' sound, yet to the sense.

ROBERT HERRICK, God Hears Us.

7. Who hearkens to the gods, the gods give ear.
HOMER, Iliad Bk. I, l. 280 (Bryant, tr.)

A god when angry is moved by the voice of prayer. (Plectitur iratus voce rogante deus.)

OVID, Art Amatoria Bk. I, l. 443.

8. So spake he in prayer, and Zeus, the counsel-ler, heard him, and a part the Father granted him, and a part denied

HOMER, Iliad Bk. XVI, l. 249.

As half the prayer w' Phœbus grace did find
And t'other half he whistled down the wind
(Auditt et vult Phœbus excedere partem Mente dedit, partem volucrum disperant in auras) Vergil, Æneid, Bk. XI, l. 794. (Scott, tr., Wal-terley, Ch. 43.)

9. Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask Him.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 8.

10. Lay it to the gods to decide what is best for us and most profitable to our circumstances. (Permittit deos expedire utrumque quid Compenset nobis solvuntque sit tunc potestas.)
Juvenal, Satires, Sat. X, l. 347.

11. And it shall be given you; and ye shall find, knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 7.

Every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 8.

12. Who rises from Prayer a better man, his prayer is answered.

GEORGE MEREDITH, *The Ordeal of Richard
Fevangel*, Ch. 12.

13. My debts are large, my failures great, my shame secret and heavy; yet when I come to ask for my good, I quake in fear lest my prayer be granted

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, Gitanjali No. 28

14. I have never made but one prayer to God, a very short one. "O Lord, make my enemies ridiculous" And God granted it

VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. Damisville, 16 May, 1767.

15. When the gods wish to punish us they answer our prayers.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband Act II

Prayer must never be answered. If it is, it ceases to be prayer and becomes a correspondence

OSCAR WILDE, Remark, to Laurence Housman

VII.—Prayer: Unanswered Prayer

16. Of course I prayed—

And did God care?

He cared as much

As on the air

A bird had stamped her foot

And cried "Give me!"

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems, Pt. V, No. 38.

17. Is there never a think in the world above

Where they listen for words from below?

JEAN INGLOW, Supper at the Mill: The Milker's Song.

18. If by prayer
Incessant I could hope to change the will
Of him who all things can, I would not cease
To weary him with my assiduous cries
But prayer against his absolute decree
No more avails than breath against the wind,
Blown stifling back on him that breathes it forth:

Therefore to his great bidding I submit.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. XI, l. 307.

19. O sad estate
Of human wretchedness, so weak is man,
So ignorant and blind, that did not God
Sometimes withhold in mercy what we ask,
We should be ruined at our own request

HAMANN MANN, Mosqu in the Balkans, Pt. I,

20. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise prevent

Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act II, sc. 1, l. 5.

Who finds not Providence all good and wise,
Alike in what it gives, and what it denies?

POPE, Rhody on Man. Epia. i, l. 205.

Good when he gives, supremely good,
Nor less when he denies,
E'en crosses from his sovereign hand
Are blessings in disguise.

JAMES HERVEY, Hymns.

VIII.—Prayer: Praying

A child may say amen
To a bishop's prayer, and feel the way it goes.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. II, l. 337.

Ave Maria! 'tis the hour of prayer!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto III, st. 103.

'Twas the hour when rites unholy
Called each Paynim voice to prayer.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Turkish Lady.

Father of Light! great God of Heaven!
Hear'st thou the accents of despair?
Can guilt like man's be e'er forgiven?
Can vice atone for crimes by prayer?
BYRON, The Prayer of Nature. St. 1.

O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company.
To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends
And youths and maidens gay.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. VII.

White Captain of my soul, lead on;
I follow thee, come dark or dawn.
Only vouchsafe three things I crave:
Where terror stalks, help me be brave!
Where righteous ones can scarce endure
The siren call, help me be pure!
Where vows grow dim, and men dare do
What once they scorned, help me be true!

ROBERT FREEMAN, Prayer.

O Lord of Courage grave,
O Master of this night of Spring!
Make firm in me a heart too brave
To ask Thee anything.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, The Prayer.

Lord, dislodge us with thy blessing,
Hope, and comfort from above;
Let us catch thy peace possessing,
Triumph in redeeming love.

ROBERT HAWKINS, Benediction.

Brightest and best of the sons of the morning,
Dawn on our darkness, and lend us thine aid.
REGINALD HEBER, Epiphany.

Father, I scarcely dare to pray,
So clear I see, now it is done,
How I have wasted half my day,
And left my work but just begun.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, A Last Prayer.

Abide with me from morn till eve,
For without Thee I cannot live;
Abide with me when night is nigh,
For without Thee I dare not die.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.

And help us, this and every day,
To live more nearly as we pray.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Morning.

I kneel not now to pray that thou
Make white one single sin,—
I only kneel to thank thee, Lord,
For what I have not been.
HARRY KEMP, A Prayer.

I ask and wish not to appear
More beautiful, rich or gay:
Lord, make me wiser every year,
And better every day.
CHARLES LAMB, A Birthday Thought.

O Lord my God, I have trusted in thee;
O Jesu my dearest one, now set me free.
In prison's oppression, in sorrow's obsession,
I weary for thee.
With sighing and crying bowed down as dying,
I adore thee, I implore thee, set me free!
(O Domine Deus! speravi in te;
O care mi Jesu! nunc libera me.
In dura catena, in misera poena,
Disidero te.
Languendo, jectendo, et genuflectendo,
Adoro, imploro, ut liberares me!)

MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS. Written in her Book of Devotion before her execution. (Swinburne, tr., Mary Stewart. Act V, sc. 1.)

When the last sea is sailed and the last shallow charted,
When the last field is reaped and the last harvest stored,
When the last fire is out and the last guest departed,
Grant the last prayer that I shall pray, Be good to me, O Lord!

JOHN MASEFIELD, D'Audol's Prayer.

Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray,
My prayer shall be for others.

CHARLES D. MILES, Others.

Let not that happen which I wish, but that which is right. (Μή μου γένοιτο ἃ βούληται ἄλλ' ἃ ἐστὶν οὐκ ἔστιν.)

MEMANDER, Fragment.

Not what we wish, but what we want,
O! let thy grace supply,
The good unask'd, in mercy grant;
The ill, though ask'd, deny.

JAMES MERRICK, Hymns.

As down in the sunless retreats of the Ocean,
Sweet flowers are springing no mortal can see,
So, deep in my soul the still prayer of devotion
Unheard by the world, rises silent to Thee.
MOORE, As Down in the Sunless Retreats.

Socrates: O beloved Pan and all ye other gods of this place, grant to me that I be made beautiful in my soul within, and that all external possessions be in harmony with my inner man. May I consider the wise man rich: and may I have such wealth as only the self-restrained man can endure—Do we need anything more, Phædrus? For me that prayer is enough. Phædrus: Let me also share in this prayer; for friends have all things in common. (Κοινὰ γὰρ τὰ φίλων.)

PLATO, Phædrus. Conclusion See under FRIEND.

I prayed the prayer of Plato old:
God make thee beautiful within,
And let thine eyes the good behold
In everything save sin!
J. G. WHITTIER, My Namesake. St. 43.

Without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers.

NEW TESTAMENT: Romans, i. 9.

Farewell! if ever fondest prayer
For other's weal avail'd on high,
Mine will not all be lost in air,
But waft thy name beyond the sky.
BYRON, Farewell! If Ever Fondest Prayer.

I would not exchange the prayer of the deceased [Mrs. Sheppard] in my behalf for the united glory of Homer, Cæsar, and Napoleon, could such be accumulated upon a living head.

BYRON, Letter to Mr. Sheppard. (MOORE, Life of Byron.)

Pray, sweet, for me, that I may be Faithful to God, and thee.

EMILY BROWNETT HICKLEY, Beloved, It Is Morn.

Nymphs, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 89.

Now that the sun is gleaming bright,
Implore we, bending low,
That He, the Uncreated Light,
May guide us as we go.
ANNE DE ST. VICTOR, Guide Us, Lord. A paraphrase of an old Latin hymn, sung at the death-bed of William the Conqueror.

Now, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings
Of steel,

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 10.

Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 77.

Now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 123.

His worst fault is, that he is given to prayer;
he is something peevish that way; but nobody but has his fault.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, i. 4, 13.

She prayed, that never prayed before.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, iv, 1, 81.

Four things which are not in thy treasury,
I lay before thee, Lord, with this petition:—
My nothingness, my wants,
My sins, and my contrition

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Occasional Pieces. No. 19.

Holy Father, in thy mercy,
Hear our anxious prayer.

Keep our loved ones, now far absent,
'Neath Thy care.

ISABELLA S. STEPHENSON, Hymns.

The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep.
ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Prayer.

For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?

TENNISON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 301.

While Thee I seek, protecting Power,
Be my vain wishes stilled;
And may this consecrated hour
With better hopes be filled.

HELEN MARIA WILLIAMS, Trust in Providence.

If she, with those soft eyes in tears,
Day after day in her first years,
Must kneel and pray for grace from Thee,
What far, far deeper need have we!
How hardly, if she win not heaven,
Will our wild errors be forgiven!

NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS, "Chamber Scene."

Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner,
But a sinner must pray for himself.
CHARLES MONROE DICKINSON, The Children.
Her cushion's threadbare with her constant prayers.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 78.

I pray the prayer the Easterners do:

May the peace of Allah abide with you.

PREACHER AND PREACHING

I.—Preacher: Definitions

1 For the preacher's merit or demerit,
It were to be wished the flaws were fewer
In the earthen vessel, holding treasure
Which lies as safe in a golden ewer;
But the main thing is, does it hold good measure?

Heaven soon sets right all other matters!

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve Pt. xxii.

I praise the heart, and pity the head of him,
And refer myself to Thee, instead of him.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve Pt. xxii.

2 For his religion, it was fit
To match his learning and his wit:
'Twas Presbyterian true blue;
For he was of that stubborn crew
Of errant saints, whom all men grant
To be the true Church Militant;
Such as do build their faith upon
The holy text of pike and gun;
Decide all controversies by Infallible artillery;

And prove their doctrine orthodox,
By Apostolic blows and knocks.

BUTLER, Hudibras Pt. i, canto 1, l. 189.

3 My profession is to keep secrets.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote Pt. ii, ch. i. It is a priest speaking.

4 Priests are extremely like other men, and neither the better or worse for wearing a gown or a surplice.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1748.

Vows can't change nature; priests are only men.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. i, l. 1057.

All pastors are alike
To wand'ring sheep, resolv'd to follow none.

COWPER, The Task Bk. vi, l. 890.

5 For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord: . . . But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

New Testament: II Corinthians, iv, 5, 7.

Judge not the preacher; for he is thy Judge:
If thou malike him, thou condemn'st him not.
God calleth preaching folly. Do not grudge
To pick our treasures from an earthen pot.
The worst speak something good: If all want some,

God takes a text, and preacheth patience.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch St. 72.

6 He that negotiates between God and man,

As God's ambassador, the grand concerns
Of judgment and of mercy, should beware
Of lightness in his speech.

COWPER, The Task Bk. li, l. 461.

7 Alas for the unhappy man that is called to stand in the pulpit, and not give the bread of life.

EMERSON, Address to the Senior Class in Divinity College, Cambridge, 15 July, 1838.

tion, that God hath made mankind so weak that it must be deceived.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 221.

9 Even ministers of good things are like torches, a light to others, waste and destruction to themselves.

RICHARD HOOKER, Quoted as "that admirable saying," by Gladstone, in 1880. (MORLEY,

10 What bishops like best in their clergy is a dropping-down-deadness of manner.

SYDNEY SMITH, First Letter to Archbishop Singleton.

They admire the Vicar of Bray, whose principle was to be Vicar of Bray, whether the church was Protestant or Papish.

11 A genius in a reverend gown
Must ever keep its owner down;

'Tis an unnatural conjunction,
And spoils the credit of the function.

SWIFT, To Dr. Delany.

Now hear an allusion:—A mitre, you know,
Is divided above, but united below.

If this you consider, our emblem is right;

The bishops divide, but the clergy unite.

SWIFT, On the Irish Bishops.

12 I never saw, heard, nor read that the clergy were beloved in any nation where Christianity was the religion of the country. Nothing can render them popular but some degree of persecution.

the Testament. I Chronicles, xvi, 22, Psalms, cv, 15. The text upon which "Benefit of clergy" (Beneficium clericorum or Clericalium) was grounded. In England, the privilege was at first restricted to ecclesiastical places and persons, but in 1274 was extended to all persons who could read, and in 1691 to women. Such a person could not be put to death, but was branded on the hand. It was abolished in 1827. In America, the Congress passed an act in 1790 prohibiting benefit of clergy in any case of conviction of a capital crime.

Without Benefit of Clergy.

RUDYARD KIPPLING Title of short story Kipling used the phrase in the sense of summarized.

When want of learning kept the laymen low,
And none but priests were suffer'd to know;
When what small knowledge was, in them did dwell,

And he a god, who could hast read ar spell.
JOHN DAVISON, Religio Laici, l. 372

III - Franchise: Their Virtues

I met a painter there I know, and said:
"Hi and strength, how find you in this town?"

"Bravely" said he. "The FBI may have been much more successful in the past than they are today."

I venerate the man whose heart is warm,
Whose hands are pale, whose doctrine and whose life.

Consider, as I have said, proof
That he is honest in the same case.
Cowan, The Task Bk. n. 1. 372

Would I describe a preacher,
I would express him simple, grave, sincere,
In doctrine uncorrupt; in language plain,
And plain in manner; decent, solemn, chaste,
And natural in gesture, much impress'd
Himself, as conscious of his awful charge,
And anxious mainly that the flock he feeds
May feel it too, affectionate in look,
And tender in address, as well becomes
A messenger of grace to guilty men
Cowley, The Task Bk. h, l. 394

There, where a few torn shrubs the place disclose.

The village preacher's modest mansion rose.
A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
Nor e'er had chang'd, nor wished to change,

He watch'd and wept, he pray'd and felt, for all.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 165

At church, with meek and unaffected grace,
Him looks adorn'd the venerable place,
Truth from his lips prevail'd with double sway,
And fools, who came to scoff, remain'd to pray
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 177.

aright—

Out of an ethical work by the Stagyrate.

R. H. BARNHAM, The Brothers of Burchington.
The reference is to Aristotle, Nicomachean Ethics, sec. i, where he defines a happy man as a faultless cube.

Ooh! Father O'Flynn, you're the wonderful way wid you,
All odd shivers are wishin' to pray wid you,
All the young children are wild for to play wid
you.

You've such a way wid you, Father avick!
SHE, for all you're so gentle a soul,
Gad, you've your flock in the grandest control,

Checking the crazy ones,
Cosin' 'nashy ones,
Liftin' the lassy ones on wid the shok.
ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES, Father O'Flynn.

Once the Bishop looked grave at your jest,
Till this remark sent him off with the rest:

"Is it lave gauty
All to the laity?"

Cannot the clergy be Irishmen too?"

VI—Preaching

16 I preached as never sure to preach again,
And as a dying man to dying men.
RICHARD BAXTER, Love Breathing Thanks and Praise.

Let us, even to the wearing of our tongues to the stumps, preach and pray.
JOHN BRADFORD, Sermon on Repentance.

I shook the sermon out of my mind.
JOHN BUNYAN, Grace Abounding.

17 Well stored with pious frauds, and like most discourses of the sort, much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher than the edification of the hearers.

Set thine house in order
Old Testament, Isaiah, xxxviii, 3. (Dispute about tax.—Fargues.) Often misquoted, "Set your house in order."

To give it such a way as the greater European nations possess would be a foolish and unjust waste of the capital and the resources of the country. It would be to put on one side the fact that the military power of the country is the only power that can be relied upon for the protection of the country against the aggression of the other nations of the world.

The good sense of the people will always be found to be the best army.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings: Vol. vi, p. 131.
No nation ever had an army large enough to guarantee it against attack in case of peace or insure it victory in time of war.

paraphrase in Hugh Boyd's translation from Petrarch, made about 1870, and given below, should be noted.

The time will come when every change shall cease,
This quick revolving wheel shall rest in peace:
No summer then shall glow, nor winter freeze;
Nothing shall be to come, and nothing past,
But an eternal now shall ever last.

PETRARCH, The Triumph of Eternity, l. 119.

there sat a Fourth Estate more important far than they all

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters 1839. The statement is not found in Burke's published

EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

Magnificence cannot be cheap, for what is cheap cannot be magnificent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. v, p. 458.

2 Earth gets its price for what Earth gives us;
The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in,
The priest hath his fee who comes and shrives us,

We bargain for the graves we lie in;
At the devil's booth are all things sold,
Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of gold.
J. R. LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. 1, Prelude.

3 Things of greatest profit are set forth with least price.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues.

4 The things are most dear to us which have cost us most. (Les choses nous sont plus chères, qui nous ont plus coûté.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk. ii, ch. 8.

5 No mortal thing can bear so high a price,
But that with mortal thing it may be bought.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Love the Only Price of Love

6 The highest price a man can pay for a thing is to ask for it.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 846.

7 There is hardly anything in the world that some man cannot make a little worse and sell a little cheaper, and the people who consider price only are this man's lawful prey

Attributed to JOHN RUSKIN, but not found in his works.

All works of taste must bear a price in proportion to the skill, taste, time, and expense and risk attending their invention and manufacture. Those things called dear are, when justly estimated, the cheapest they are attended with much less profit to the artist than those which everybody calls cheap. Beautiful forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense. A competition for cheapness and not excellence of workmanship is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures.

JOSIAH WEDGEWOOD, Dearness and Cheapness.

Not how cheap, but how good.

WILLIAM MORRIS.

8 Her price is fall'n.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act i, sc. 1, l. 200.

I know my price.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act i, sc. 1, l. 10.

II—Price: "All Men Have Their Price"

9 'Tis pleasant purchasing our fellow creatures;

And all are to be sold, if you consider
Their passions, and are dextrous; some by features

Are brought up, others by a warlike leader,
Some by a place—as tend their years or natures;

But most by ready cash—but all have prices,
From crowns to kicks, according to their vices.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 27.

10 Still as of old men by themselves are priced—
For thirty pieces Judas sold himself, not Christ.

HESTER H. CHOLMONDELEY. Quoted by her sister, Mary Cholmondeley, as heading to Chapter 11, Diana Tempest. Quoted by Robert Hugh Benson at end of chapter, Herod, in Christ in the Church.

11 All those men have their price

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE (WILLIAM COXE, Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole Vol. iv, p. 369)

The context is as follows: "Flowery oratory he [Walpole] despised. He ascribed to the interested views of themselves or their relatives the declarations of pretended patriots, of whom he said, 'All those men have their price.'"

Every man has his price.

Attributed to SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, but probably a misquotation. A. F. Robbins, in the Gentleman's Magazine (No. iv, p. 589), asserts that Walpole used this phrase in a speech either in November or December, 1734. Horace Walpole denies this, and claims that it was falsely attributed to Sir Robert by his enemies. (Letter, 26 Aug., 1785.)

I know the price of every man in this house except three.

Attributed to SIR ROBERT WALPOLE. (Notes and Queries, 11 May, 1907, p. 367.) Latham's Famous Sayings and Their Authors asserts that Walpole made this remark to Lord John Leveson-Gower, and that it was from this that the misquotation, "Every man has his price" arose.

12 It is an old maxim that every man has his price.

SIR WILLIAM WYNDHAM. (The Bee, vol. viii, p. 97. 1733)

Every man is to be had one way or another, and every woman almost any way.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 June, 1750.

Every man has his price, and every woman her figure.

SENECA, Octavia, l. 457.

The shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leathern bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason waits on him.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 47.

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it: but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 162.

O how wretched

Is that poor man that hangs his prince's favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 356.

Yet in bestowing, madam,

He was most princely.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. '56.

1 Princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do
'look.

and creating a whole new Democratic world:
he had invented the Art of printing.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 5.

16 For when news is printed,
It leaves, sir, to be news; while 'tis but written.
Tho' it be ne'er so false, it runs news
still. . . .

See divers men's opinions! unto some
The very printing of 'em makes them news;
That have not the heart to believe anything
But what they see in print.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act 1, sc. 1.
The thing is written. It is true. (Cela est escrit.
Il est vray.)

RABELAIS, Works.

I love a ballad in print o' hie, for then we are

No man loveth his fetters, be they made of gold.

JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. i, ch. viii.

Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains.
MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. iv, l. 970.

¹⁰Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;

Minds innocent and quiet take

That for an hermitage;

If I have freedom in my love,

And in my soul am free,

Angels alone, that soar above,

Enjoy such liberty.

RICHARD LOVEACE, To Althea from Prison. (1642)

That which the world miscalls a jail,

A private closet is to me. . . .

Locks, bars, and solitude together met,

Make me no prisoner, but an anchorite.

LORD ARTHUR CAPEL, Written in Confinement.

(1649) Also attributed to Sir Roger L'Estrange. (Notes and Queries, 10 April, 1909, p. 288.)

Double grills with great nails, triple doors, heavy bolts, to wicked souls you represent hell; but to the innocent you are only wood, stones, iron.

There are conditions relating to its [prohibition's] enforcement which savor of a nationwide scandal. It is the most demoralizing factor in our public life.

WARREN G. HARDING, Message to Congress,
8 Dec., 1922.

Vice, crime, immorality, disease, insanity, corruption, and a general disregard for law, directly traceable to the unenforceability of the Volstead Act, are increasing with alarming rapidity.

CONGRESSMAN GEORGE J. SCHNEIDER, of Wisconsin. (Congressional Record, 69th Congress, 1st session, p. 629.)

Industry, commerce, art, literature, music, learning, entertainment, and benevolence all find their

HENRY HOEVER, *Letter to Senator William
H. Borah*, 23 Feb., 1922. Repeated by Hoover to address at Stanford University accepting the Republican nomination for President.

1 The Commission, by a large majority, does not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. I am in accord with this view.

HERBERT HOOVER, Letter of Transmittal, accompanying Wickersham Report, Jan., 1931.

We expect legislation to conform to public opinion, not public opinion to yield to legislation.

Report of Wickersham Commission, 20 Jan., 1931.

The whole subject is one of great difficulty.

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM, Interview, after submission of his report on prohibition.

Prohibition has made nothing but trouble.

ALFRED CAPONE, Newspaper interview.

2 All I kin git out o' the Wickersham position on prohibition is that the distinguished jurist seems to feel that if we'd let 'em have it the problem o' keepin' 'em from gittin' it would be greatly simplified.

KEN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 125.

3 The prohibition law, written for weaklings and derelicts, has divided the nation, like Gaul, into three parts—wets, dries, and hypocrites.

MRS. CHARLES H. SABIN, Address, 9 Feb., 1931.

4 You cannot write on the banner of the Democratic party the skull and crossbones of an outlaw trade.

JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, U. S. Senator from Arkansas, replying to Raskob's state control of liquor plan, before the Democratic National Committee, 5 March, 1931.

5 In the meantime alcohol produces a delightful social atmosphere that nothing else can produce.

7 The law of Maine will hardly take effect while the law of fermentation stands unrepealed on the pages of heaven's statute book. The strictest Sabbath edict never could keep the Puritan ale from working on Sunday.

O. W. HOLMES, Address, before the New England Society in New York, December, 1885, referring to the passage of the Maine prohibition law.

A law made to be habitually and openly violated is a faithful demoralizer of society. A law notionally despised by many that appear as its public advocates, which takes many a vote from the same head that an hour later is lifted trembling to the voter's lips with the draught that quiets at once his nerves and his conscience.

O. W. HOLMES, Address, before the New England Society in New York, December, 1885, referring to the Maine prohibition law.

8 It is mighty difficult to get drunk on 2.75 per cent beer.

HERBERT HOOVER, Statement to the Press, while Food Administrator, 5 June, 1918.

9 As for prohibition, it is going to be recorded as one of the results of the European War, foreseen by nobody.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, The Woman Question.

10 Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks seems not now an open question. Three-fourths of mankind confess the affirmative with their tongues, and I believe all the rest acknowledge it in their hearts.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, before the Washington Society of Springfield, Ill., 22 Feb., 1842.

Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of reason, in that it attempts to control a man's appetite by legislation and makes a crime out of things that are not crimes.

Statement attributed to ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in handbill circulated in 1887, during a campaign to close saloons. In Wet Slavery of Abraham Lincoln, by Albert Porter, the author says that a copy of this handbill was sent to Lincoln's biographers, Nicolay and Hay, and they declared that they were unable to discover the statement in any of his papers or speeches. Every Evening, 12 Feb., 1926, states that there are affidavits extant to the effect that Col. John B. Goodwin, of Atlanta, Ga., admitted he had fabricated the statement.

12 There is as much chance of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment as there is for a humming-bird to fly to the planet Mars with the Washington Monument tied to its tail.

MORRIS SHEPPARD, Senator from Texas, Newspaper Interview, 24 Sept., 1930.

13 We drained the flask we dared not keep And laughed and talked ourselves to sleep.

J. C. SQUIZZ, Approaching New York.

14 In the whole course of history, there's been no government that could alter the laws of nature. When by mere legislation man can stop fruit from fermenting of its own accord after it falls to the ground, he can talk about a law of prohibition. The very word destroys its meaning. You can't prohibit nature.

E. THOMAS THURSTON, Mr. Bottleby Does Something.

It was the Eighteenth Amendment that for the first time in our history challenged the integrity of the compact between the States and struck at the heart of our Federal system—the principles of local self-government.

PROVERBS AND FAMILIAR SAYINGS

I—Proverbs: Definitions

8 Certainly apothegms are of excellent use. They are "mucrones verborum," pointed speeches, Cicero prettily called them "salinas," salt pits, that you may extract salt out of and sprinkle it where you will. They serve to be interlaced in continued speech. They serve to be recited upon occasion of themselves. They serve, if you take out the kernel of them and make them your own.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms: Introduction.

This delivering of knowledge in distinct and disjointed apophorisms doth leave the wit of man more free to turn and toss, and to make use of that which is so delivered to more several purposes and applications.

FRANCIS BACON, Maxims of the Law: Preface.

There is some degree of licentiousness and error in forming axioms.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum: Summary of the Second Part. Aphorism 17.

9 The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays.

The proverbs of a nation furnish the index to its spirit, and the results of its civilization.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: An Eccecidial Essay.

Maxims are the condensed good sense of nations.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH. (Quoted on the title page of Broom's Legal Maxims.)

10 There is a certain list of vices committed in all ages, and declaimed against by all authors, which will last as long as human nature; or digested into commonplaces may serve for any theme, and never be out of date until Doomsday.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica.

11 I do not say a proverb is amiss when aptly and seasonably applied; but to be forever discharging them, right or wrong, hit or miss, renders conversation insipid and vulgar.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 43.

This formal fool, your man, speaks naught but proverbs,

And speak men what they can to him he'll answer

With some rhyme, rotten sentence, or old saying, Such spokes as ye ancient of ye parish use.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women of Abington. Sc. 3. (1599)

Sigh'd forth proverbs,
That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat,

That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich man only.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 209.

12 There is no proverb which is not true. (No hay refran que no sea verdadero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote.

13 A proverb is a short sentence based on long experience.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote.

Proverbs are the daughters of daily experience. (Spreek worden zijn dochters der dagelijkse ondervinding.)

UNKNOWN. A Dutch proverb.

14 Most maxim-mongers have preferred the prettiness to the justness of a thought, and the turn to the truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

Proverbs are art—cheap art. As a general rule they are not true; unless indeed they happen to be mere platitudes.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Gaspar Ruiz. Ch. 5.

In all pointed sentences, some degree of accuracy must be sacrificed to conciseness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. 2, p. 286.

¹ Proverbial expressions and trite sayings are the flowers of the rhetoric of a vulgar man. . . . A man of fashion never has recourse to proverbs and vulgar aphorisms.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1749.

Never utter the truism, but live it among men.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 455.

To repeat what has been said a thousand times is commonplace.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Works. Vol. i, p. 381.

² Mean narrow maxims which enslave mankind,

Ne'er from its bias warp thy settled mind.

CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 163.

The mind of man, when its daily maxims are put before it, revolts from anything so stupid, so mean, so poor.

WALTER BAGCHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. ii, p. 266.

³ A man of maxims only is like a Cyclops with one eye, and that eye placed in the back of his head.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 24 June, 1827.

⁴ Proverbs are easily made in cold blood.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 14.

⁵ Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxviii, 37.

Constant popping off of proverbs will make thee a byword thyself.

THOMAS FULLER, Intro. ad Prudentiam, i, 196.

⁶ Syllogisms do breed or rather are all the variety of man's life. They are the steps by which we walk in all our businesses.

SIR KENELM DIGBY, Man's Soul, p. 29.

⁷ The wise make proverbs and fools repeat them.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, vol. i, p. 449.

⁸ Despise not the discourse of the wise, but acquaint thyself with their proverbs; for of them thou shalt learn instruction.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, viii, 8.

⁹ He gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 9.

These proverbs, which contained the wisdom of many ages and nations, I assembled and formed into a connected discourse prefixed to the Almanack of 1757, as the harangue of a wise old man to the people attending an auction.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

Franklin's memory seems to have been wrong in this, for his reference is undoubtedly to the preface to Poor Richard for 1758.

¹⁰ Proverbs, like the sacred books of each nation, are the sanctuary of the intuitions.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

¹¹ A proverb is much matter decocted into few words.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Ch. 2.

Well short in words and well long in wit.

FRIEDRICH LORENZ, Le Somme des Vices et des Vertus. (1279) Referring to the Lord's Prayer.

¹² Don't you go believing in sayings, Picotee; they are all made by men, for their own advantage.

THOMAS HARDY, Hand of Ethelberta. Ch. 20.

¹³ Stories and sayings they will well remember.

GEORGE HERBERT, Priest to the Temple. Ch. 7.

¹⁴ There are words and maxims whereby you may soothe the pain and cast much of the malady aside. (Sunt verba et voces, quibus hunc lenire dolorem Possis et magnam morbi deponere partem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, ep. 1, l. 34. Referring to avarice.

¹⁵ The People's Voice the voice of God we call; And what are proverbs but the People's Voice?

JAMES HOWELL, Before a Great Volume of Proverbs.

¹⁶ Pointed axioms and acute replies fly loose about the world, and are assigned successively to those whom it may be the fashion to celebrate.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Waller.

¹⁷ A maxim is the exact and noble expression of an important and unquestionable truth. (Une maxime est l'expression exacte et noble d'une vérité importante et incontestable.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 137.

¹⁸ A proverb is no proverb to you till life has illustrated it.

KEATS, Letters, p. 305.

¹⁹ As I pass through my incarnations in every age and race,

I make my proper prostrations to the Gods of the Market Place.

Peering through reverent fingers, I watch them flourish and fall,

And Gods of the Copybook Headings, I notice, outlast them all.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gods of the Copybook Headings.

We were living in trees when they met us. They showed us each in turn

That Water would certainly wet us, as Fire would certainly burn:

But we found them lacking in Uplift, Vision and Breadth of Mind,
So we left them to teach the Gorillas while we followed the March of Mankind

As it will be in the future, it was at the birth of Man—

There are only four things certain since Social Progress began —

That the Dog returns to his Vomit and the Sow returns to her mire,
And the burnt Fool's bandaged finger goes wabbling back to the fire

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gods of the Copybook Headings

1 Nothing is so useless as a general maxim
MACAULAY, Essays Machiavelli

2 Proverbs are the wisdom of the streets.
W G BENHAM, Proverbs p 328

Copper coinage of wisdom is the way of proverbs
GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni Ch 40

3 A maker of maxims is synonymous with a pessimist (Maximist, pessimist)
JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest Preface

4 A proverb is one man's wit and all men's wisdom
LORD JOHN RUSSELL (MACKINTOSH, Memoirs Vol II, p 473) Usually quoted, "The wisdom of many, the wit of one"

5 Almost every wise saying has an opposite one, no less wise, to balance it
GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p 237

7 The proverb is something misty
SHAKESPEARE Hamlet Act III, sc 2, l 359
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet Act I, sc 4, l 37

A most remarkably long-headed, flowing-bearded and patriarchal proverb
DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit Ch 13

9 Patch grief with proverbs
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing Act V, sc 1, l 17

10 I can tell thee where that saying was born
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act I, sc 5, l 9
An old saying, that was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, IV, 1, 121
11 A short saying oft contains much wisdom
SOPHOCLES, Alektis Frag 99

Much of the wisdom of the world is not wisdom
EMERSON, Works Vol I, p 155

12 There is a strong feeling in favor of cowardly and prudential proverbs. Most of our pocket wisdom is conceived for the use of mediocre people, to discourage them from ambitious attempts, and generally console them in their mediocrity

R L STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth

II—Proverbs and Familiar Sayings *

The proverbs and sayings which follow are grouped alphabetically according to the key word. Only those are included here which do not fall naturally under other subject headings. "The great refusal" (il gran rifiuto), for example, will be found under Refusal

17 I will tell you in verse the cities, names and sayings of the seven sages

Cleobulus of Lindus said "Moderation is best" (Μετρεω βελιστον)

Chilon in hollow Lacedaemon said, "Know thyself" (Γνωθι σεαυτον)

Perander who dwelt in Corinth said, "Master anger" (Χόλου κρατεις)

Pittacus who was from Mtilene, said, "Nothing in excess" (Ουδεν αυγα)

And Solon in holy Athens, "Look at the end of life" (Τερα δ' οραν βιωτου)

Bias of Priene declared that "Most men are bad" (Τους πολλους κακους)

And Thales of Miletus said, "Shun suretyship" (Εγγυησθωρευ)

UNKNOWN (Greek Anthology Bk IX, epig 366)

* Only a few of the best known and most important proverbs have been included in this book. Any one interested in pursuing the subject further should consult the source-books. One of the most important of these is the collection of Latin proverbs (Sententiae), including many translations from the Greek, made by Publius Syrus about 40 B C. Erasmus also made a noteworthy collection (Adagia), translated into English by Richard Taverner in 1539. The principal early English collections are John Heywood, Proverbs (1546), John Florio, First Fruits (1578), and Second Fruits (1591), George Herbert, Jacula Prudentum (1640), James Howell, Proverbs (1659), John Ray, English Proverbs (1670), Thomas Fuller, Gnomologia (1732). There are, of course, many modern collections.

¹ "You I love, and you alone."
 "And so in love says every one."
 "Virtue alone is an estate."
 "But money's virtue, gold is fate."
 "I scorn your gold, and yet I love."
 "I'm poor; let's see how kind you'll prove."
 "Let love alone be our debate."
 "She loves enough that does not hate."
 DANIEL DEFOE, Moll Flanders, p. 103. Moll and one of her lovers are capping proverbs.

² As Love and I late harbour'd in one inn,
 With proverbs thus each other entertain:
 "In love there is no lack," thus I begin;
 "Fair words make fools," replieth he again;
 "Who spares to speak doth spare to speed,"
 quoth I;
 "As well," saith he, "too forward as too slow";
 "Fortune assists the boldest," I reply;
 "A hasty man," quoth he, "ne'er wanted woe";
 "Labour is light where love," quoth I, "doth pay";
 Saith he, "Light burden's heavy, if far borne";
 Quoth I, "The main lost, cast the by away";
 "I have spun a fair thread," he replies in
 scorn.
 And having thus awhile each other thwarted
 Fools as we met, so fools again we parted.
 MICHAEL DRAYTON, Proverbs.

A. E. I. O. U.

FREDERICK III, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire (1415-1493), had these vowels stamped upon coins and medals and inscribed upon public buildings. They were originally used at the coronation of his predecessor, Albert II, signifying, "Albertus Electus Imperator Optamus Vivat." After Frederick's coronation, the motto was changed to "Archidux Electus Imperator Optime Vivat." Still later to "Austria est imperare orbi universo" (German, "Alles Erdreich ist Oesterreich unterthan"), Austria is to rule the whole universe.

⁴ "He must be a first-rater," said Sam. "A 1," replied Mr. Roker.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers, Ch. 41.

He was six foot o' man, A 1,
 Clear gut an' human nature.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtier.

⁵ I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord.

New Testament: Revelation, i, 8. Alpha is the first and Omega the last letter of the Greek alphabet.

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

New Testament: Revelation, xii, 13.

I am not the first, and shall not be the last.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. From the Latin proverb, "Primus non sum nec inus."

Undoubtedly you have not been the first, and you will not be, as I suppose, the last.

(Vous n'avez pas été sans doute la première,

Et vous ne serez pas, que je crois, la dernière.)

MOLIÈRE, Dépit Amoureux. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 57.

⁶ Apache; les Apaches.

STODDARD DEWEY. Dewey suggested this name, in 1890, to a French reporter seeking a phrase to describe the La Chapelle gang of desperadoes who were terrorizing Paris.

⁷ To hold by the apron strings.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1678)

Between you and me and the general post.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10.

⁹ You whirled them to the back of beyond.

SCOTT, The Antiquary.

¹⁰ We saw a knot of others, about a baker's dozen.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk v, ch. 22. A baker's dozen is thirteen for twelve. At one time a heavy penalty was inflicted on bakers for short weight, and consequently they added a surplus number of loaves, called the inbred, to avoid all risk of incurring the fine. The thirteenth was the "vantage loaf."

The pleasant institution of napa—the petty gratuity added by the dealer to anything bought—grew the pleasanter, drawn out into Gallicized lagnappe

G. W. CARLE, Creoles of Louisiana. Ch. 16.

More usually spelled lagnappe, and in current use in the South, especially Louisiana.

¹¹ That bates Bannagher!

WILLIAM CARLETON, Traits and Stories of the Irish Peasantry: Three Tasks. (1830)

That bangs Banagher!

WILLIAM BLACK, White Heather. Ch. 40. (1885)

This beats Banagher.

W. B. YEATS, Fairy Tales of the Irish Peasantry, p. 196.

Banagher is a village in King's Co., on the Shannon. When anything very unusual or unexpected occurs, the people say, "Well, that bangs Banagher!"

P. W. JOYCE, English As We Speak It.

¹² All my eye and Betty Martin.

CARR, Craven Dialect, i, 128. A retort to anyone trying to humbug.

Who was Betty Martin, and wherefore should she be so often mentioned in connection with any precious eye or yours?

SOUTHWY, The Doctor. Ch. 125.

Only your eye and Miss Elizabeth Martin.

PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 158.

Big-endians and Little-endians.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Gulliver's Voyage to Lilliput. The controversy was as to whether a boiled egg should be broken at the big or little end. Big-endians signified the Catholics and Little-endians the Protestants.

The Blue Ribbon of the Turf.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, referring to the Derby. (Life of Lord George Bentinck.)

Talking of boots. (A propos de bottes.)

REGNARD, Le Dindard. A French proverb, applied to sayings or doings which are without motive or relevance. Said to have arisen in the time of Francis I, when a man who had been declared against (debouté) in a lawsuit, told the king that he had been "debotté" (debottled).

Now Dragon could kill a wolf in a brace of shakes

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 93.

The green new broom sweepeth clean.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Ah, well I wot that a new broom sweepeth clean.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues, p. 89 (1579)

His palfrey was as brown as a berry.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 207. (c. 1386)

Thy nose is as brown as a berry.

JOHN TATHAM, Love Crowns the End. (1640)

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 2.

A Big Butter-and-Egg Man.

TEXAS GUINAM, introducing from the floor of her night club in New York a generous stranger who, one night in 1924, paid all the cover charges and distributed $50 bills to the entertainers, and who refused to reveal his name, remarking only that he was in the dairy produce business. The phrase became popular as a designation for a reckless spender or a financial "angel," and was used by George Kaufman as the title for a comedy produced in 1925.

C

Your cake is dough, and all your fat in the fire.

THOMAS BECON, Prayers, 277. (1559)

My cake is dough.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act v, sc. 1, l. 145. (1594)

Set the cart before the horse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Others set carts before the horses.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 21.

To make the plough go before the horse.

JAMES I, Letter to the Lord Keeper, July, 1617.

It is folly to put the plough in front of the oxen.

(Folie est mettre la charrue devant les bœufs.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 11.

But catch who that catch might.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vii, l. 4422. (c. 1390)

They catch that catch may, keep and hold fast.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnificence, l. 1773. (1520)

There's catch as catch can, hit or miss, luck is all.

KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act ii, sc. 8. (1761)

Carthage should be destroyed. (Delenda est Carthago.)

MARCUS CATO, who ended every speech in the Roman Senate with the words, "Ceterum censeo Carthaginem esse delendam." (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 27, sec. 1. The Greek is: Καρχηδονα μὴ εἶναι.)

If I can give that Cerberus a sop, I shall be at rest for one day.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 1. Cerberus, in Roman mythology, is the three-headed dog which guards the entrance to the infernal regions. Whenever a person died, a cake was placed in his hand, to be used as a sop to Cerberus, so that the dead might pass without molestation.

To Cerberus they give a sop

His triple barking mouth to stop.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 213.

These realms huge Cerberus makes ring with his triple-throated baying, his monstrous bulk crouching in the cavern opposite. To him, seeing the snakes now bristling on his neck, the seer flung a morsel drowsy with honey and drugged meal. . . . The warder buried in sleep, Æneas wins the entrance, and swiftly leaves the bank of that stream whence none return. (Melle soporatum et medicatis frugibus offam Obicit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 417.

'Tis as cheap sitting as standing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

I believe he would make three bits of a cherry. (Je croy qu'il feroit d'une cerise trois morceaux.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 28.

The old rule of never to make two bites of a cherry.

WILLIAM MAGINN, O'Doherty's Maxims, 60. (1824)

Two Bites of a Cherry.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt ii, ch 5 (1546)

Leap they like a flounder out of a frying-pan into the fire.

SR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 179. (1557)

But I was saved, as is the flounder, when He leaped from the dish into the fire.

SR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. xiii, st. 28. (1591)

As Esop's fishes, they leap from the frying-pan into the fire itself.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. I, sec. 4, mem. 1. (1621)

As the saying is, the people who would avoid the slavery of freemen, which is smoke and appearance, has fallen under the tyranny of slaves, which is fire.

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 569.

To leap out of the hall into the kitchen, or out of Christ's blessing into the warm sun.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus. Sig. H3. (1540)

The proverb refers to the haste of the congregation to leave the church after the benediction has been pronounced.

Good king, thou must approve the common saw, That out of heaven's benediction comest To the warm sun!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 166.

Out of God's blessing into the warm sun.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. 3, ch. 4.

2 Turn every stone (ἵππτα κίρῃσαι πέτρων.)

EURIPIDES, Heracleida, l. 1002. An echo of the response given by the Delphian oracle to Polycrates, when he asked what would be the best method of finding a treasure buried by Mardonius, one of Xerxes' generals, on the field of Platæa. The oracle replied, ἵππτα λίθων κίρει, "Turn every stone." (LEUTSCH and SCHNEIDELIN, Corpus Paramiographorum Græcorum, i, 146.)

He will refuse no labour nor leave no stone untuned, to pick up a penny.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Babbitt, p. 2. (1922)
- 28 Who hit [or struck] Billy Patterson?
It has been impossible to verify any of the stories which purport to explain this expression. One story is to the effect that in a row at the corner of Baltimore and Charles Streets, Baltimore, a man named Billy Patterson was struck by somebody and went around inquiring "Who hit me?" till it became a joke. Another is that a student at a medical college died from fright during a hazing some eighty years ago, after being struck a mock blow, and at the inquest the great question was "Who struck Billy Patterson?" until it developed that no one had really struck him. Still another version places the locale at Lancaster, Pa.

Gibson has drawn the true American girl.
He is the American Du Maurier. . . . As soon as the world saw Gibson's ideal it bowed down in adoration, saying: "Lo, at last the typical American girl." . . . The girls themselves held her as their portrait and strove to live up to the likeness. Thus did nature follow in the footsteps of art and thus did the Gibson girl become legion.

III—Providence: Its Beneficence

- 1 Confide ye aye in Providence,
For Providence is kind:
An' bear ye a' life's changes
Wi' a calm an' tranquil mind.
Tho' pressed and hemmed on every side,
Ha'e faith, an' ye'll win through;
For ilka blade o' grass
Keeps its ain drap o' dew.

- "Oh! pilot, 'tis a fearful night,
There's danger on the deep!
I'll come and pace the deck with thee,
I do not dare to sleep."
"Go down!" the sailor cried, "go down!
This is no place for thee;
Fear not, but trust in Providence,
Wherever thou mayst be."
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLE, The Pilot.
- 2 Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
But trust Him for His grace;
Behind a frowning Providence
He hides a smiling face.
COWPER, Light Skinning Out of Darkness.
- 3 We sometimes had those little rubs which Providence sends to enhance the value of its favours.
GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 1.
- 4 We ought to feel deep cheerfulness, as I may say, that a happy Providence kept it from being any worse.

- 7 Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?
and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father.
New Testament: Matthew, xi, 29.
He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age!
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 43.
There's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 't is not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 130.

- 8 Eye me, blest Providence, and square my trial
To my proportion'd strength.
MILTON, Comus, l. 329.
- 9 The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxd, 6.
- 10 Come wealth or want, come good or ill,
Let young and old accept their part,
And bow before the Awful Will,
And bear it with an honest heart.
THACKERAY, The End of the Play.
- 11 So, darkness in the pathway of Man's life
Is but the shadow of God's providence,
By the great Sun of Wisdom cast thereon;
And what is dark below is light in Heaven.
WHITTIER, Tasler, l. 79.
- 12 While Thee I seek, protecting Power,
Be my vain wishes stilled;
And may this consecrated hour
With better hopes be filled.
HELEN MARIA WILLIAMS, Trust in Providence.
- 13 We rather think, with grateful mind sedate,
How Providence educeth from the spring
Of lawless will, unlooked for streams of good,
Which neither force shall check nor time abate.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 4. Of Henry VIII.

3 Make haste slowly (Συγνῆσθαι βραδύως)

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ Bk 1, ch 11, sec 5) Aulus Gellius says that the Emperor used these two Greek words in conversation and in his letters, by which he recommended that to accomplish a result we should use at once the promptness of energy and the delay of carefulness Suetonius (Lives of the Cæsars: The Deified Augustus, xiv, 4) attributes to him the familiar Latin form, "Festina lente
Franklin used it in Poor Richard, April, 1744. The German form is, "Eile mit Weile"

and Criseyde*, bk 1, l 956

V—Prudence: Two Strings to the Bow

7 I will well that every man be amorous and love but that he have two strings on his bow
WILLIAM CAXTON, Jason, 57 (c 1477)

'Tis true no lover has that pow'r
To enforce a desperate amour,
As he that has two strings t' his bow,
And burns for love and money too
BUTLER, Hudibras Pt 3, canto 1, l 1

8 I hope you will remember that who seeketh two strings to one bow, he may shoot strong but never straight

QUEEN ELIZABETH, Letter to James VI (Letters No 10 1585)

Yes, I had two strings to my bow, both golden ones egad! and both cracked

If thou meet a red man and a bearded woman, greet them three mile off.

JOHN FLORIO, First Frutes. Fo. 30. (1578)

The red is wise, the brown trusty;
The pale envious, and the black lusty. . . .

To a red man read thy rede,

With a brown man break thy bread,

At a pale man draw thy knife,

From a black man keep thy wife.

ROBERT TOSTE, Blason of Jealousy, 21. (1615)

He is false by nature that has a black head and a red beard.

20 You have only, when before your glass, to keep pronouncing to yourself nimini-pimini; the lips cannot help taking their plice.

JOHN BURGOYNE, The Heiress. Act iii, sc. 2.

Father is rather vulgar, my dear. The word Papa, besides, gives a very pretty form to the lips. Papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes, and prism are all very good words for the lips; especially prunes and prism. You will find it serviceable, in the formation of a demenzaour, if you sometimes say to yourself in company—on entering a room, for instance—Papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes and prism.

9 The great art in writing advertisements is the finding out a proper method to catch the reader's eye, without which a good thing may pass over unobserved, or be lost among commissions of bankrupt

ADDISON, The Tatler No 224.

Advertisements are of great use to the vulgar. First of all, as they are instruments of ambition. A man that is by no means big enough for the Gazette, may easily creep into the advertisements, by which means we often see an apothecary in the same paper of news with a plenipotentiary, or a running footman with an ambassador

PUN

I—Puns; Their Faults and Virtues

13 The seeds of punning are in the minds of all men, and though they may be subdued by reason, reflection, and good sense, they will be very apt to shoot up in the greatest genius

ADDISON, The Spectator No 61

A turn for punning, call it Attic salt

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l 68

14 But still a pun I do detest,
'Tis such a paltry humbug jest

It is a smaller thing to suffer punishment than to have deserved it. . . . The punishment can be removed, the fault will remain forever. (Estque pati poenam, quam meruisse, minus. . . . Poena potest demi, culpa perennis erit.)

OVIN, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 62.

Patiently must we bear whatever suffering is our desert; the punishment which comes without deserving, comes as a matter for bewailing. (Lentiter, ex merito quidquid patiare, ferendum est; Quæ venit indigno poena, delenda venit.)

OVIN, Heroides. Eleg. v, l. 7.

But if the first Eve
Hard doom did receive,
When only one apple had she,
What a punishment new
Shall be found out for you,
Who tasting have robb'd the whole tree?
Forc. To Lady Mary Wortley Montagu.

The time that precedes punishment is the severest part of it. (Quod antecedit tempus, maxima venturi supplicii pars est.)

SENeca, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, sec. 5.

Bid that welcome

Which comes to punish us, and we punish it
Seeming to bear it lightly.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 14, 36.

Let death come now! 'tis right to die!

Right to be punished!

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes.

There needeth not the hell that bigots frame
To punish those who err: Earth in itself
Contains at once the evil and the cure;
And all-sufficing Nature can chastise
Those who transgress her law,—she only knows

How justly to proportion to the fault
The punishment it merits.

SHRELLY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 79.

That's the penalty we have to pay for our acts of foolishness,—someone else always suffers for them.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Perfect Lover. Act ii.

Every great example of punishment has in it some injustice, but the suffering individual is compensated by the public good. (Habet aliquid ex iniquo omne magnum exemplum, quod contra singulos, utilitate publica rependitur.)

There is no den in the wide world to hide a rogue. Commit a crime, and the earth is made of glass. . . . The laws and substances of nature become penalties to the thief.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Crime and punishment grow out of one stem.
Punishment is a fruit that unsuspected ripens within the flower of the pleasure which concealed it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

That is the bitterest of all,—to wear the yoke of our own wrong-doing.

4 Good luck frees many men from punishment, but no man from fear. (Multos fortuna liberat poena, metu neminem.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 15.

5 Crime can never go unpunished, since the punishment of crime lies in the crime itself.
(Nec ullum scelus . . . impunitum est, quoniam sceleris in scelere supplicium est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 14.

The greatest chastisement that a man may receive who hath outraged another, is to have done the outrage; and there is no man who is so rudely punished as he that is subject to the whip of his own repentance.

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 26.

Disgrace does not consist in the punishment, but in the crime. (Non nella pena, Nell' delitto è la infamia.)

11 Forty stripes save one.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 24.

A rod is for the back of him that is void of understanding.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 13.

A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 3.

Judgments are prepared for scorers, and stripes
for the back of fools.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 29.

12a She sifted the meal, she gimme the buss;
She baked the bread, she gimme the crus';
She biled the meat, she gimme the bone;
She gimme a kick, and sent me home!

DAVID CROCKETT, of an aunt who had treated him shabbily when he was a boy. (Century Magazine, April, 1894, p. 351.)

12 'Tis I that call, remember Milo's end,
Wedged in that timber which he strove to rend.

16 Say-all-you-know shall go with clouted head,
Say-nought-at-all is beaten.

WILLIAM MORRIS, *The Earthly Paradise: The
Lovers of Gudrun*, l. 121.

17 My father hath chastised you with whips,
but I will chastise you with scorpions.

Old Testament: I Kings, xii, 11; II Chronicles, x, 14.

20 Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingering pickle.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 5, l. 65.

For him at least I have a rod in pickle.

KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act ii, sc. 1.

Something lingering, with boiling oil in it, I fancy.
Something of that sort. I think boiling oil occurs in it, but I'm not sure, I know it's something humorous, but lingering, with either boiling oil or melted lead.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

1 Off with his guilty head!

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act V, sc. 5, l. 3.

Off with his head—so much for Buckingham!
CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act IV, sc. 3.

Your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolved him with an axe.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act III, sc. 2, l. 263.

2 Pinch the maids as blue as bilberry.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act V, sc. 5, l. 49.

Some of us will smart for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act V, sc. 1, l. 109.

3 You will have words for your punishment, but for me there will be blows. (Tibi erunt parata verba, huic homini verbera.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 356. (Act II, sc. 3.)

7 It never frightened a Puritan when you bade him stand still and listen to the speech of God. His closet and his church were full of the reverberations of the awful, gracious, beautiful voice for which he listened

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Sermons: The Seriousness of Life.

He made little, too little of sacraments and priests, because God was so intensely real to him. What should he do with lenses who stood thus full in the torrent of the sunshine.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Sermons: The Seriousness of Life.

8 A sect, whose chief devotion lies
In odd perverse antipathies;

In falling out with that or this,

And finding somewhat still amiss;

More peevish, cross, and spleenetic;

Than dog distract, or monkey sick:

That with more care keep holy day

The wrong, than others the right way;

Compound for sins they are inclin'd to,
By damning those they have no mind to:
Still so perverse and opposite,
As if they worshipp'd God for spite.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. I, canto I, l. 207.

9 A puritan is a person who pours righteous indignation into the wrong things.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Interview, N. Y. Times, 21 Nov., 1930.

10 There was a State without kings or nobles; there was a church without a bishop; there was a people governed by grave magistrates which it had elected, and equal laws which it had framed.

RUFUS CHOATE, Speech, before the New England Society, 22 Dec., 1843.

It [Calvinism] established a religion without a prelate, a government without a king.

GEORGE BANCROFT, History of the United States. Vol III, ch. 6.

Oh, we are weary pilgrims; to this wilderness we bring

A Church without a bishop, a State without a King.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Thanksgiving.

12 The Puritan through Life's sweet garden goes
To pluck the thorn and cast away the rose,
And hopes to please by this peculiar whim.
The God who fashioned it and gave it him.

KENNETH HARE, The Puritan.

13 My Fathers and Brethren, this is never to be forgotten that New England is originally a plantation of religion, not a plantation of trade

JOHN HIGGINSON, Election Sermon, 27 May, 1663.

14 He had stiff knees, the Puritan,
That were not good at bending.

J. R. LOWELL, An Interview with Miles Standish St. 12.

15 Puritanism, believing itself quick with the seed of religious liberty, laid, without knowing it, the egg of democracy.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

Puritanism meant something when Captain Hodgson, riding out to battle through the morning mist, turns over the command of his troop to a lieutenant, and stays to hear the prayer of a comrade, there was "too much of God in it."

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

1 The Puritan hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 2. Even bear-baiting was esteemed heathenish and unchristian: the sport of it, not the inhumanity, gave offence.

HUME, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 62.

2 As Puritans they prominently wax, And none more kindly gives and takes hard knocks.

Strong psalmic chanting, like to nasal cocks, They join to thunderings of their hearty thwacks.

But naughtiness, with hoggerly, not lacks.

GEORGE MEREDITH, A Certain People.

3 What the Puritans gave the world was not thought, but action.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 21 Dec., 1855.

The Puritan did not stop to think; he recognized God in his soul, and acted.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 18 Dec., 1859.

4 The Puritan was not a man of speculation. He originated nothing. His principles are to be found broadcast in the centuries behind him. His speculations were all old. . . . The distinction between his case and that of others was simply that he practised what he believed.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, The Puritan Principle.

I.—Quarrelling: Definitions and Apophthegms

13 When civil dudgeon first grew high,
And men fell out, they knew not why;
When hard words, jealousies and fears,
Set folks together by the ears,
And made them fight, like mad or drunk,
For dame Religion as for punk; . . .
Then did Sir Knight abandon dwelling,
And out he rode a colonelling.

Must often wipe a bloody nose.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 34; FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

So when two dogs are fighting in the streets,
When a third dog one of the two dogs meets:
With angry teeth he bites him to the bone,
And this dog smarts for what that dog has done.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act I, sc. 5, l. 55.

Thus when a barber and collier fight,
The barber beats the luckless collier—white;
The dusty collier heaves his ponderous sack,
And, big with vengeance, beats the barber—black.

In comes the brick-dust man, with grime o'er-spread,

And beats the collier and the barber—red;
Black, red, and white, in various clouds are toss'd,
And in the dust they raise the combatants are lost.

RAILROAD

The progress of invention is really a threat.
Whenever I see a railroad I look for a republic.

EMERSON, Journals, 1866.

These railroads—could but the whistle be made musical, and the rumble and the jar got rid of—are positively the greatest blessing that the ages have wrought out for us. They give us wings; they annihilate the toil and dust of pilgrimage; they spiritualize travel!

For forty days it will remain

UNKNOWN, old adage concerning St Swithin's day, July 15 The French have a similar rhyme about St Medard's day, June 8

Now if on Swithin's feast the welkin lours,
And every penthouse streams with hasty showers,
Twice twenty days shall clouds their fleeces drape
And wash the pavements with incessant rain
JOHN GAY, Trivia Bk 1, l 182

O here, 'St Swithin's, the 15 day, variable weather, for the most part rain,' good! 'for the most part rain' Why, it should rain forty days after, now, more or less"

The rainbow brightens to the setting Sun!
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 30.

5 'Tis sweet to view on high
The rainbow, based on ocean, span the sky.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 122.

6 Triumphant arch, that fill'st the sky
When storms prepare to part,
I ask not proud Philosophy
To teach me what thou art.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Rainbow. St. 1.

Still seen, as to my childhood's sight,
A midway station given
For happy spirits to alight
Betwixt the earth and heaven.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Rainbow. St. 2.

RAKE

1 He was a rake among scholars and a scholar among rakes.

MACAULAY, Essays: Aiken's Life of Addison.

2 Women who like, and will have for a hero, a rake! how soon are you not to learn that you have taken bankrupts to your bosoms, and that the putrescent gold that attracted you is the slime of the Lake of Sin!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 15.

3 Every woman is at heart a rake.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 216. See 1255:3
Few men can be men of pleasure, every man may be a rake.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

4 A reformed rake makes the best husband.
W. G. BENJAMIN, Proverbs, p. 727. "Rake," an abbreviation of "rake-hell," dates from 1663.

RAT

5 It is the wisdom of rats, that will be sure to leave a house somewhat before it fall.

BACON, Essays: Of Wisdom for a Man's Self.
It is a great house still, . . . but it is a ruin none the less, and the rats fly from it.

DICKENS, Domby and Son. Ch. 59.

A rotten carcass of a boat, . . . the very rats instinctively have quit it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 5.

6 Anything like the sound of a rat
Makes my heart go pit-a-pat!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper.

7 Yf they smell a ratt,
They grisely chide and chatt.

JOHN SKELTON, The Image of Hypocrisy. (c. 1520) Works, i, 51. (1843)

I smell a rat.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt, Master-Constable.
Act iv, sc. 1. (1602)

Now you talk of a cat, Cicely, I smell a rat.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed with Kindness. Act iv, sc. 4. (1603)

Do you not smell a rat?

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 3. (1633)

Quoth Hudibras, I smell a rat;
Ralpho, thou dost prevaricate.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 821. (1663) Frequently thereafter.

8 The rat is the concisest tenant.
He pays no rent,— . . .
Hate cannot harm
A foe so reticent.

EMERY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 35.

9 Too late repents the rat when caught by the cat.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 165.

10 Die here in a rage, like a poisoned rat in a hole.

SWIFT, Letter to Bolingbroke, 21 March, 1729.

RAVEN

11 The raven said to the rook, "Stand away, black coat!"

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4729.

Thou art a bitter bird, said the raven to the starling.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 195.

12 He pardons ravens but storms at doves.
(Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63.

Who will not change a raven for a dove?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 114.

13 Rarer even than a white raven. (Corvo quoque rarior albo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 202.

14 Beware of the Raven at Zurich,

'Tis a bird of omen ill;

A noisy and an unclean bird,
With a very, very long bill.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Journal, 11 Aug., 1836.

The entry is as follows: "Prepared to leave Zurich. At the Hotel du Corbeau they brought us a most exorbitant bill, whereupon I made the following beautiful lines." The quatrain is repeated, with minor variations, in Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

15 He [Grenville] was the raven of the House of Commons, always croaking defeat in the midst of triumphs.

MACAULAY, Essays: The Earl of Chatham.

16 The Raven's house is built with reeds,—
Sing woe, and alas is me!

And the Raven's couch is spread with weeds,
High on the hollow tree;

And the Raven himself, telling his beads
In penance for his past misdeeds,

Upon the top I see.

THOMAS D'ARCY MCGEE, The Penitent Raven.

17 The raven once in snowy plumes was drest,
White as the whitest dove's unsullied breast,
Fair as the guardian of the Capitol,
Soft as the swan; a large and lovely fowl,
His tongue, his prating tongue has changed him quite.

To sooty blackness from the purest white.
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. E, l. 569. (Addison, tr.)

1 It wasn't for nothing—that raven croaking on my left hand just now. (Non temere est quod corvos cantat nunc ab leva manu.)
PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 624. (Act iv, sc. 3.)

That raven on yon left-hand oak (Curse on his ill-boding croak)
Bodes me no good.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven, l. 27. See also SUPERSTITION: OMENS.

2 Ghastly, grim, and ancient Raven, wandering from the nightly shore,—
Tell me what thy lordly name is on the night's Plutonian shore?

Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore!"
EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven, St. 8.

Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door!
Quoth the Raven, "Nevermore!"

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven, St. 17.

And the Raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting

On the pallid bust of Pallas just above my chamber door;

And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon's that is dreaming,

And the lamplight o'er him streaming throws his shadow on the floor;

And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor,

Shall be lifted—nevermore!

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven, St. 18.

Raven from the dim dominions
On the Night's Plutonian shore,

Oft I hear thy dusky pinions
Wave and flutter round my door—

See the shadow of thy pinions
Float along the moonlit floor.

SARAH HELEN POWER WHITMAN, The Raven.

3 Bring up a raven and it will peck out your eyes.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, 745. Spanish.

4 The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 264.

5 O, it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 20.

6 Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 158.

READING

7 1.—Reading: How to Read

Read not to contradict and confute; nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse; but to weigh and consider.

Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested: that is, some books are to be read only in parts, others to be read, but not curiously, and some few to be read wholly, and with diligence and attention.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Some books are only cursorily to be tasted of.

FULLER, Holy and Profane State: Of Books.

8 All rests with those who read. A work or thought

Is what each makes it to himself.

11 It is impossible to read properly without using all one's engine-power. If we are not tired after reading, common-sense is not in us.

ARNOLD BENNETT, Things that Have Interested Me: Translating Literature into Life.

12 We get no good

By being ungenerous, even to a book,
And calculating profits,—so much help
By so much reading. It is rather when
We gloriously forget ourselves and plunge
Soul-forward, headlong, into a book's profound,

Impassioned for its beauty and salt of truth—

'Tis then we get the right good from a book.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 702.

13 If that thou wilt not read, let it alone;

III—Reading: Its Benefits

16 Reading is to the mind, what exercise is to the body. As by the one, health is preserved, strengthened, and invigorated; by the other, virtue, which is the health of the mind, is kept alive, cherished, and confirmed.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 147.

17 Reading maketh a full man; conference a ready man; and writing an exact man.

FRANCIS BACON, Maxims: Of Studies.

Reading makes a full man—meditation a profound man—discourse a clear man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

1 Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; morals, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Books have always a secret influence on the understanding; we cannot at pleasure obliterate ideas: he that reads books of science, though without any fixed desire of improvement, will grow more knowing; he that entertains himself with moral or religious treatises, will imperceptibly advance in goodness; the ideas which are often offered to the mind, will at last find a lucky moment when it is disposed to receive them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 137.

2 Of all the human relaxations which are free from guilt, none so dignified as reading.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Ruminator. No. 24.

3 Who is he . . . that will not be much lightened in his mind by reading of some enticing story, true or feigned?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

4 Let us assume that entertainment is the sole end of reading; even so, I think you would hold that no mental employment is so broadening to the sympathies or so enlightening to the understanding. Other pursuits belong not to all times, all ages, all conditions; but this gives stimulus to our youth and diversion to our old age; this adds a charm to success, and offers a haven of consolation to failure. Through the night-watches, on all our journeyings, and in our hours of ease, it is our un-failing companion.

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. vii, sec. 16.

5 Ah! happy he who thus, in magic themes
O'er worlds bewitch'd, in early rapture dreams,

Where wild Enchantment waves her potent
wand,

And Fancy's beauties fill her fairy land.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 563.

6 The delight of opening a new pursuit, or a new course of reading, imparts the vivacity and novelty of youth even to old age.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 72.

7 Our high respect for a well-read man is praise enough of literature.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

If we encountered a man of rare intellect, we should ask him what books he read.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

It is a tie between men to have read the same book.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

8 My early and invincible love of reading, . . . I would not exchange for the treasures of India.

EDWARD GIBSON, Memoirs.

9 He that loves reading, has everything within his reach. He has but to desire, and he may possess himself of every species of wisdom to judge and power to perform.

WILLIAM GODWIN, Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

10 In a polite age, almost every person becomes a reader, and receives more instruction from the Press than the Pulpit.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 75.

The first time I read an excellent book, it is to me just as if I had gained a new friend: when I read over a book I have perused before, it resembles the meeting with an old one.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 83.

11 Every reader who holds a book in his hand is free of the inmost minds of men past and present; . . . he needs no introduction to the greatest.

FREDERIC HARRISON, The Choice of Books, p. 7.

12 Read anything five hours a day, and you will soon be learned.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

13 I love to lose myself in other men's minds. When I am not walking, I am reading; I cannot sit and think. Books think for me.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading.

14 Have you ever rightly considered what the mere ability to read means? That it is the key which admits us to the whole world of thought and fancy and imagination? to the company of saint and sage, of the wisest and the wittiest at their wisest and wittiest moment? That it enables us to see with the keenest eyes, hear with the finest ears, and listen to the sweetest voices of all time?

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy and Other Addresses: Books and Libraries.

15 I was so allured to read that no recreation came to me better welcome.

MILTON, An Apology for Smectymnus.

16 He that I am reading seems always to have the most force.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 12.

17 To love to read is to exchange hours of ennui for hours of delight.

MONTAIGNE, Pensées.

1 Reading nourishes the mind, and refreshes it when it is wearied with study, though not without study. (Alit lectio ingenium et studio fatigatum, non sine studio tamen, reficit.)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. lxxiv, 1.

2 He reads much;
He is a great observer and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 201.

Exceedingly well read.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 166.

One who, to all the heights of learning bred,
Read books and men, and practised what he read.

GEORGE STEPHENY, To the Earl of Carlisle.

3 He hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 25.

4 People say that life is the thing, but I prefer reading.

LOCAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

5 Give a man a pipe he can smoke,
Give a man a book he can read:
And his home is bright with a calm delight,
Though the room be poor indeed.

JAMES THOMSON, Gifts.

6 The habit of reading is the only enjoyment in which there is no alloy; it lasts when all other pleasures fade.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Speech, 7 Dec., 1868.

IV—Reading: Its Dangers

7 But so many books thou reatest,
But so many schemes thou breedest,
But so many wishes feedest,
That thy poor head almost turns.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Second Best.

8 Affects all books of past and modern ages,
But reads no further than their title-pages.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satires: Human Learning.

9 Kiss the book's outside, who ne'er look within.
COWPER, Expostulation, l. 389.

10 And let a scholar all Earth's volumes carry,
He will be but a walking dictionary.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Tears of Peace, l. 270.

11 With various readings stored his empty skull,
Learn'd without sense, and venerably dull.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rivals, l. 591.

12 A man may as well expect to grow stronger by always eating as wiser by always reading.

... 'Tis thought and digestion which makes books serviceable, and gives health and vigour to the mind.

JEREMY COLLIER, Essays: Of the Entertainment of Books.

12 Guanoed her mind by reading French novels.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

13 Those book-learned fools who miss the world.
JOHN DRINKWATER, From Generation to Generation.

14 You will see me any morning in the park
Reading the comics and the sporting page.
Particularly I remark

An English countess goes upon the stage,
A Greek was murdered at a Polish dance,
Another bank defaulter has confessed.
I keep my countenance.

T. S. ELIOT, Portrait of a Lady.

15 He might be a very clever man by nature for aught I know, but he laid so many books upon his head that his brains could not move.

ROBERT HALL, (GREGORY, Life of Hall.) Referring to Kippis.

16 Reading is sometimes an ingenious device for avoiding thought.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

17 If I had spent as much time in reading as other men of learning, I should have been as ignorant as they.

THOMAS HOBBS, (D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Vol. ii, p. 179.)

18 He has left off reading altogether, to the great improvement of his originality.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading.

19 Reading furnishes the mind only with materials of knowledge; it is thinking makes what we read ours.

JOHN LOCKE, Conduct of Understanding: Sec. 20, Reading.

Reading without thinking may indeed make a rich common-place, but 'twill never make a clear head.

JOHN NORRIS, Of the Advantages of Thinking.

20 Night after night,
He sat and bleared his eyes with books.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. 1.

21 For reading new books is like eating new bread,

One can bear it at first, but by gradual steps he

Is brought to death's door of a mental dyspepsy.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 104.

¹
A reading-machine, always wound up and going.
He mastered whatever was not worth the knowing.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 164.

In books a prodigal, they say,
A living cyclopedia.

COTTON MATHER, Epitaph on Anne Bradstreet.

²
His classical reading is great: he can quote
Horace, Juvenal, Ovid and Martial by rote.
He has read Metaphysics, . . . Spinoza and Kant.

And Theology too: I have heard him descant
Upon Basil and Jerome. Antiquities, art,
He is fond of. He knows the old masters by heart.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Canto ii, pt. 4.

³
Who reads
Incessantly, and to his reading brings not
A spirit and judgment equal or superior, . . .
Uncertain and unsettled still remains,
Deep vers'd in books and shallow in himself.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 322.

⁴
For men that read much and work little are as bells, the which do sound to call others, and they themselves never enter into the church.
THOMAS NORTH, Diall of Princes, 138 (1557)

⁵
More true knowledge comes by meditation than by reading; for much reading is an oppression of the mind, and extinguishes the natural candle, which is the reason of so many senseless scholars in the world
WILLIAM PENN, Advice to His Children.

⁶
The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read,
With loads of learned lumber in his head,
With his own tongue still edifies his ears,
And always list'ning to himself appears.
PORT, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 53.

⁷
In reading of many books is distraction.
(Distringit librorum multitudo.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. ii, sec. 3.

⁸
To pass from hearing literature to reading it is to take a great and dangerous step.
R. L. STEVENSON, Random Memories.

⁹
Who readeth much, and never meditates,
Is like the greedy eater of much food,
Who so surcloys his stomach with his cates,
That commonly they do him little good.
JOSHUA SYLVESTER, Tetrasticha.

¹⁰
Verily, when the day of judgment comes, we shall not be asked what we have read, but what we have done.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 3.

V—Reading and Running

¹¹
But truths on which depends our main concern.

That 'tis our shame and mis'ry not to learn,
Shine by the side of ev'ry path we tread
With such a lustre, he that runs may read.
COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 77.

¹²
And reads, though running, all these needful motions
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 1. (Sylvestre, tr.)

¹³
Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.
Old Testament: Habakkuk, ii, 2. Frequently misquoted, "that he who runs may read."

Read my little fable:
He that runs may read.
TENNYSON, The Flower. St. 5.

Every man's reason is every man's oracle.
LORD BOLINGBROKE, Of the True Use of Retirement and Study. Letter ii.

Every man's own reason is his best Cædipus.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 6.

Your own reason is the only oracle given you by heaven, and you are answerable for, not the rightness, but the uprightness of the decision.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 178.

Reason is my augury, and my interpretation of the future; by it I have practised divination, and obtained knowledge. (Augurium ratio est, et conjectura futuri. Hac divinavi notitiamque tuli.)
OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 51.

¹⁵
Wherefore I assert:—if Reason's only function were to heighten our pleasure, that were vindication enough

ROBERT BRIDGES, Testament of Beauty. Bk. i,
l. 202.

¹⁶
Reason is Life's sole arbiter, the magic Labyrinth's single clue.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kastak. Pt. vii, st. 22.

¹⁷
Reason to rule and mercy to forgive;
The first is law, the last prerogative.
DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 261.

Reason is not measured by size or height, but by principle. (Ἀφ' οὗ γὰρ ἀρχήσθε αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ λόγου ἐκτείνετε, ἀλλὰ δὲ πᾶσι.)

REASONABLE, Discourses. Ch. 12, sec. 26.

To a rational being, to act according to nature and according to reason is the same thing. (Τὸ ἡγούμενόν ἐστι τὸ ἀπὸ φύσεως κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ καὶ κατὰ λόγον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, 11.

Unto the good their reason ever is a god. (Θεὸς ἐστὶ τοῖς χρηστοῖς δαὶ ὁ νοῦς γὰρ, ὅς τοι καὶ.)

MEKANDER, Adelphoi. Frag. 11.

Say first, of God above or Man below
What can we reason but from what we know?
POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. i, l. 17.

The soul of man is divided into three parts, intelligence, reason, and passion. Intelligence and passion are possessed by other animals, but reason by man alone. . . . Reason is immortal, all else is mortal.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 30.)

Reason is nothing else but a portion of the divine spirit set in a human body. (Ratio autem nihil aliud est quam in corpus humanum pars divini spiritus mersa.)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epist. lxxi, 12.

Reason, the choicest gift bestowed by heaven. (Φρόνη, πᾶσι δὲ ἐστὶ κορυφαῖος ἐπιπράτος.)

It must be so,—Plato, thou reason'st well!
ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1, l. 1.

Sweet reasonableness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, St. Paul and Protestantism: Preface. A phrase used by Arnold many times.

It is not necessary to believe things in order to reason about them. (Il n'est pas nécessaire de tenir les choses pour en raisonner.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Séville. Act v, sc. 4.

He who will not reason, is a bigot; he who cannot is a fool; and he who dares not, is a slave.

See WILLIAM DUNHAM, Academical Questions: Preface.

Let us first, of all fellow reasoners, be the wisest guide. It warns us of its frailties and informs us of its own limitations.

Setting themselves against reason, as often as reason is against them.

THOMAS HOBBES, Tripos: Epistle Dedicatory.

We have not enough strength to follow reason absolutely. (Nous n'avons pas assez de force pour suivre toute notre raison.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No 42.

We have not enough reason to use all our reason. (Nous n'avons pas assez de raison pour employer toute notre force)

MADAME DE GRIGNAN, reversing La Rochefoucauld, to illustrate how the reverse of his maxims was often as true as the original. (MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Lettres, vi, 527.)

To be rational is so glorious a thing, that two-legged creatures generally content themselves with the title.

JOHN LOCKE, Letter to Antony Collins, Esq.

Always take the short cut; and that is the rational one. Therefore say and do everything according to soundest reason.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 51. See also SENSE: COMMON SENSE.

To be pointedly rational is a greater difficulty for me than a fine delirium.

O, strange excuse,

When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 791.

4 But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let 's reason with the worst that may befall.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act v, sc. 1, l. 96.

5 Be led by reason. (Ναὺς ἡγεμόνα ποιοῦ.)

SOLOM (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solom. Bk. I, sec. 60.)

6 The man who listens to Reason is lost: Reason enslaves all whose minds are not strong enough to master her.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

The reasonable man adapts himself to the world, the unreasonable one persists in trying to adapt the world to himself. Therefore all progress depends on the unreasonable man.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

7 Impassion'd logic, which outran
The hearer in its fiery course.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cix, st. 2.

8 In human affairs there is always, somehow,
a slight majority on the side of reason.

HENRY VAN DYKE, attr. But Dr. van Dyke writes, "I don't think this is mine, it sounds more like Emerson."

9 I can stand brute force, but brute reason is quite unbearable. There is something unfair about its use. It is hitting below the intellect.

And unto ruled reason bowe thee,

Since Reason is the very straight line

That leadeth folk into felicity?

THOMAS HOCCLIVE, La Mule Ragle. (1425)

16 We may take Fancy for a companion, but must follow Reason as our guide.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1774.

If but a beam of sober Reason play,

Lo, Fancy's fairy frost-work melts away!

ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. II, l. 427.

While Reason drew the plan, the Heart inform'd
The moral page, and Fancy lent it grace.

19 The will of man is by his reason sway'd.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act II, sc. 2, l. 115.

20 All the tools with which mankind works upon its fate are dull, but the sharpest among them is the reason

CARL VAN DOREN, Many Minds, p. 209.

^x Reason, which ought always to direct mankind, seldom does; but passions and weaknesses commonly usurp its seat, and rule in its stead.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Feb., 1754.

Address yourself generally to the senses, to the heart, and to the weaknesses of mankind, but very rarely to their reason.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Feb., 1752.

³ Few have reason, most have eyes.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 186.

⁴ Error lives
Ere reason can be born. Reason, the power
To guess at right and wrong, the twinkling lamp
Of wand'ring life, that winks and wakes by turns,
Fooling the follower between shade and shining.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride, Act iii, sc. 1.

Dim as the borrow'd beams of moon and stars
To lonely, weary, wand'ring travellers,
Is Reason to the soul: and as on high
Those rolling fires discover but the sky,
Not light us here; so Reason's glimmering ray
Was lent, not to assure our doubtful way,
But guide us upward to a better day.
And as those nightly tapers disappear,
When day's bright lord ascends our hemisphere;
So pale grows Reason at Religion's sight;
So dies, and so dissolves in supernatural light.
DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 1.

Reason, thou vain impertinence,
Deluding hypocrite, begone! . . .
At best thou'rt but a glimmering light,
Which serves not to direct our way;
But, like the moon, confounds our sight,
And only shows it is not day.

3
The oyster-women lock'd their fish up,
And trudged away to cry, No Bishop.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 2, l. 537.

4
All reform except a moral one will prove unavailing.
CARLYLE, Essays: Corn Law Rhymes.

5
Every reform, however necessary, will by weak minds be carried to an excess which will itself need reforming.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 1.

All zeal for a reform, that gives offence
To peace and charity, is mere pretence.
COWPER, Charity, l. 533.

7
'Tis such a light as putrefaction breeds
In fly-blown flesh whereon the maggot feeds,
Shines in the dark, but, usher'd into day,
The stench remains, the lustre dies away.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 675. Of bigots and 8

Reforms are less to be dreaded than revolutions, for they cause less reaction.
CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

9
Every project in the history of reform, no matter how violent and surprising, is good when it is the dictate of a man's genius and constitution, but very dull and suspicious when adopted from another.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

10
Every reform is only a mask under cover of which a more terrible reform, which dares not yet name itself, advances.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 205.

The history of persecution is a history of endeavors to cheat nature, to make water run up hill, to twist a rope of sand.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

11
Reform is affirmative, conservatism negative; conservatism goes for comfort, reform for truth. . . . Conservatism makes no poetry, breathes no prayer, has no invention; it is all memory. Reform has no gratitude, no prudence, no husbandry.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
The Conservative*.

Reform kicks with boots; it runs to egotism and bloated self-conceit.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

No man's person I hate, though his conduct I blame;

I can censure a vice, without stabbing a name.

To amend—not reproach—is the bent of my mind;

A reproof is half lost when ill nature is joined. Where merit appears, though in rags, I respect it.

The saddest are these: "It might have been!"

WHITTIER, Maud Muller, l. 105.

If, of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are, "It might have been,"
More sad are these we daily see,
"It is, but it hadn't ought to be."

BRET HARTE, Mrs. Judge Jenkins.

I plowed "Perhaps," I planted "If" therein,
And sadly harvested "It Might Have Been."

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 65.

We might have been—these are but common

I—Religion: Definitions

3
The efficacy of religion lies precisely in what is not rational, philosophic, nor eternal; its efficacy lies in the unforeseen, the miraculous, the extraordinary. Thus religion attracts more devotion according as it demands more faith—that is to say, as it becomes more incredible to the profane mind. The philosopher aspires to explain away all mysteries, to dissolve them into light. Mystery on the other hand is demanded and pursued by the religious instinct; mystery constitutes the essence of worship.

AMEL, Journal, 5 June, 1870.

Methodists there be not impossibilities enough in Religion for an active faith.

ST. THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici Pt. i, 9.

Religion without mystery ceases to be religion.
BISHOP WILLIAM THOMAS MANNING, Sermon, 2 Feb., 1930.

4
Religion—that voice of the deepest human experience.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy: Sweetness and Light.

5
The true religion is built upon the rock; the rest are tased upon the waves of time.

BACON, Essays: Of Vicissitudes of Things.

A religion that is jealous of the variety of learning, discourse, opinions, and sects, as misdoubting it may shake the foundations, or that cherisheth devotion upon simplicity and ignorance, as ascribing ordinary effects to the immediate working of God, is adverse to knowledge.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 25.

Religion—a daughter of Hope and Fear, explaining to Ignorance the nature of the Unknowable.

AMBROSE BIERCK, The Devil's Dictionary.

Impiety—your irreverence toward my deity.
AMBROSE BIERCK, The Devil's Dictionary.

7
The body of all true religion consists, to be sure, in obedience to the will of the Sovereign of the world, in a confidence in His declarations, and in imitation of His perfections.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

8
My altars are the mountains and the ocean,
Earth, air, stars,—all that springs from the great Whole.

Who hath produced and will receive the soul.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 104.

Each cloud-capped mountain is a holy altar;
An organ breathes in every grove;
And the full heart's a Psalter,
Rich in deep hymns of gratitude and love.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 385.

9
It is well said, in every sense, that a man's religion is the chief fact with regard to him. . . . By religion I do not mean here the church-creed which he professes. . . . This is not what I call religion. . . . but the thing a man does practically believe; the thing a man does practically lay to heart, and know for certain, concerning his vital relations to this mysterious Universe, and his duty and destiny there. . . . that is his religion.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Divinity.

A man's "religion" consists not of the many things he is in doubt of and tries to believe, but of the few he is assured of, and has no need of effort for believing.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 8.

10
Religion is the sense of ultimate reality, of whatever meaning a man finds in his own existence or the existence of anything else.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Come to Think of It.

11
Religion is life, philosophy is thought; religion looks up, friendship looks in. We need both thought and life, and we need that the two shall be in harmony.

W S LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations David Hume and John Home

13 A man's religion is the truth he lives habitually subconsciously and consciously
BENJAMIN C LEEHING, Imagination

14 Possibly if a true estimate were made of the morality and religions of the world, we should find that the far greater part of mankind received even those opinions and ceremonies they would die for rather from the fashions of their countries and the constant practice of those about them than from any conviction of their reasons
JOHN LOCKE, On Education Sec 146

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason Ch 1

19 Humanity and Immortality consist neither in reason, nor in love, nor in the body, nor in the animation of the heart of it, nor in the thoughts and stirrings of the brain of it,—but in the dedication of them all to Him who will raise them up at the last day
RUSKIN, Stones of Venice Vol. 1, ch 2

20 Religion is not a hearsay, a presumption, a superstition; is not a customary pretension and profession; is not an affectation of any mode; is not a piety of particular fancy, consisting of some pathetic devotions, vehement expressions, bodily severities, affected anomalies, and aversion from the innocent usages of others; but consisteth in a profound humility, and a universal charity.

BENJAMIN WHITCHCOTE, Sermons.

True religion doth clear the mind from all impotent and unsatisfiable desires, which do abuse and toss a man's soul, and make it restless and unquiet. It sets a man free from eager and impetuous loves, from vain and disappointing hopes, from lawless and exorbitant appetites, from frothy and empty joys, from dismal, presaging fears, and anxious, self-devouring cares.

BENJAMIN WHITCHCOTE, Sermons.

Each is not for its own sake,
I say the whole earth and all the stars in the sky are for religion's sake.
I say no man has ever yet been half devout enough,
None has ever yet adored or worship'd half enough,
None has begun to think how divine he himself is, and how certain the future is.
I say that the real and permanent grandeur of these States must be their religion.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Peanumok. Sec. 7.

II—Religion: Apothegms

Nothing is so fatal to religion as indifference, which is at least, half infidelity.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to William Smith. 29 Jan., 1795.

Man is by his constitution a religious animal.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Man has been rather defined as a religious than a rational creature.

JAMES HARRINGTON, Oceana, p. 484. (1656)

Every man, either to his terror or consolation, has some sense of religion.

JAMES HARRINGTON, Oceana, p. 484.

Politics and the pulpit are terms that have little agreement. No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity. . . . Surely the church is a place where one day's truce ought to be allowed to the dissensions and animosities of mankind.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

When policy puts on religious cloak.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Second. Book IX. 22.

When Kings interfere in matters of religion, they confuse instead of protecting it.

FLINTON, Advice to the Pretender, Son of James II. of England.

They make it a principle of their religion outwardly to conform to any religion.

BURKE, Speech, on the bill for the relief of Protestant dissenters, House of Commons, 1773.

He left his old religion for an estate, and has not had time to get a new one, but stands like a dead wall between church and synagogue, or like the blank leaves between the Old and New Testament.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act I, sc. 3.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 Religion's in the heart, not in the knee.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Devil's Ducat.

8 To be of no church is dangerous. Religion, of which the rewards are distant, and which is animated only by Faith and Hope, will glide by degrees out of the mind, unless it be invigorated and reimpresed by external ordinances, by stated calls to worship, and the salutary influence of example.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.

9 Whoso fighteth for the religion of God, whether he be slain or be victorious, we will give him a great reward.

The Koran. Ch. 4.

10 All religions die of one disease, that of being found out.

JOHN MORLEY.

11 It is right to be religious, but one should shun religiosity. (Religientem esse oportet; religiosus ne fuas.)

NICOMACHUS FRYLUS, Commentariorum Grammaticorum. Bk. xi. Quoted as from an early poet. Aulus Gellius (Noctes Atticæ, iv, 9,

1) points out that the ending "ous" always implies an excessive amount of the quality in question.

12 To be furious in religion is to be irreligiously religious.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

13 The truth of religion is in its ritual and the truth of dogma is in its poetry.

J. C. POWYS, The Complex Vision, p. 232.

I realized that ritual will always mean throwing away something; Destroying our corn or wine upon the altar of our gods.

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Pielas Puerilis.

6 Religion always sides with poverty.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Militant, l. 252.

7 With sweet kind natures, as in honey'd cells,
Religion lives, and feels herself at home.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 308.

8 The enduring value of religion is in its challenge to aspiration and hope in the mind of man.

ERNEST M. HOPKINS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 75.)

9 The highest flights of charity, devotion, trust, patience, bravery, to which the wings of human nature have spread themselves have been flown for religious ideals.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 259.

9a Nobody can deny but religion is a comfort to the distressed, a cordial to the sick, and sometimes a restraint on the wicked; therefore, whoever would laugh or argue it out of the world, without giving some equivalent for it, ought to be treated as a common enemy.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to the Countess of Bute, 1752, referring to Swift.

10 Religion's all. Descending from the skies
To wretched man, the goddess in her left
Holds out this world, and, in her right, the next.

15 What excellent fools Religion makes of men!
BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act v.

Fanatic fools, that in those twilight times,
With wild religion cloaked the worst of crimes!
JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice. Pt. iii, l. 122.

16 It is, I think, an error to believe that there is any need of religion to make life seem worth living.

SINCLAIR LEWIS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 37.)

17 Long time men lay oppress'd with slavish fear;
Religion's tyranny did domineer . . .
At length a mighty one of Greece began
To assert the natural liberty of man,
By senseless terrors and vain fancies led
To slavery. Straight the conquer'd phantoms fled.

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 63. (Creech, tr.) The reference is to Epicurus. Too often in time past religion has brought forth criminal and shameful actions. (Sæpius olim Religio peperit scelerosa atque impla facta.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 84. How many evils has religion caused! (Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum!)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 102.

18 Religion
Hides many mischiefs from suspicion.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, sc. 2.

19 I fear this iron yoke of outward conformity hath left a slavish print upon our necks.

MILTON, Prose Works. Vol. ii, p. 97.

1 Men never do evil so completely and cheerfully as when they do it from religious conviction.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. xiv, No. 895.

2 Religion, which true policy befriends,
Designed by God to serve man's noblest ends,
Is by that old deceiver's subtle play
Made the chief party in its own decay,
And meets the eagle's destiny, whose breast
Felt the same shaft which his own feathers drest.

KATHERINE PHILLIPS, On Controversies in Religion.

3 In religion
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text?

13 We cannot make a religion for others, and we ought not to let others make a religion for us.
Our own religion is what life has taught us.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wis and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 1.)

14 I must ever believe that religion substantially good which produces an honest life, and we have been authorized by one whom you and I equally respect, to judge of the tree by its fruit.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 197.

I never told my own religion, nor scrutinized that of another. I never attempted to make a convert, nor wished to change another's creed. I have ever judged of others' religion by their lives . . . for it is from our lives and not from our words, that our religion must be read.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 60

On the whole we must repeat the often repeated saying, that it is unworthy a religious man to view an irreligious one either with alarm or aversion; or with any other feeling than regret, and hope, and brotherly commiseration.

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

15 Sir, I think all Christians, whether Papists or Protestants, agree to the essential articles, and that their differences are trivial, and rather political than religious.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

16 The Earl of Shaftesbury said at last . . .
"Men of sense are really but of one religion."
Upon which says the lady of a sudden, "Pray, my lord, what religion is that which men of sense agree in?" "Madam," says the Earl,
"men of sense never tell."

ARTHUR OWEN, Speaker of the House of Commons, Footnote to Bishop Gilbert Bur-

best mottoes of the Earl of Shaftesbury, History of His Own Times, Vol. i, bk. 1, sec. 96. Froude tells a similar anecdote of Samuel Rogers (Short Studies on Great Subjects: A Plan for the Free Discussion of Theological Difficulties), but this was probably a confusion of memory on Froude's part. The saying has also been attributed to Benjamin Franklin, who probably repeated it upon some occasion.

Old Lord Shaftesbury, conferring with Major Wildman about the many sects of religion, "All wise men are of the same religion." Whereupon a lady in the room . . . demanded what that religion was, To whom Lord Shaftesbury straight replied, "Madam, wise men never tell."

JOHN TOLAND, Chadophorus.

"As for that," said Waldensare, "sensible men are all of the same religion." "Pray, what is that?" inquired the Prince. "Sensible men never tell."

8 We are all of the same religion without knowing it.

VOLTARE, Sermon by "Josias Rosette."

9 He dared not mock the Dervish whirl,
The Brahmin's rite, the Lama's spell;
God knew the heart; Devotion's pearl
Might sanctify the shell.

WHITTIER, My Namesake.

11 The greatest vicissitude of things amongst men is the vicissitude of sects and religions

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: of Vicissitude of Things.

12 When Popes damn Popes, and councils damn them all,

And Popes damn councils, what must Christians do?

RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocrisy.

13 Kings, that made laws, first broke them, and the Gods,

By teaching us religion first, first set the world at odds

APHRA BEHN, The Golden Age St. 4.

14 Can such bitterness enter into the heart of the devout? (Tant de fiel entre-t-il dans l'âme des dévots?)

BOILEAU, Le Lutrin, l. 12.

15 The religion of one seems madness unto another.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia Ch. 2.

16 Dissent, not satisfied with toleration, is not conscience, but ambition.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the Acts of Uniformity, House of Commons, Feb., 1772

All Protestantism, even the most cold and passive, is a sort of dissent. But the religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principle of resistance; it is the dissidence of dissent, and the Protestantism of the Protestant religion.

EDMUND BURKE, Conciliation with America.

17 Old religious factions are volcanoes burnt out.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, on the petition of the Unitarians, House of Commons, 11 May, 1792.

18 Synods are mystical Bear-gardens,

Where Elders, Deputies, Church-wardens,
And other Members of the Court,
Manage the Babylonish sport.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 1095.

Religion spawn'd a various rout
Of petulant capricious sects,
The maggots of corrupted texts,
That first run all religion down,
And after every swarm its own.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 8.

As if Religion were intended
For nothing else but to be mended.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 205.

A convert's but a fly that turns about,
After his head's cut off, to find it out.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 775.

No truly great man, from Jesus Christ down, ever founded a sect.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal

Do not call yourself Lutherans, call yourself Christians. Has Luther been crucified for the world?

MARTIN LUTHER.

Life and the Universe show spontaneity;
Down with ridiculous notions of Deity!
Churches and creeds are lost in the mists;
Truth must be sought with the Positivists.

MORTIMER COLLINS, The Positivists.

Men will wrangle for religion; write for it;
fight for it; die for it; anything but—live
for it.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 25.

Bigotry murders Religion, to frighten fools with her ghost

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 101.

Religion should extinguish strife,
And make a calm of human life;

But friends that chance to differ

On points which God has left at large,
How fiercely will they meet and charge,
No combatants are stiffer!

COWPER, Friendship, l. 133.

Against her foes Religion well defends
Her sacred truths, but often fears her friends.

But most she fears the controversial pen,
The holy strife of disputatious men.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 248.

O how far removed Predestination is thy foot from such
As see not the First Cause entire.

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xx, l. 122.

I do not prescribe fire and faggot, but, as Scipio said of Carthage, Delenda est Carthago.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Shortest Way with the Dissenters.

I knew a witty physician who . . . used to affirm that if there was disease in the liver, the man became a Calvinist, and if that organ was sound, he became a Unitarian.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

I would not do for a Methodist preacher, for I am a poor horseman. I would not suit the Baptists, for I dislike water. I would fail as an Episcopalian, for I am no ladies' man.

JOHN HAY, Letter. (THEATER, Life and Letters of John Hay, l. 59.)

I have noticed all my life that many people think they have religion when they are troubled with dyspepsia.

INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

A spleeny Lutheran.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 99.

Sects are stoves, but fire keeps its old properties through them all.

EMERSON, Journals, 1861.

Religion is the relation of the soul to God, and therefore the progress of sectarianism marks the decline of religion. Religion is as effectually destroyed by bigotry as by indifference.

EMERSON, Journals.

'Tis a strange thing, Sam, that among us people can't agree the whole week because they go different ways upon Sundays.

FARQUHAR, Letter from Leyden, 15 Oct., 1700.

The ecclesiastical writers, who, in the heat of religious faction, are apt to despise the profane virtues of sincerity and moderation.

EDWARD GIBSON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 26.

All sects seem to me to be right in what they assert, and wrong in what they deny.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

Most men's anger against religion is as if two men should quarrel for a lady they neither of them care for.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 221.

The Temple is a good, a holy place,
But quacking only gives it an ill savour;
While saintly mountebanks the porch disgrace,

And bring religion's self into disfavour.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 175.

It is becoming impossible for those who mix at all with their fellow-men to believe that the grace of God is distributed denominationally.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Will and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 201.)

Every sect is a moral check on its neighbour.
Competition is as wholesome in religion as in commerce.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Martin and Jack.

¹ Beware of him the days that he takes Communion. (Gardez-vous bien de lui les jours qu'il communie.)
Du LORRENS, Satires. Bk. I.

² Persecution produced its natural effect on them. It found them a sect; it made them a faction.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 1.

Persecution is a bad and indirect way to plant religion.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. I, sec. 25.

But he turned up his nose at their mumming and shamming,

And cared (shall I say?) not a d— for their damming;

So they first read him out of their church, and next minute

Turned round and declared he had never been in it.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 759.

³ There is no disagreement greater than one which proceeds from religion. (Nulla discordia major quam quæ a religione fit.)

MONTANUS, In Micah.

Difference of religion breeds more quarrels than difference of politics.

WENDALL PHILLIPS, Speech, 7 Nov., 1860.

⁴ So shall they build me altars in their zeal,
Where knaves shall minister, and fools shall kneel;

Where Faith may mutter o'er her mystic spell,
Written in blood—and Bigotry may swell
The sail he spreads for Heav'n with blasts from hell!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan. Pt. III, l. 584.

⁵ We have a Calvinistic creed, a Popish liturgy, and an Arminian clergy.

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM. (Prior, Life of Burke. Ch. 10. 1790.)

⁶ Upright Quakers please both man and God.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 208.

The sedate, sober, silent, serious, sad-coloured sect.
THOMAS HOOD, The Doves and the Crows.

Her parents held the Quaker rule,
Which doth the human feeling cool.

CHARLES LAMB, Hester.

⁷ Religion, blushing, veils her sacred fires,
And unawares Morality expires.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 649.

⁸ I think while zealots fast and frown,
And fight for two or seven,

That there are fifty roads to town,
And rather more to Heaven.

W. M. BATES, The Chant of the Broken Head. St. 1.

I always thought
It was both impious and unnatural
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 11.

¹⁴ Place before your eyes two precepts, and only two. One is Preach the Gospel; and the other is, Put down enthusiasm. . . . The Church of England in a nutshell.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. II, ch. 16. Referring to the valedictory of Archbishop Sutton, on the consecration of Bishop Reginald Heber to the See of Calcutta.

The merit claimed for the Anglican Church is, that if you let it alone, it will let you alone.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. VIII, p. 368.

¹⁵ To damn for falling short
Of what they could not do,
For not believing the report
Of that which was not true.

CHARLES WESLEY, Epigram on Calvinism.

We are God's chosen few;
All others will be damned;
There is no place in Heaven for you,
We can't have Heaven crammed

Credited to JONATHAN SWIFT by F. J. GILMAN, Evolution of the English Hymn, but not found in Swift's works. Directed at the Calvinists. Quoted in Lord Fisher's Memoirs.

You can and you can't,—You shall and you shan't—You will and you won't—You'll be damned if you do—And you'll be damned if you don't.

LORENZO DOW, Reflections on the Love of God. Defining Calvinism.

Die and be damned.

THOMAS MORTIMER. Referring to the Calvinistic doctrine of eternal punishment.

¹⁶ There is nothing more unnatural to religion than contentions about it.

REPUTATION

I—Reputation: Definitions

Where reputation is, almost every thing be-cometh; but where it is not, it must be supplied by punctilios and compliments.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning:
Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.

To disregard what the world thinks of us is not only arrogant but utterly shameless.
(Neglegere quid de se quisque sentiat, non solum arrogantis est, sed etiam omnino dissoluti.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 28, sec. 99.

The contempt of good reputation is called impudence.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. I, ch. 6.

Reputation is the life of the mind, as breath is the life of the body.

GRACIAN, Complete Gentleman, 96. (Salkeld,
tr.)

The invisible thing called a Good Name is made up of the breath of numbers that speak well of you.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 37.

The great difficulty is first to win a reputation; the next to keep it while you live; and the next to preserve it after you die.

B. A. HAYDEN, Table Talk.

Your reputation will never correspond with the amount of your labor. (Reponsura tuo nunquam est par fama labori.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 8, l. 65.

How many people live on the reputation of the reputation they might have made!

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-

The blaze of a reputation cannot be blown out, but it often dies in the socket.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale, 1
May, 1780.

A great reputation is a great noise: the more there is made, the farther off it is heard.

NAPOLEON, Sayings. (EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.)

Reputation demands words, but renown can be content with men's judgments. (Fama vocem utique desiderat, claritas potest etiam citra vocem contingere contenta iudicio.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. cii, sec. 17.

It sometimes happens that a person, when not known, shines by a good reputation, who, when he is present, is disagreeable to them that see him.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
I, ch. 8.

Men . . . have their reputation by distance.
BEN JOHNSON, Explorata: Decipimur Specie.

One man lies in his words and gets a bad reputation; another in his manners, and enjoys a good one.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 June, 1852.

II—Reputation: Apothegms

'Tis better never to be named than to be ill spoken of.

SUSANNAH CENTILVRE, The Basset Table. Act I.

And reputation bleeds in ev'ry word.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 48.

At every word a reputation dies.

PORR, Rape of the Lock. Canto III, l. 16.

I see my reputation is at stake;

My fame is shrewdly gored.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act III, sc.
3, l. 227.

Convey a fibel in a frown,

And wink a reputation down.

SWIFT, Journal of a Modern Lady.

All reputations each age revises. Very few immutable men has history to show.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 312.

The reputations of the nineteenth century will one day be quoted to prove its barbarism.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

1
A man has a reputation, and is no longer free, but must respect it.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

2
Many a man's reputation would not know his character if they met on the street.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. iv, p. 82.

3
Reputations, like beavers and cloaks, shall last some people twice the time of others.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit: Reputations.

4
No man, however great, is known to everybody and no man, however solitary, is known to nobody.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions; A Great Post.

5
The worst of me is known, and I can say that I am better than my reputation. (Das Aergste weiss die Welt von mir, und ich Kann sagen, ich bin besser als mein Ruf.)

SCHILLER, Marie Stuart. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 208.

6
Read not my blemishes in the world's report.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 5.

7
There was worlds of reputation in it, but no money.

MARK TWAIN, A Yankee at the Court of King Arthur. Ch. 9.

8
The only way to compel men to speak good of us is to do it.

VOLTAIRE, History of Charles XII: Preliminary Discourse.

9
Associate yourself with men of good quality if you esteem your own reputation; for 'tis better to be alone than in bad company.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Rules of Civility. No. 56. See also under COMPANION.

III—Reputation: Its Value

10
A good name is better than precious ointment.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 1.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 1.

A good name is a second life, and the ground-work of eternal existence.

BEASCARA ACHARYA, Lilawati. (LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 4.)

Good renomme is better than riches.

ANTHONY WOODVILLE, Diets, 64. (1477)

Good name is worth gold.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 75. (1460)

For wise men and old seyn good name is worth gold.

UNKNOWN, Plasidas, 166. (1597)

11
A good name is better than great riches. (Mas vale el buen Nombre que muchas riquezas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 15. (1615)

A good reputation is a fair estate.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 172. (1732)

A good reputation is more valuable than money. (Bona opinio hominum tutior pecunia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 108.

12
A good name endureth for ever.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xli, 13.

A good report

Makes men live long, although their life be short. ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo: A Good Report.

13
It is reasonable to rejoice, as the day declines, to find that it has been spent with the approbation of mankind.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 369.

14
My good name is nevertheless unstained; and so far I have lived without reproach. (Fama tamen clara est, et adhuc sine crimine vixi.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 17.

My good name, which was as white as a tulip.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iv, sc. 1.

15
It's a fine thing to have a finger pointed at one! (At pulchrum est digito monstrari.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 28.

16
If I can only keep my good name, I shall be rich enough. (Ego si bonam famam mihi servasso, sat ero dives.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 228. (Act i, sc. 3.)

17
An honourable reputation is a second patrimony. (Honestus rumor alterum est patrimonium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 246.

To an upright man a good reputation is the greatest inheritance. (Probo bona fama maxima est hereditas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 537.

He dying bequeathed to his son a good name, which unsullied descended to me.

JOHN O'KEEFE, The Farmer. Act i.

18
A good name keeps its lustre in the dark.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 18.

If one's name be up, he may lie in bed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

19
I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 93.

20
Good name in man and woman, dear my lord, Is the immediate jewel of their souls:

Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act III, sc. 3, l. 155.

Who steals a bugle-horn, a ring, a steed,
Or such like worthless thing, has some discretion,

'Tis petty larceny: not such his deed
Who robs us of our fame, our best possession.
BENET, Orlando Innamorata. Canto IV.

Reputation is a jewel
YANBUUGH, The Provoked Wife. Act I, sc. 2.

The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation that away,
Men are but gilded loam or painted clay.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II Act I, sc. 1, l. 177.

'T is better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being,
And the just pleasure lost which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxi.

IV—Reputation: Its Worthlessness

The solar system has no anxiety about its reputation.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

O reputation, reputation! how many a worthless man has thus set up on high! (O réputation, réputation! ô homme sans valeur qui s'élève sur son nom)

EUPHROSINE, Andromache, l. 319.

I consider him of small account who esteems himself just as the popular breath may chance to raise him. (Ich halte nichts von dem, der von sich denkt Wie ihn das Volk vielleicht erheben möchte.)

GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris Act II, sc. 1.

Reputation is but a synonym of popularity: dependent on suffrage, to be increased or diminished at the will of the voters.

Mrs. ARMA JAHKSON, Memories and Essays: Washington Allston.

Most people judge men only by their vogue or by their fortune. (La plupart des gens ne jugent des hommes que par la vogue qu'ils ont, ou par leur fortune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 212.

Wee unto you, when all men shall speak well of you!

NEW TESTAMENT: Luke, vi, 26.

Those who have been most celebrated have not always been the most illustrious. (Ilustrum sine clarioribus esse, sine sapientibus.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, Ecclupia. III, sc. 18.

Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act II, sc. 7, l. 152.

Reputation is a bubble which a man bursts when he tries to blow it for himself.

EMMA CARLTON, The Philistine, xi, 82.)

Cassio: Reputation! reputation! reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. . . .

Jago: Reputation is an idle and most false imposition, oft got without merit, and lost without deserving.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act II, sc. 3, l. 262.

To be mis-spoken and mis-seen of men,
Which is not for high-seated hearts to fear.
SWINBURNE, Bothwell. Act I, sc. 1.

V—Reputation in Women

Nothing is so delicate as the reputation of a woman; it is at once the most beautiful and most brittle of all human things.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Letter 39.

The reputation of a woman may also be compared to a mirror of crystal, shining and bright, but liable to be sullied by every breath that comes near it.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. I, bk. IV, ch. 33.

Flavia, most tender of her own good name,
Is rather careless of her sister's fame.

COWPER, Charity, l. 453.

Must I live 'twixt spite and fear,
Every day grow handsomer,
And lose my reputation?
JOHN GAY, The Lady's Lamentation.

For a strolling damsel bears a doubtful reputation. (Denn ein wanderndes Mädchen ist immer von schwankendem Rufe.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea, vii, 93.

Her name, that was as fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrimed and black.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act III, sc. 3, l. 386.

VI—Reputation: Its Loss

Who can see worse days than he that yet living doth follow at the funeral of his own reputation?

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: On Death. Sec. 11. (The authenticity of this essay is doubted.)

It is a maxim with me that no man was ever written out of reputation but by himself.

RICHARD BENTLEY, (Mosses, Life of Bentley. Vol. I, ch. 63.)

No book was ever written down by any but itself.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

1 Take away my good name and take away my life.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4306.

2 How many worthy men have we seen survive their own reputation!

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 16.

3 I have offended reputation,
A most un noble swerving.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act III, sc. 11, l. 49.

4 Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act II, sc. 1, l. 95.

5 The breath
Of accusation kills an innocent name,
And leaves for lame acquittal the poor life,
Which is a mask without it.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act IV, sc. 4, l. 137.

6 Bankrupt in fortune and reputation.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act I, sc. 1.

VII.—Reputation: Its Recovery

7 A wounded reputation is seldom cured.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 304.

8 Reputation crack'd is a Venice-glass broke.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4021.

Glass, China, and Reputation, are easily crack'd and never well mended.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

9 A lost good name is ne'er retriev'd.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Fox at the Point of Death, l. 46.

10 An ill wound is cured, not an ill name.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

11 Who swerves from innocence, who makes divorce

Of that serene companion—a good name,
Recovers not his loss; but walks with shame,
With doubt, with fear, and haply with remorse.

WORDSWORTH, The River Duddon. Sonnet xxx.

RESEARCH

12 Those hateful persons called Original Researchers.

J. M. BARRIE, My Lady Nicotine. Ch. 14.

13 As is your sort of mind,
So is your sort of search: you'll find
What you desire.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Pt. vii, l. 3.

14 We are as much gainers by finding a new property in the old earth as by acquiring a new planet.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

15 Nothing can be more miserable than the man who goes through the whole round of things, and prices into the things beneath the earth. (Τὰ πάντα γὰρ ἐπειράτω.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. II, sec. 13.

Nothing has such power to broaden the mind as the ability to investigate systematically and truly all that comes under thy observation in life.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. III, sec. 2.

16 Seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 7.

He that seeketh findeth.

JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 10.

Seek till you find and you'll not lose your labour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 200

17 Like following life thro' creatures you dissect,
You lose it in the moment you detect.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epist. i, l. 29.

18 Far must thy researches go
Wouldst thou learn the world to know;
Thou must tempt the dark abyss
Wouldst thou prove what Being is;
Naught but firmness gains the prize,
Naught but fullness makes us wise,
Buried deep truth ever lies.

SCHILLER, Proverbs of Confucius. (Bowring, tr.)

19 Nothing is so difficult but that it may be found out by seeking. (Nil tam difficile est quin querendo investigari possit.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 675. (Act IV, sc. 2.)

Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard but search will find it out.

ROBERT HERICK, Seek and Find.

20 Do not kick against the pricks. (Πρὸς κλῆρον μὴ λακτίζε.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1624.

It is folly to kick against the pricks. (Adversum stimulum cakos.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 78. (Act I, sc. 2.)

It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.
New Testament: Acts, ix, 5; xxvi, 14.

If you strike the goads with your fists, your heads suffer most. (Si stimulos pugnis cadis maius plus dolet.)
PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 54.

Take no sorrow of the thing lost which may not be recovered.

ÆSOP, Fables, ii, 270. (Caxton, tr.)

It's no use crying over spilt milk.

W. S. GILBERT, Fogarty's Fairy. Act i.

Thy will be done, though in my own undoing.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 15, conclusion.

Then let us cheerfu' acquiesce,
Nor make our scanty pleasures less,
By pining at our state.
BURNS, Epistle to Davie.

Resignation open-eyed, conscious, and informed by love, is the only one of our feelings for which it is impossible to become a sham.
JOSEPH CONRAD, A Personal Record: Preface.

To be resign'd when ills betide,
Patient when favours are denied,
And pleased with favours given;—
Dear Chloe, this is wisdom's part,
This is that incense of the heart
Whose fragrance smells to heaven.
NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. St. 11.

It's over, and can't be helped, and that's one consolation, as they always say in Turkey.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 23.

Dare to look up to God and say, "Use me henceforward as Thou wilt; I am of one mind with Thee; I am Thine; I ask exemption from nothing that pleases Thee; lead me where Thou wilt; clothe me in any dress
Thou chooseth."
EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 42.

What is the law of God? To guard what is his own, not to lay claim to what is not his own, but to make use of what is given him, and not to yearn for what has not been given.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 28.

Give what thou canst, without thee we are poor;
And with thee rich, take what thou wilt away.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 905.

Let him give up his place like a guest well filled. (Cedat uti conviva satur.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, l. 119.

Sinks to the grave in unperceiv'd decay,
While Resignation gently slopes the way.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 110.
(1770) In later editions, Goldsmith changed
"sinks" to "bends."

An age that melts with unperceiv'd decay,
And glides in modest innocence away.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l.
292. (1749)

And varied life steal unperceiv'd away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act ii, sc. 7.

Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done.

New Testament: Luke, xxii, 42.

It seem'd so hard at first, mother, to leave the blessed sun,
And now it seems as hard to stay, and yet His will be done!

TENNYSON, The May Queen: Conclusion.

To will what God doth will, that is the only science

That gives us any rest.

MALHERBE, Consolation. St. 7. (Longfellow, tr.)

That's best

Which God sends. 'Twas His will, it is mine.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto 6, st. 29.

Not as we wanted it,

But as God granted it.

I wait the sharpest blow.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 54.

When some great sorrow, like a mighty river,
Flows through your life with peace-destroying power

And dearest things are swept from sight forever,

Say to your heart each trying hour:

"This, too, will pass away."

LANTA WILSON SMITH (?), This, Too, Will Pass Away.

God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;

We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart—

Time will reveal the chalices of gold.

MARY LOUISE RILEY SMITH, Sometime.

1 Come wealth or want, come good or ill,
Let young and old accept their part,
And bow before the Awful Will,
And bear it with an honest heart.

RESPECTABILITY

20 How much of priceless life were spent

With men that every virtue decks,

And women models of their sex.

ROBERT BROWNING, Respectability.

21 "The Discobolus is out here because he is vulgar—

He has neither vest nor pants with which to cover his limbs;

I, sir, am a person of the most respectable connections—

My brother-in-law is haberdasher to Mr.
Spurgeon."

O God! O Montreal!

SAMUEL BUTLER, A Psalm of Montreal. Written after visiting the Montreal Museum of Natural History, and finding the Discobolus stuck away in a corner because, as the custodian said, he was rather vulgar.

In the bosom of her respectable family resided Camilla.

FANNY BURNBY, Camilla. Bk. i, ch. 1.

22 Least is he marked that doth as most men do.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Owl.

23 Men are respectable only as they respect.

EMERSON, Lectures and Sketches: Sovereignty of Ethics.

Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act II, sc. 3, l. 99.

I had so great a respect for the memory of Henry IV, that had a victim I was pursuing taken refuge under his statue on the Pont Neuf, I would have spared his life.

CARTOUCHE, the famous French brigand. (SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 6.)

"Bourgeois," I observed, "is an epithet which the riff-raff apply to what is respectable, and the aristocracy to what is decent."

ANTHONY HORN, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 17.

Respectability is the dickey on the bosom of civilization.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams.

The only man to me who is not respectable is the man who consumes more than he produces.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistines. Vol. II, p. 36.

To be respectable implies a multitude of little observances, from the strict keeping of Sunday, down to the careful tying of a cravat.

VICTOR HUGO, Toilers of the Sea. Pt. I, bk. 3, ch. 12.

Respectable means rich, and decent means poor. I should die if I heard my family called decent.

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Crochet Castle. Ch. 3.

Men have to do some awfully mean things to keep up their respectability.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act III.

We are ashamed of everything that is real about us. . . . The more things a man is ashamed of the more respectable he is.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act I.

'Tis the misfortune of worthy people that they are cowards. (Un des plus grands malheurs des honnêtes gens c'est qu'ils sont des lâches.)

VOLTAIRE, (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.)

Q. What sort of a person was Mr. Weare?

A. He was always a respectable person.

Q. What do you mean by respectable?

A. He kept a gig.

LAST REST, see under DEATH.

Ah, what is more blessed than to put care aside, when the mind lays down its burden, and spent with distant travel, we come home again and rest on the couch we longed for? This, this alone, is worth all such toils. (O quid solutis est beatius curis, Cum mens onus reponit, as peregrino Labore fessi venimus larem ad nostrum Desideratogue acquiescimus lecto? Hoc est, quod unumst pro laboribus tantis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xxxi, l. 7.

Absence of occupation is not rest; A mind quite vacant is a mind distress'd.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 623.

Rest is not quitting The busy career, Rest is the fitting Of self to one's sphere.

'Tis the brook's motion, Clear without strife, Fleeing to ocean After its life.

'Tis loving and serving The Highest and Best! 'Tis onwards! unswerving, And that is true rest.

JOHN SULLIVAN DWIGHT, Rest. Sts. 4, 5, 7. Partly a paraphrase of Goethe.

Rest comes at length, though life be long and dreary;

The day must dawn, and darksome night be passed.

F. W. FABER, Barb, Barb, My Soul!

Time comes with the morning And rest with the night.

LEONARDOW, Calvary.

Amidst these restless thoughts this rest I find,

For those that rest not here, there's rest behind.

THOMAS CATACER, B. D.

For too much rest itself becomes a pain.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 429. (Pope, tr.)

This hardest penal toil, reluctant rest.

WILLIAM WATSON, To a Friend.

Think not of rest; though dreams be sweet,
Start up, and ply your heavenward feet.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday in Advent.

We wish him health; he sighs for rest,
And Heaven accepts the prayer.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Restoration of the Royal Family.

When Earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried,

When the oldest colours have faded, and the youngest critic has died,

We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it—lie down for an eon or two.

Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall put us to work anew.

RUDYARD KIPLING, When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted.

Master, I've filled my contract, wrought in Thy many lands;

Not by my sins wilt Thou judge me, but by the work of my hands.

Master, I've done Thy bidding, and the light is low in the west,

And the long, long shift is over . . . Master,
I've earned it—Rest.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, Song of the Wage Slave.

Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

New Testament: Matthew, xi, 28.

Rest is sweet after strife.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucie. Pt. i, canto 6, st. 25.

Rest springs from strife, and dissonant chords beget

Divinest harmonies.

LEWIS MORRIS, Love's Suicide.

Night is the time for rest;

How sweet, when labours close,

To gather round an aching breast

The curtain of repose.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night.

Take rest; a field that has rested gives a bountiful crop. (Da requiem; requietus ager hinc credita reddit.)

OVIN, Arx Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 351.

It is well to lie fallow for a while.

MARTIN F. TUCKER, Of Good in Things. Evs.

What is without periods of rest will not endure. (Quod caret alterna requie, durable non est.)

OVIN, Heroides. Ep. iv, l. 39.

Beyond the last horizon's rim,
Beyond adventure's farthest quest,
Somewhere they rise, serene and dim,
The happy, happy Hills of Rest.

ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE, The Hills of Rest.

Rest a while and run a mile.

PALBORAVE, L'Eclaircissement de la Langue Française, p. 436.

Rest and success are fellows.

W. G. BERNAM, Proverbs, p. 829.

Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 183.

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 21.

The cardinal, partly from the fatigues of his journey, partly from the agitation of his anxious mind, was seized with a disorder that turned into a dysentery; and he was able with some difficulty to reach Leicester Abbey. When the abbot and the monks advanced to receive him with much respect, and reverence, he told them that he had come to lay his bones among them; then he immediately took to his bed, whence he never rose more.

HUME, History of England. Ch. 30.

Sleep after toil, port after stormy seas,
Ease after war, death after life, does greatly please.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto ix,
st. 40.

And rest, that strengthens into virtuous deeds,

Is one with prayer.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Temptation of Hassan Ben Khaled. St. 4.

That is a sure place of rest from labor. (Re-quies ea certa laborum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iii, l. 393.

God has given us this repose. (Deus nobis hæc otia fecit.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. 1, l. 6.

Rest, free from care, and a life without knowledge of deceit. (Secura quies, et nescia fallere vita.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 467.

Rest and be Thankful."

WORDSWORTH. Title of sonnet, quoted from an inscription on a stone seat at the head of Glencoe, in the Scottish highlands.

¹ Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xix, 21.

These be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, i, 1.

Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth:
as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxiv, 20.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

⁶ God's mill grinds slow, but sure.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

God's mills grind slow,

But they grind wee.

WILLIAM R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: Delayed Retribution.

⁷ Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small;

Though with patience he stands waiting, with certainty grinds he all.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinnsprüche. (Longfellow, tr. Poetic Aphorisms: Retribution.)

⁸ The mill of God grinds late, but grinds to powder.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, 140.

Kabira wept when he beheld the millstone roll;
Of that which passes 'twixt the stones, nought goes forth whole.

PETRUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 23.

All who bring to court false cases supported by false witnesses, all who before the magistrate deny on oath their honest debts, them we note and take their names to Jove. Day by day He knows who they be that do seek evil here on earth. When the wicked here expect to win their suits by perjury, or press false claims before the judge, the case adjudged is adjudged again by Him. And the fine He fines them far exceeds their gains in courts of law.

PLAUTUS, Rudens: Prologue, l. 13.

Ah, wretch! even though one may at first conceal his perjuries, yet retribution creeps on, though late, with noiseless step. (Ah, raiser! et si quis primo perjurium celat, Seta tamen tacitis Poena venit pedibus.)

TIBULLUS, Odes. Bk. 1, ode 9, l. 3.

The divine wrath is slow indeed in vengeance but it makes up for its tardiness by the severity of the punishment. (Lento quidem gradu ad vindictam divina procedit ira, sed tarditatem supplicii gravitate compensat.)

REWARD

I—Reward: Definitions and Apothegms

2 Let a man contend to the uttermost

For his life's set prize, be it what it will!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust.

3 'Tis an old lesson; Time approves it true,
And those who know it best, deplore it most;

When all is won that all desire to woo,
The paltry prize is hardly worth the cost.
BYRON, Childe Harold Canto II, st. 35.

RICHES

I—Riches: Definitions

I cannot call riches better than the baggage of virtue. The Roman word is better, Impedimenta. For as the baggage is to an army, so is riches to virtue. It cannot be spared, nor left behind, but it hindreth the march; yea, and the care of it, sometimes, loseth or disturbeth the victory.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Riches.

For what are riches, empire, pow'r,
But larger means to gratify the will?

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride Act II, sc. 9.

1 Surplus wealth is a sacred trust which its possessor is bound to administer in his lifetime for the good of the community.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, The Gospel of Wealth.

2 Communism is a hateful thing. . . . But the communism of combined wealth and capital . . . is not less dangerous than the communism of oppressed poverty and toil.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1888.

3 Wealth is an application of mind to nature; and the art of getting rich consists not in industry, much less in saving, but in a better order, a timeliness, in being at the right spot.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

It is the perpetual tendency of wealth to draw on the spiritual class, not in this coarse way, but in plausible and covert ways.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

4 The ideal social state is not that in which each gets an equal amount of wealth, but in which each gets in proportion to his contribution to the general stock.

RUSKIN, Ad Valorem.

10 The people of this country are not jealous of fortunes, however great, which have been built up by the honest development of great enterprises, which have been actually earned by business energy and sagacity; they are jealous only of speculative wealth, of the wealth which has been piled up by no effort at all, but only by shrewd wits playing on the credulity of others. . . . This is "predatory wealth," and is found in stock markets.

Old Testament: Judges, xiv, 18.

Riddle me, riddle me ree.

UNKNOWN. Old saying, meaning read my riddle correctly.

It may well be doubted whether human ingenuity can construct an enigma of the kind which human ingenuity may not, by proper application resolve

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Gold Bug

¹⁴ What animal goes on four legs in the morning, two at noon, and three in the evening?

The riddle of the Sphinx. The Sphinx, in Greek legend, was a monster with the head and breasts of a woman, the body of a dog, the tail of a serpent, the paws of a lion, and a human voice. It frequented the neighborhood of Thebes, propounded riddles and devoured the people who could not solve them. The Thebans had been told by an oracle that the Sphinx would destroy herself if her riddle was solved, so the king promised his crown and his sister Jocasta to whoever should answer it. This was done by Oedipus, who observed that a man walked on all fours when a child, erect in the noon of life, and supported by a stick in old age. The Sphinx, on hearing the answer, dashed her head against a rock.

The Sphinx must solve her own riddle.

7 Truth, 'tis supposed, may bear all lights; and one of those principal lights or natural mediums by which things are to be viewed in order to a thorough recognition is ridicule itself.

ANTHONY ASHLEY COOPER, LORD SHAFTESBURY, Essay on the Freedom of Wit and Humour. Pt. i, sec. 1. (1709)

How comes it to pass, then, that we appear such cowards in reasoning, and are so afraid to stand the test of ridicule?

LORD SHAFTESBURY, A Letter Concerning Enthusiasm. (1708)

We have oftener than once endeavoured to attach some meaning to that aphorism, vulgarly imputed to Shaftesbury, which however we can find nowhere in his works, that "ridicule is the test of truth."

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

It is commonly said, and more particularly by Lord Shaftesbury, that ridicule is the best test of truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Feb., 1752.

RIDICULOUSNESS

8 They that are serious in ridiculous things will be ridiculous in serious affairs.

CATO THE ELDER. (PLUTARCH, Roman Apophthegms.)

9 I distrust those sentiments that are too far removed from nature, and whose sublimity is blended with ridicule; which two are as near one another as extreme wisdom and folly.

DESlandes, Réflexions sur les Grands Hommes qui Sont Morts en Plaisantant.

10 There is nothing one sees oftener than the ridiculous and magnificent, such close neighbors that they touch. (L'on ne saurait mieux faire voir que le magnifique et le ridicule sont si voisins qu'ils se touchent.)

FONTENELLE, Dialogues des Morts. (1683)

11 The ridiculous usually touches the sublime. (En général, le ridicule touche au sublime.)

MARMONTEL, Œuvres Complètes Vol. v, p. 188.

12 From the sublime to the ridiculous is but a step (Du sublime au ridicule il n'y a qu'un pas)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to the Abbé du Pradt, on his return from Russia, referring to the retreat from Moscow. (Du Pradt, Histoire de l'Ambassade dans la Grande Duché de Varsovie, p. 215) The saying has been attributed also to Talleyrand.

There is but one step from triumph to ruin.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (LOCKHART, Life.)

13 The sublime and the ridiculous are so close that they touch.

EDWARD LORD OXFORD, Commonplace-Book.

14 The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime makes the ridiculous, and one step above the ridiculous makes the sublime again.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Pt. ii.

However the battle is ended,

Though proudly the victor comes,
With flaunting flags and neighing nags
And echoing roll of drums;
Still truth proclaims this motto
In letters of living light:
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Settle the Question Right. "No question is ever settled until it is settled right," has been attributed to Abraham Lincoln.

Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies.

The right is more precious than peace.

WOODROW WILSON, War Message to Congress, 2 April, 1917.

II—Right and Wrong

One may go wrong in many different ways, but right only in one, which is why it is easy to fail and difficult to succeed—easy to miss the target and difficult to hit it.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. II, sec. 14.

Better, though difficult, the right way to go,
Than wrong, tho' easy, where the end is woe.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. I.

All other ways are wrong, all other guides are false. . . . There is but one road that leads to Corinth.

WALTER PATER, Marius the Epicurean. Ch. 24.

I trust in God—the right shall be the right
And other than the wrong, while he endures.

CARLYLE, Letter-Day Pamphlets. No. 2.

I prefer to do right and get no thanks, rather than to do wrong and get no punishment.

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 8, sec. 9.)

Though syllogisms hang not on my tongue,
I am not surely always in the wrong!
Tis hard if all is false that I advance—
A fool must now and then be right, by chance.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 93.

Good and bad are but names very readily transferable to that or this; the only right is what is after my constitution; the only wrong what is against it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

To be engaged in opposing wrong affords, under the conditions of our mental constitution, but a slender guarantee for being right.

GLADSTONE, Time and Place of Homer: Introduction.

We are not satisfied to be right, unless we can prove others to be wrong.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Note-Books, p. 236.

Right and wrong exist in the nature of things. Things are not right because they are commanded, nor wrong because they are prohibited.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Ghosts.

It is not that you do wrong by design, but that you should never do right by mistake.

JUNIUS, Letters: To the Duke of Grafton. Letter xii, 30 May, 1769.

When everyone is wrong, everyone is right. (Quand tout le monde a tort, tout le monde a raison.)

LA CHAUSSEZ, La Gouvernante. Act I, sc. 3.

Wrong ever builds on quicksands, but the Right

To the firm center lays its moveless base.

III—Rights

8 They made and recorded a sort of institution and digest of anarchy, called the Rights of Man.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech. (Works, iii, 221.)
The sacred rights of man are not to be rummaged from among old parchments or musty records.
They are written as with a sunbeam in the whole volume of human nature by the hand of divinity itself and can never be erased by mortal
power.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON. See also under INTER-FERENCE DAY.

9 What people have always sought is equality of rights before the law. For rights that were not open to all alike would be no rights. (Jus cuius semper est questum iniquum; neque cuius alter tunc ius.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. II, ch. 12, sec. 42.

10 Public wrongs are but popular rights in embryo.

SIR CHARLES DARLING, Schottia Juris.

11 Wherever there is a human being, I see God-given rights inherent in that being, whatever may be the sex or complexion.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON. (Life. Vol. iii, 390.)

12 Every man has by the law of nature a right to such a waste portion of the earth as is necessary for his subsistence.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Utopia. Bk. ii.

The equal right of all men to the use of land is as clear as their equal right to breathe the air—it is a right proclaimed by the fact of their existence. For we cannot suppose that some men have a right to be in this world, and others no right.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty. Bk. vii,
ch. 1.

13 What rights are his that dare not strike for

TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 525.

RIGHTEOUSNESS

14 What is all righteousness that men devise?
What—but a sordid bargain for the skies?

WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 75.

15 Be not righteous over much, neither make thyself over wise.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 16.

My son, these maxims make a rule,
And lump them aye together:
The Rigid Righteous is a fool,
The Rigid Wise another.

BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid: Motto. A paraphrase of Ecclesiastes, vii, 16.

16 He was righteous in his own eyes.

Old Testament: Job, xxxii, 1.

17 Righteousness exalteth a nation.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 34.

18 I have been young and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 25.

The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar of Lebanon.

Not to be abed after midnight is to be up betimes.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act II, sc. 3, l. 1.

9 Yet never sleep the sun up. Prayer shoud

Dawn with the day. There are set, awful hours

'Twixt heaven and us. The manna was not good

After sun-rising; far day sullies flowers.

Rise to prevent the sun; sleep doth sin glut,

And heaven's gate opens when the world's is shut.

II—Rising Early: Its Drawbacks

10 Oh! how I hate to get up in the morning,

Oh! how I'd love to remain in bed;

For the hardest blow of all

Is to hear the bugler call,

"You've got to get up, you've got to get up,

You've got to get up this morning!"

IRVING BERLIN, Oh! How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning. Written at Camp Upton, 1917.

O it's nice to get up in the mornin' when the sun begins to shine,

At four or five or six o'clock in the good old summer time;

When the snow is snowin' and it's murky over-

head,

O it's nice to get up in the mornin', but it's nicer to lie in bed.

11 Heaven's help is better than early rising.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 34.

12 Prone on my back I greet arriving day,

A day no different than the one just o'er;

When I will be, to practically say,

Considerable like I have been before.

Why then get up? Why wash, why eat, why pray?

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v.

9 Men travel far to see a city, but few seem curious about a river. Every river has, nevertheless, its individuality, its great silent interest. Every river has, moreover, its influence over the people who pass their lives within sight of its waters.

H. S. MARKHAM, The Sowers. Ch. 2.

10 He that had never seen a river imagined the first he met to be the sea.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 26.

11 Rivers are roads that move and carry us whither we wish to go. (Les rivières sont des chemins qui marchent et qui portent où l'on veut aller.)

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 17.

12 He who knows not the way to the sea, should seek a river for companion. (Viam qui nescit, qua deveniat ad mare, Eum oportet amnem querere comitem sibi.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 627. (Act III, sc. 3.)

Follow the river and you will get to sea.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

13 The deepest rivers flow with the smallest noise. (Altissima quæque flumina minimo sono labuntur.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Robus Gestis Alexandri Magni. See also WATER: STILL WATERS.

14 Rain added to a river that is rank Perforce will force it overflow its bank.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 71.

15 The river glideth at his own sweet will.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Composed upon Westminster Bridge.

II—Rivers: Their Source

16 Ye rivers, backwards run! (Redite sursum flumina!)

AUSONIUS, Epistles. Frag. 35.

17 Upward to their fountains the sacred rivers run. ("Ἀπὸ πηγῶν ὑπὸν ἑσπερὶν πρὸς ἡμᾶς.")

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 410. Meaning that things are upside down.

18 The soul aspiring pants its source to mount, As streams meander level with their fount.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, The Omnipresence of the Deity. Pt. i.

We take this on the whole to be the worst similitude in the world. In the first place, no stream meanders or can possibly meander level with the fount. In the next place, if streams did meander level with their founts, no two motions can be less like each other than that of meandering level and that of mounting upwards.

MACAULAY, Review of Montgomery's Poems. (Edinburgh Review, April, 1830.) Montgomery evidently thought Macaulay's criticism well founded, for these lines were omitted from subsequent editions of the poem.

19 Your mountains shall bend And your streams ascend, Ere Margaret be our seaman's bride!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto I, st. 18.

- ¹ Of nothing comes nothing: springs rise not above
 Their source in the far-hidden heart of the mountains:
 Whence then have descended the Wisdom and Love
 That in man leap to light in intelligent fountains?
 J. T. TROWBRIDGE, The Missing Leaf. St. 11.

III—Rivers: Description

- ² And see the rivers how they run
 Through wood and mead, in shade and sun,
 Sometimes swift, sometimes slow,
 Wave succeeding wave, they go
 A various journey to the deep.
 Like human life to endless sleep.
 JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l. 93.
- See the rivers, how they run,
 Changeless toward a changeless sea.
 CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act II, sc. 2.

- ³ Like streams that keep a summer mind
 Snow-hid in January.
 J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

- ⁴ By shallow rivers, to whose falls
 Melodious birds sing madrigals.
 CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to His Love. Included in The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599; quoted by Shakespeare, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act III, sc. 1, l. 17, 1600.

- ⁵ There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth; . . . and there is salmon in both.
 SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act IV, sc. 7, l. 28.

- ⁶ The current that with gentle murmur glides,
 Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage;
 But when his fair course is not hindered,
 He makes sweet music with the enamell'd stones,
 Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
 He overtaketh in his pilgrimage.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act II, sc. 7, l. 25.

- ⁷ I chatter, chatter, as I flow
 To join the brimming river,
 For men may come and men may go,
 But I go on for ever.
 Tennyson, The Brook, l. 47.

- ⁸ No check, no stay, this streamlet fears:
 How merrily it goes.
 'Twill murmur on a thousand years
 And flow as now it flows.
 Wordsworth, The Fountain. St. 6.

A sea-green river, proud to lave,
 With current swift and undefiled,
 The towers of old Lucerne.
 Wordsworth, Memorials of a Tour on the Continent. No 32.

A stately pleasure-dome decree;
 Where Alph, the sacred river, ran Through caverns measureless to man
 Down to a sunless sea
 S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

- ¹¹ Ayr, gurgling, kiss'd his pebbled shore,
 O'erhung with wild woods thickening green;
 The fragrant birch and hawthorn hoar
 Twin'd amorous round the raptur'd scene.
 Burns, Thou Lingering Star. St. 3.

Farewell, the bonnie banks of Ayr.
 Burns, The Banks of Ayr.

- ¹² Yet I will look upon thy face again,
 My own romantic Bronx, and it will be
 A face more pleasant than the face of men.
 Thy waves are old companions I shall see
 A well-remembered form in each old tree
 And hear a voice long loved in thy wild minstrelsy.

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, The Bronx.

- ¹³ In those fair fields where sacred Isis glides,
 Or else where Cam his winding vales divides.
 Pope, Pastorals: Summer, l. 25.

- ¹⁴ Out of the hills of Habersham,
 Down the valleys of Hall,
 I hurry amain to reach the plain;
 Run the rapid and leap the fall,
 Split at the rock, and together again
 Accept my bed, or narrow or wide,
 And flee from folly on every side
 With a lover's pain to attain the plain,
 Far from the hills of Habersham,
 Far from the valleys of Hall.
 SIDNEY LANIER, The Song of the Chatto-bookee.

- ¹⁵ How sweet to move at summer's eve
 By Clyde's meandering stream,
 When Sol in joy is seen to leave
 The earth with crimson beam.
 ANDREW PARK, The Banks of Clyde.

- ¹⁶ From the heart of the mighty mountains strong-souled for my fate I came,

My far-drawn track to a nameless sea through a land without a name; . . .

I stayed not, I could not linger; patient, resistless, alone.

I hewed the trail of my destiny deep in the hindering stone.

SCHARLOT M. HALL, Song of the Colorado.

Then I saw the Congo, creeping through the black,

Cutting through the jungle with a golden track.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Congo.

Flow on, lovely Dee, flow on, thou sweet river,
Thy banks' purest stream shall be dear to me
ever

JOHN TAIT, The Banks of the Dee.

O Mary, go and call the cattle home, . . .
Across the sands o' Dee.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Sands o' Dee.

Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair!

BURNS, The Banks o' Doon.

On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden.

Thou soft-flowing Keedron, by thy silver stream

Our Saviour at midnight, when Cynthia's pale beam

Shone bright on the waters, would oftentimes stray,

And lose in thy murmurs the toils of the day.

MARIA DE FLEURY, Thou Soft-Flowing Keedron.

On this I ponder
Where'er I wander,
And thus grow fonder,
Sweet Cork, of thee,—
With thy bells of Shandon,
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters

Of the river Lee.

FRANCIS SYLVESTER MAHONY (FATHER PROUT),
The Bells of Shandon.

On Leven's banks, while free to rove,
And tune the rural pipe to love,
I envied not the happiest swain
That ever trod the Arcadian plain.
Pure stream! in whose transparent wave
My youthful limbs I wont to lave;
No torrents stain thy limpid source,
No rocks impede thy dimpling course,
That sweetly warbles o'er its bed,

With white, round, polish'd pebbles spread.

TOMAS SMOLLETT, Ode to Leven Water.

Slowly it moves, and in a mystic silence,
It draws me wondering,
Out through its shadowy portals to the ocean
Where sails are blossoming.

MARY SINTON LETTICH, The River. The Lynn-haven.

Ol' man river, dat ol' man river,
He must know sumpin', but don't say nothin',
He just keeps rollin', he keeps on rollin' along.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN 2d, Ol' Man River.
(1927) Referring to the Mississippi.

Rasselas was the fourth son of the mighty emperor in whose dominions the Father of Waters begins his course.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Dr. Johnson refers to the Nile. The Mississippi has also been called the Father of Waters. Its name is from the Algonquin for Great Water.

Or lose thyself in the continuous woods
Where rolls the Oregon, and hears no sound,
Save his own dashing.

W. C. BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

And Potomac flowed calmly, scarce heaving
her breast,

With her low-lying billows all bright in the west,

For a charm as from God lulled the waters to rest

Of the fair-rolling river.

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Beyond the Potomac.

By the blue rushing of the arrowy Rhone.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 71.

Alone by the Schuylkill a wanderer rovd,
And bright were its flowery banks to his eye;

But far, very far, were the friends that he lov'd,

And he gaz'd on its flowery banks with a sigh.

THOMAS MOORE, Lines Written on Leaving Philadelphia.

On the gentle Severn's sedgy bank.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act I, sc. 3, l. 98.

Swift Severn's flood;

Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act I, sc. 3, l. 103.

JESSE DOWLING, Epigram Referring to an Indiana road in 1839

7 The rule of the road is a paradox quite,

Both in riding and driving along,

If you keep to the left, you are sure to be right,

If you keep to the right you are wrong,

But in walking the streets 'tis a different case,

To the right it is right you should bear,

Whereas to the left should be left enough space

ST. AMBROSE. As quoted by Jeremy Taylor,
Ductor Dubitantium. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 5.

19 My mother, having joined me at Milan, found that the church there did not fast on Saturdays as at Rome, and was at a loss what to do. I consulted St. Ambrose, of holy memory, who replied, "When I am at Rome, I fast on a Saturday; when I am at Milan, I do not.
Follow the custom of the church where you are."

3 That is to say, if your religion's Roman, And you at Rome would do as Romans do, According to the proverb,—although no man,

If foreign, is obliged to fast, and you, If Protestant, or sickly, or a woman,

Would rather dine in sin on a ragout—Dine, and be d—d! I don't mean to be coarse, But that's the penalty, to say no worse.

III—Rome: Her Greatness

7 First among cities, the home of gods, is golden Rome. (Prima urbes ante, divina domus, aurea Roma)

APULCIUS, Orbis Urbium Notitiae, l. 1.

The golden of nations, absolutely great

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Discourse: The Sixth Stan. St. 77.

8 A city greater than any upon earth, whose empire no eye can measure, whose glory no imagination can picture, who stands a golden head amid the neighboring stars and with her seven hills imitates the seven regions of heaven, mother of arms and of law, who extends her sway over all the earth and was the earliest cradle of justice, this is the city which, spring from humble beginnings, has stretched to either pole, and from one small place extended its power so that upon it the sun never sets (In geminis axes parvâque a sede profecta Disperat cum sole manus)

CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonis Bk. iii, l. 130 See also under ENGLAND SPAIN

She alone among nations has received into her bosom those whom she has conquered, and has cherished all humanity as her sons, and not as her slaves

The said questions were asked with licence, and that it should remain under the rose (Sub rosa)

SIR ROBERT DYMCKE, Letter to Stephen Vaughan, 1546 (State Papers, Henry VIII, ii, 200) The phrase, "sub rosa," meaning secretly, is of unknown origin. With the ancients the rose was emblematic of secrecy, and when a host hung a rose above his tables, his guests understood that all words spoken under it were to remain secret. Later, roses were carved as decorations on the ceilings of council chambers and confessionals, with the same significance.

The rose is the flower of Venus, and Love, in order that her sweet dishonesties might be hidden, dedicated this gift of his mother to Harpocrates, the god of silence. Hence the host hangs the rose over his friendly tables, that his guests may know that beneath it what is said will be regarded as secret.

II—Rose: Its Beauty

7
The rose that all are praising,
Is not the rose for me;
Too many eyes are gazing
Upon the faultless tree.
But there's a rose in yonder glen
That scorns the gaze of other men;
For me its beauty saying,—
Oh! that's the rose for me.

O rose! the sweetest blossom,
Of spring the fairest flower;
O rose! the joy of heaven.

JAMES GATES PIERCE, Anacreontic.

Sometimes, when on the Alpine rose,
The golden sunset leaves its ray,
So like a gem the flow'et glows,
We thither bend our headlong way;
And though we find no treasure there,
We bless the rose that shines so fair.

2 Roses all that's fair adorn;
Rosy-fingered is the morn;
Rosy-armed the nymphs are seen;
Rosy-skinned is Beauty's queen.

CHARLES WESLEY, Anacreontic.

3 You violets that first appear,

Of use thou'rt, then, be truly,
For asses might upon thee feed.

F. M. BOGENTZ, The Rose and Thistle.
(Frederick Ricord, tr.)

5 But ne'er the rose without the thorn.
ROBERT HERRICK, The Rose.

There is no rose . . . in garden, but there is some thorn.

JOHN LYDGATE, Bochas. ProL, 9. (1430)

6 No rose without a thorn.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

7 The sweetest rose hath his prickles.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 33. (1579)

8 I took her for a rose, but she breedeth a burr.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 1, ch. 20.

9 But the rose leaves herself upon the briar,
For winds to kiss and grateful bees to feed.

15 Better be stung by a nettle than pricked by a rose.

J. H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 327.

16 The rose does not bloom without thorns;
would that the thorns did not outlive the rose.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 103.

17 The rose saith in the dewy morn,
I am most fair;
Yet all my loveliness is born
Upon a thorn.

CHRISTINA ROSETTI, Consider the Lilies of the Field.

18 The rose and thorn, the treasure and dragon, joy and sorrow, all mingle into one.

SADI, Gulistan: Ch. vii, Apologue 19.

19 From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act II, sc. 4, l. 30.

20 But, slack, my hand is sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 111.

21 I am the one rich thing that morn
Leaves for the ardent noon to win;
Grasp me not, I have a thorn,
But bend and take my being in.

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, The Rose.

22 This world that we're a-livin' in
Is mighty hard to beat;
You git a thorn with every rose,
But ain't the roses sweet!

FRANK L. STANTON, This World.

23 The thorns he spares when the rose is taken;
The rocks are left when he wastes the plain;
The wind that wanders, the weeds wind-shaken,

These remain.

SWINBURNE, A Forsaken Garden. St. 3.

24 The best rose-bush, after all, is not that which has the fewest thorns but that which bears the finest roses.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Fisherman's Luck. Ch. vii.

IV—Rose: Its Frailty

25 As long as is one day, so long is the rose's life;

Her brief youth and age go hand in hand.
(Quam longa una dies, ætas tam longa rosarum:

Cum pubescenti juncta senecta brevis.)

AUSONIUS, De Rosis Nascentibus, l. 43.

The bloom of a rose passes quickly away,
And the pride of a Butterfly dies in a day.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM, The Rose and the Butterfly.

All June I bound the rose in sheaves,
Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Way of Love.

Loveliest of lovely things are they
On earth that soonest pass away.
The rose that lives its little hour
Is prized beyond the sculptured flower.

BRYANT, A Scene on the Banks of the Hudson.

Great is the rose
Infected by the tomb,
Yet burgeoning
Indifferent to death.

Great is the rose
That challenges the crypt,
And quotes millenniums
Against the grave.

NATHALIA CRANE, Song from Tadmor.

The fairest and the sweetest rose
In time must fade and beauty lose.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, 105.

Because the rose must fade,
Shall I not love the rose?

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, Song.

It is written on the rose
In its glory's full array:
Read what those buds disclose—
"Passing away."

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Passing Away.

Sweet rose, whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

GEORGE HERBERT, Virtue.

She bloomed on earth, where the loveliest things
Have the saddest dower;
And Rose, she lived as the roses live,
For the space of an hour.

(Mais elle était du monde, où les plus belles choses

Ont le pire destin;

Et Rose, elle e vécu ce que vivent les roses,
L'espace d'un matin.)

FRANÇOIS DE MALHERBE, Rose. In a letter of condolence to M. du Perrier on the loss of his daughter, Rose.

Roses are beauty, but I never see

Those blood drops from the burning heart of June

Glowing like thought upon the living tree,
Without a pity that they die so soon,
Die into petals, like those roses old,
Those women, who were summer in men's hearts

Before the smile upon the Sphinx was cold.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets, No. 18.

'Tis the last rose of summer,
Left blooming alone;
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone;

No flower of her kindred,
No rose-bud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes,
Or give sigh for sigh.

THOMAS MOORE, The Last Rose of Summer.

Each Morn a thousand Roses brings, you say;
Yes, but where leaves the Rose of Yesterday?

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 9. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The roses of seven hundred years
Have flamed and passed away
Since Omar steeped in golden tears
The Rose of Yesterday.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Rose of Yesterday.

When I have pluck'd the rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 13.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd,
soon vaded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 131.

De rose is sweet, but de rose can't stay,
But I'm mighty glad when it blooms my way;

De night fall dark but de Lawd send day,
An' de good Lawd know my name

FRANK L. STANTON, De Good Lord Know My Name.

The year of the rose is brief;
From the first blade blown to the sheaf,
From the thin green leaf to the gold,
It has time to be sweet and grow old,
To triumph and leave not a leaf.

SWINFURNE, The Year of the Rose.

The fairest things have fleetest end:
Their scent survives their close,
But the rose's scent is bitterness
To him that loved the rose!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Daisy. St. 10.

V—Rose: Its Perfume

I'll go' the budding rose, when Phœbus peeps
in view,
For it's like a baumy kiss o' her sweet bonnie mou.

BURNS, The Poet

I am not the rose, but I have lived with the rose (Je ne suis pas la rose, mais j'ai vécu avec elle)

H B CONSTANT (HAYWARD, Letters of Mrs Poe's Introduction.) In his Gustave, Sadi represents a lump of clay still perfumed by the petals fallen from the rose-
trees

Yet, O thou beautiful Rose!
Queen rose, so fair and sweet,
What were lower or crown to thee
Without the Clay at thy feet?

JULIA C R DORR, The Clay to the Rose

The jar will long keep the fragrance of what it was steeped in when new (Quo semel

HORACE, Epistles Bk. 1, epia. 2, l. 59

You may break, you may shatter the vase, if you will,
But the scent of the roses will hang round it still

THOMAS MOORE, Farewell!—But Whenever You Welcome the How

You may break, you may shatter Watkins if you will, but the scent of the Roederer will hang round him still

THOMAS BAILEY ALDERICH, Maryjane Dew

And the rose herself has got Perfume which on earth is not

KEATS, Bards of Passion and of Mirth, l. 15

And sweeten'd every musk-rose of the dale
MILTON, Comus, l. 496.

The rose distils a healing balm
The beating pulse of pain to calm.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon Ode iv

There was never a daughter of Eve but once, ere the tale of her years be done,
Shall know the secret of the Eden Rose, but once
beneath the sun,

Though the years may bring her joy or pain,
sorrow, sorrow or sickness,
The hour that brought her the scent of the Rose,
she lived it in Paradise

WILLIAM K. PHILLIPS, The Eden-Rose (Published anonymously in The Long-Gloves December, 11 July, 1878. Quoted by Kipling in Mrs Henshaws Sin Out.)

Fell on the spangly'd face of those roses,
That gave me to return for the day,
Their eternal youth in an earthly clime,
Sweet roses, you, to whom I...

Die of a rose in aromatic pain
POPE, Essay on Man, epia. 1, l. 200

The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets No. 10

How fair is the Rose! what a beautiful flower!
The glory of April and May!

But the leaves are beginning to fade in an hour,
And they wither and die in a day

Yet the Rose has one powerful virtue to boast,
Above all the flowers of the field
When its leaves are all dead, and fine colours are lost,

Still how sweet a perfume it will yield!
ISAAC WATTS, The Rose

VI—Rose: Red and White

Red as rose of Harpocrate

E B BROWNING, Isobel's Child, l. 32

A white rosebud for a garden

E B BROWNING, *The Romance of the Swan's
Nest* St. 12

Ah ah Cytherea! Adonis is dead

She wept tear after tear with the blood which was shed,

And both turned into flowers for the earth's garden close,

Her tears, to the windflower, his blood, to the rose

E B BROWNING, A Lament for Adonis St. 6

S. T COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner Pt. 1, at 9 Used by Rhoda Broughton as title for a novel

In Heaven's happy bowers

There blossom two flowers,

One with fiery glow

And one as white as snow,

While lo! before them stands,

With pale and trembling hands,

A spirit who must choose

One, and one refuse

R W GILMAN, The White and Red Rose

Roses at first were white,

Till they co'd not agree

Whether my Sappho's breast,

Or they more white sho'd be

But being vanquish'd quite,

A blush their cheeks bespread:

Since which (behold the rest)

The Roses first came red.

ROBERT HERRICK, How Roses Came Red

Rose of the desert, thou art to me

An emblem of staidness putty,—

Of those who keeping their garments white,

Walk on through life with steps aright

JOHN M. WHITT, The White Rose

1 Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,
With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfumed.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act I, sc. 1, l. 254.

Hoary-headed frosts

Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act II, sc. 1, l. 107.

The red rose on triumphant brier.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act III, sc. 1, l. 96.

2 Rosebuds, yellow and red,
Done in a prim, straight row,

Just on the edge of the thread,

Neither above nor below;

Each one shaded the same—

With all the art that she knew—

Making her cross-stitched name,

Ann Elizabeth Drew.

VII—Rose and Love

3 She wore a wreath of roses,

The night that first we met.

T. H. BAYLY, She Wore a Wreath of Roses.

He wore, I think, a chasuble, the day when first we met.

BRET HARTE, The Ritualist.

4 O Rose, who dares to name thee?

No longer roseate now, nor soft, nor sweet,

But pale and hard and dry as stubble wheat,—

Kept seven years in a drawer, thy titles shame thee.

E. B. BROWNING, A Dead Rose.

It was nothing but a rose I gave her,—

Nothing but a rose

Any wind might rob of half its savor,

Any wind that blows. . . .

Withered, faded, pressed between these pages,

Crumpled, fold on fold,—

Once it lay upon her breast, and ages

Cannot make it old!

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, A Sigh.

5 You smell a rose through a fence:

If thou should smell it, what matter?

E. B. BROWNING, Lord Walter's Wife, l. 9.

6 The morning was beautiful, mild and serene,

All nature had waked from repose;

Maternal affection came silently in

And placid in my bosom a rose.

MARY ANN BUTLER, Whitsunide Rose.

(WHITE, Life of Mrs. Ann Seton, p. 477.)

7 When love tinkle first to Earth, the Spring

Spread rose-beds to receive him.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, When Love Came First.

And I will make three beds of roses,

And a thousand fragrant posies.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to his Love, St. 3. (1599)

There will we make our beds of roses,

And a thousand fragrant posies.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Act III, sc. 1, l. 19. (1600)

8 Or risen from play at your pale raiment's hem

God, grown adventurous from all time's repose,

Of your tall body climbed the ivory Tower

And kissed upon your mouth the mystic

Rose.

G. K. CHESTERTON, A Little Litany.

Till the roses' lips grew pale with her sighs.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Rêve du Midi.

9 A rose I marked, and might have plucked;

but she

Blushed as she bent, imploring me to spare

her,

Nor spoil her beauty by such rivalry.

AUBREY DE VIERE, Flowers I Would Bring.

10 She's just like a rose with a broken stem,

That is plucked and then cast aside:

The garden of love has no place for them,

When their fragrance and perfume have died.

For you can't take the stain from a woman's

name,

Nor a flaw from the purest gem,

She chooses her path and must bear the blame—

She's a rose with a broken stem.

CARROLL FLEMING, A Rose with a Broken Stem.

(1901)

11 If you were a white rose Columbine,

And I were a Harlequin,

I'd leap and sway on my spangled hips,

And blow you a kiss with my finger tips,

And woo a smile to your petal lips

With every glittering spin.

CROSBIE GARRETT, A Fantasy.

12 Oh, raise your deep-fringed lids that close

To wrap you in some sweet dream's thrall;

I am the spectre of the rose

You wore but last night at the ball.

THIOPHILE GAUTIER, The Spectre of the Rose.

13 I sent my love two roses,—one

As white as driven snow,

And one a blushing royal red,

A flaming Jacqueminot. . . .

My heart sank when I met her: sure

I had been overbold,

For on her breast my pale rose lay

In virgin whiteness cold.

Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;
Upon her cheek the red rose dawned,—
The white rose meant surrender.
JOHN HAY, The White Flag.

Should this fair rose offend thy sight,
Placed in thy bosom bare,
Twill blush to find itself less white,
And turn Lancastrian there
JAMES SOMERVILLE, The White Rose.

The sweetest flower that blows,
I give you as we part
For you it is a rose
For me it is my heart.
FREDERICK PETERSON, At Parting.

I saw the rose-grove blushing in pride,
I gathered the blushing rose—and sigh'd—
I come from the rose-grove, mother,
I come from the grove of roses.
GIL VICENTE, I Come from the Rose-grove, Mother. (John Bowring, tr.)

Go, lovely rose—
Tell her that wastes her time and me,
That now she knows,
When I resemble her to thee,
How sweet and fair she seems to be.
EDMUND WALLER, Go, Lovely Rose.

Yet, though thou fade,
From thy dead leaves let fragrance rise;
And teach the maid
That goodness Time's rude hand defies,
That virtue lives when beauty dies.

RUIN

I—Ruin: Apothegms

A ruin—yet what ruin! from its mass
Walls, palaces, half-cities, have been rear'd.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 143. Referring to the Colosseum at Rome.

Tully was not so eloquent as thou,
Thou nameless column with the buried base!
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 110.

There is a temple in ruin stands,
Fashion'd by long-forgotten hands;
Two or three columns, and many a stone,
Marble and granite, with grass o'ergrown!
Out upon time! it will leave no more
Of the things to come than the things before!

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 18.
While in the progress of their long decay,
Shrines sink to dust, and nations pass away.
None of Cities, On the Ruins of Persia.

Crumpling a pyramid, bumbling a rose,
The dust has its reasons wherever it goes.
NATHALIA CRANE, The Dust.

Men moralise among ruins.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. v, ch. 5.

There's a fascination frantic
In a ruin that's romantic.
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

So many great nobles, things, administrations,
So many high chieftains, so many brave nations,
So many proud princes, and power so splendid,

In a moment, a twinkling, all utterly ended.
JACQUES, De Contemptu Mundi. (Coles, tr.,

ROBERT SOUTHY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. i, canto 4, st. 30.

To build up cities an age is needed, but an hour destroys them. A forest is long in growing, but in a moment is reduced to ashes.
(Urbes constituit ætas: hora dissolvit: mo-mento fit cinis. diu sylvæ.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. iii, sec. 27.

We two will sink on the wild waves of ruin,
Even as a vulture and a snake outspent
Drop twisted in inextricable fight,
Into a shoreless sea.

JAMES THOMSON, Britannia, l. 215.

Lovely in death the beauteous ruin lay;
And if in death still lovely, lovelier there;
Far lovelier! pity swells the tide of love.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night III, l. 104.

Final ruin fiercely drives
Her ploughshare o'er creation!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night IV, l. 167.

Stern ruin's ploughshare drives elate
Full on thy bloom.
BURKE, To a Mountain Daisy.

She may still exist in undiminished vigour, when some traveller from New Zealand shall, in the midst of a vast solitude, take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's.

MACAULAY, Essays: Ranke's History of the Popes. (Edinburgh Review, Oct., 1840.)
Referring to the Roman Catholic Church
See also ROME: THE CHURCH OF ROME.

³ What cities, as great as this, have . . . promised themselves immortality! Posterity can hardly trace the situation of some. The sorrowful traveller wanders over the awful ruins of others. . . . Here stood their citadel, but now grown over with weeds; there their senate-house, but now the haunt of every noxious reptile; temples and theatres stood here, now only an undistinguished heap of ruins.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee: No. iv, *A City Night-
Piece*. (27 Oct., 1759.)

When London shall be a habitation of bitterns, when St. Paul and Westminster Abbey shall stand shapeless and nameless ruins in the midst of an unpeopled marsh, when the piers of Waterloo Bridge shall become the nuclei of islets of reeds and osiers, and cast the jagged shadows of their broken arches on the solitary stream, some Transatlantic commentator will be weighing in the scales of some new and now unimagined system of criticism the respective merits of the Bells and the Fudges and their historians.

SHEELLY, Peter Bell the Third: Dedication.
(1819)

At last, some curious traveller from Lima will visit England, and give a description of the ruins of St. Paul's, like the editions of Balbec and Palmyra.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann. 24
Nov., 1774.

When I have been indulging this thought I have,
in imagination, seen the Britons of some future century, walking by the banks of the Thames, then overgrown with weeds and almost impossible with rubbish. The father points to his son where stood St. Paul's, the Monument, the Bank, the Mansion House, and other places of the first distinction.

UNKNOWN, Humorous Thoughts on the Removal of the Seat of Empire and Commerce.

⁴ Who knows but that hereafter some traveller like myself will sit down upon the banks of the Seine, the Thames, or the Zuyder Zee, where now, in the tumult of enjoyment, the heart and the eyes are too slow to take in the multitude of sensations,—who knows but that he will sit down solitary amid silent ruins, and weep a people injured, and their greatness changed into an empty name?

CONSTANTIN CHASSERON, Comte de Volney, Ruines. Ch. 2. (1791)

⁵ Where now is Britain? . . .
Even as the savage sits upon the stone
That marks where stood her capitol, and hears

The bitter booming in the weeds, he shrinks

12. I from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Induction, l. 3.

Rumour is a pipe

Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Induction, l. 15.

We hold rumour

RUST

1 It is better to wear out than to rust out.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, when a friend told him that he would wear himself out by his incessant labors. (BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, p. 18, note; HORNE, Sermon on the Duty of Contending for the Truth.) The saying was attributed to George Whitefield, the famous

Methodist preacher, by Southey. (Life of Wesley. Vol. II, l. 170.)

If I rest, I rust. (Rust' ich, so rost' ich.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Maxims.

2 There is rust upon locks and hinges,
And mould and blight on the walls,
And silence faints in the chambers,
And darkness waits in the halls.

LOUISE C. MOULTON, The House of Death

3 I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act I, sc. 2, l. 245.

4 How dull it is to pause, to make an end,
To rust unburnish'd, not to shine in use.

SABBATH

I—Sabbath: Its Observance

8 Sunday clears away the rust of the whole week.

ANDISON, The Spectator. No. 112.

6 I sing the sabbath of eternal rest.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The First Hour. St. 1.

7 There are many people who think that Sunday is a sponge to wipe out all the sins of the week.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

8 Of all the days that 's in the week
I dearly love but one day—
And that 's the day that comes betwixt
A Saturday and Monday;
For then I'm drest all in my best
To walk abroad with Sally;
She is the darling of my heart,
And she lives in our alley.

HENRY CAREY, Sally in Our Alley.

9 'Tis sweet to him, who all the week
Through city-crowds must push his way,
To stroll alone through fields and woods,
And hallow thus the Sabbath-day.

S. T. COLMAN, Home-Sick. St. 1.

10 How still the morning of the hallow'd day!
How is the voice of rural labor, hush'd
The ploughboy's whistle, and the milkmaid's song.

JAMES GRAHAM, The Sabbath.

Hail Sabbath! thee I hail, the poor man's day.

JAMES GRAHAM, The Sabbath.

Yes, child of suffering, thou may'st well be sure
He who ordained the Sabbath loves the poor!

O. W. HOLMES, Uranus, l. 325.

11 Gently on tiptoe Sunday creeps,
Cheerfully from the stars he peeps,
Mortals all are asleep below,
None in the village hears him go,
Even chanticleer keeps very still,
For Sunday whispered, 'twas his will.

JOHN PETER HESE, Sunday Morning

12 Sundays observe: think when the bells do chime

'Tis angels' music.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 65.

A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content,
And health for the toils of the morrow;

But a Sabbath profan'd,

Whatso'er may be gain'd,

Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.

SIR MATTHEW HALE, Golden Maxim. Said to be "a poetical rendering of a passage in a letter to his children."

13 O day most calm, most bright,
The fruit of this, the next world's bud, . . .
The week were dark, but for thy light:

Thy torch doth show the way.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 1.

The other days and thou
Make up one man; whose face thou art,
Knocking at heaven with thy brow:
The work-days are the back-part;
The burden of the week lies there.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 8.

On Sunday heaven's gate stands ope;
Blessings are plentiful and ripe,
More plentiful than hope.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 29.

Thou art a day of mirth,
And, where the week-days trail upon the ground,
Thy flight is higher.

GEORGE HERBERT, Sunday, l. 57.

Day of all the week the best,
Emblem of eternal rest.

JOHN NEWTON, Saturday Evening. (1774)

1 Day of the Lord, as all our days should be!
LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act ii, sc. 2.

Take the Sunday with you through the week,
And sweeten with it all the other days.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, st. 5.

2 So sang they, and the empyrean rung
With Hallelujahs: Thus was Sabbath kept.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 633.

3 See Christians, Jews, one heavy sabbath keep.
And all the western world believe and sleep!
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 99.

No place is sacred, not the church is free,
Ev'n Sunday shines no Sabbath-day to me.
POPE, Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot, l. 11.

4 Now once a week, upon the Sabbath day,
It is enough to do our small devotion,
And then to follow any merrie motion.
SPENCER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 456.

5 The Sabbaths of Eternity,
One Sabbath deep and wide.
TENNYSON, St. Agnes' Eve. St. 3.

II—Sabbath: The Blue Sabbath

6 We have it on good authority that it is lawful to pull an ass out of the pit on the Sabbath day. Well, there never was a bigger ass, nor a deeper pit.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, to his attorneys, who came to consult him one Sunday, during the Tilton-Beecher trial, in the fall of 1874.
(Dict. of Amer. Biog., ii, 134.)

Golf may be played on Sunday, not being a game within view of the law, but being a form of moral effort.

STEPHEN BUTLER LEACOCK, Why I Refuse to Play Golf.

7 To Banbury came I, O profane one!
Where I saw a Puritane one
Hanging of his cat on Monday.
For killing of a mouse on Sunday.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Barnabes Journal.
(1638) "Banbury Saint" was slang for an over-strained Puritan.

8 Reforming saints! too delicately nice!
By whose decrees, our sinful souls to save,
No Sunday tankards foam, no barbers shave;

And beer undrawn, and beards unmown, display

Your holy reverence for the sabbath-day.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 633.

Sunday shaven, Sunday shorn,
Better hadst thou ne'er been born!

UNKNOWN. (HENDERSON, Folk Lore, 18.)

9 The Sabbath, as now recognized and enforced, is one of the main pillars of Priestcraft and Superstition, and the stronghold of a merely ceremonial Religion.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON. (Life. Vol. iii, p.
224.)

10 Who backs his rigid Sabbath, so to speak,
Against the wicked remnant of the week.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rue Wilson, l. 183.

The Saints!—the aping Fanatics that talk
All cant and rant, and rhapsodies high-flown—
That bid you baulk A Sunday walk,
And shun God's work as you should shun your own

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rue Wilson, l. 357.

Now really, this appears the common case,
Of putting too much Sabbath into Sunday—
But what is your opinion, Mrs Grundy?

THOMAS HOOD, An Open Question.

For MRS. GRUNDY see SOCIETY: CONVENTION.

11 And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath

New Testament: Mark, ii, 27.

12 For, bless the gude mon, gin he had his ain way,

He'd na let a cat on the Sabbath say
"mew";

Nae birdie maun whistle, nae lambie maun

SAFETY

13 He who goes the lowest builds the safest.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

Often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 19.

14 Safe shall be my going,
Secretly armed against all death's endeavour;
Safe though all safety's lost; safe where men fall;

And if these poor limbs die, safest of all,
RUFUS BROOKS, 1914: Safety.

Oh! are they safe? we ask not of success.
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 5.

Who can hope to be safe? who sufficiently cautious?

Guard himself as he may, every moment's an ambush.

(Quid quisque vitæ, nunquam homini satia Cautum est in horis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. II, ode 13, l. 13. (Lytton, tr.)

The strongest tower has not the highest wall.
Think well of this, when you sit safe at home

WILLIAM MORRIS, *The Earthly Paradise: The
Story of Cupid and Psyche*, I 896.

Let others seek what is safe Utter misery is safe; for the fear of any worse event is taken away. (Tuta petant alii fortuna miserrima tuta est, Nam tumor eventus deterioris abest.)

SALT

Salt of truth.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh Bk. i, l. 708.

I could sit at rich men's tables,—though the courtesies that raised me,
Still suggested clear between us the pale spectrum of the salt.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
St. 9.

Men must eat many a peck of salt together before the claims of friendship are fulfilled.
(Multos modios salis simul edendos case, ut amicitia munus expletum sit.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xix, sec. 67. Referred to as a well-known adage.

It is a true saying that a man must eat a peck of salt with his friend before he knows him.

SALVATION

13 What must I do to be saved?
New Testament: Acts, xvi, 30.

Despair of being saved, "except thou be born again."

This kind of despair is one of the first steps to heaven.
 RICHARD BAXTER, Saint's Rest. Ch. 6.

For my salvation must its doom receive,
 Not from what others, but what I believe.
 DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 303.

No one can be redeemed by another No God and no saint is able to shield a man from the consequences of his evil doings. Every one of us must become his own redeemer

SUBHADRA BHILSHU, A Buddhist Catechism.
 Salvation is from God only. (Solo Deus salus.)
 UNKNOWN. A Latin motto.

14 The elect are those who will; the non-elect are those who won't.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

15 The fearless man is his own salvation.
 ROBERT BRIDGES, The First Seven Divisions. 5 Dec., 1917.

16 Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.

 EPICTETUS, Fragmenta. Frag. 522. (SENeca, Epistula ad Luciliam. Epist. xxviii, sec. 9.)

19 I know that my redeemer liveth.
Old Testament: Job, xix, 25.

1
I am the door [bāb]: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved.

New Testament: John, x, 9. Bābism was founded by Mirza Ali Mohammed, who told the people that he was the bāb or door through which all must pass to enter Paradise.

2
Say, Heav'nly Powers, where shall we find such love.
Which of ye will be mortal to redeem
Man's mortal crime, and just th' unjust to save?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 213.

And now without redemption all mankind
Must have been lost, adjudg'd to Death and Hell
By doom severe.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 222.

3
The will to be saved means a great deal.
(Hoc multum est, velle servari.)

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. iii, sec. 3.

A man may be damned for despairing to be saved.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 259.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 4.

13
When satire flies abroad on falsehood's wing,
Short is her life, and impotent her sting;
But when to truth allied, the wound she gives

Sinks deep, and to remotest ages lives.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 217.

Why should we fear; and what? the laws?
They all are arm'd in virtue's cause;
And aiming at the self-same end,
Satire is always virtue's friend.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 943.

14
Satire is a lonely and introspective occupation, for nobody can describe a fool to the life without much patient self-inspection.

FRANK MOORE COLBY, Simple Simon.

15

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 26.

And I must twist my little gift of words
Into a scourge of rough and knotted cords
Unmusical, that whistle as they swing
To leave on shameless backs their purple sting.
J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

16
Unless a love of virtue light the flame, Satire is, more than those be brands, to
blame;

He hides behind a magisterial air
His own offences, and strips others bare.

COWPER, Charity, l. 491.

When scandal has new minted an old lie,
Or tax'd invention for a fresh supply,
'Tis call'd a satire.

COWPER, Charity, l. 513.

17
Satire has always shone among the rest,
And is the boldest way, if not the best,
To tell men freely of their foulest faults;
To laugh at their vain deeds and vain thoughts.

DRYDEN, Essay Upon Satire, l. 11.

1 The arrows of sarcasm are barbed with contempt. . . . It is the sneer of the satire, the ridicule, that galls and wounds.

WASHINGTON GLADWIN, Things Old and New: Taming the Tongue.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes No. 483.

4 Satire should, like a polished razor keen, Wound with a touch that's scarcely felt or seen.

Thine is an oyster knife, that hacks and baws;

The rage, but not the talent, to abuse
MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, To the Imitator of the First Satire of Horace [Pope.]

5 I wear my Pen as others do their Sword.
To each affronting sot I meet, the word
Is Satisfaction: straight to thrusts I go,
And pointed satire runs han through and through

JOHN OLDHAM, Satires upon a Printer, l. 55.

6 I have never put anyone on the rack by a biting poem, nor does my verse denounce any man's crimes (Non ego mordaci distrinxit carmine quoquam; Nec meus ullius crimina versus habet.)

OWD, Tristia Bk II, l. 563.

Who, for the poor renown of being smart,
Would leave a sting within a brother's heart?

Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?

Pope, Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot, l. 307.

["Sporus," Lord John Hervey.]

For who would be satirical
Upon a thing so very small?

SWIFT, Dr. Delany's Villa.

8 There are to whom my satire seems too bold;

Scarce to wise Peter complaisant enough,
And something acid of Charters much too rough.

Pope, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. II, sat. I, l. 2.

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet
To use much, and hit at all the best.

Pope, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. II, sat. I, l. 2.

The task of that satire rage,
Which, bursting on the early stage,

Branded the vices of the age,
And broke the keys of Rome.

I—Scandal: Definitions

⁴ In things that a man would not be seen in himself, it is a point of cunning to borrow the name of the world; as to say, "The world says," or "There is a speech abroad."

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

Everybody says it, and what everybody says must be true.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Miles Wallingford, Ch. 30.

⁵ That abominable tittle-tattle, Which is the cud eschew'd by human cattle.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto xii, st. 43.

⁶ Gossip is a sort of smoke that comes from the dirty tobacco-pipes of those who diffuse it; it proves nothing but the bad taste of the smoker.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda Bk ii, ch. 13.

⁷ Gossip is vice enjoyed vicariously.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine, Vol. xix, p. 104.

⁸ The opposite of gossip about men and affairs is often the truth. (Le contraire des bruits qui courent des affaires ou des personnes est souvent la vérité.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères, Pt. xli.

⁹ Gossips are people who have only one relative in common, but that relative the highest possible; namely God.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Religio Journalist, 13.

¹⁰ Gossip is charming! History is merely gossip. But scandal is gossip made tedious by morality.

Skil'd by a touch to deepen scandal's tints
 With all the kind mendacity of hints,
 While mingling truth with falsehood—meets with smiles—

A thread of candour with a web of wiles;
 A plain blunt show of briefly-spoken seeming,
 To hide her bloodless heart's soul-harden'd
 scheming;

A lip of lies, a face form'd to conceal;
 And, without feeling, mock at all who feel;
 With a vile mask the Gorgon would disown,—
 A cheek of parchment, and an eye of stone.

10 The office of the scholar is to cheer, to raise, and to guide men by showing them facts amidst appearances.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

The scholar is the student of the world; and of what worth the world is, and with what compass it exceeds the soul of man, such is the work, such the call of the scholar.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Library Edition.

¹ He [the scholar] must be a solitary, laborious, modest, and charitable soul. He must embrace solitude as a bride. . . . That he may become acquainted with his thoughts.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

To talk in public, to think in solitude, to read and to hear, to inquire and to answer inquiries, is the business of a scholar.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 8.

Where should the scholar live? In solitude, or in society? In the green stillness of the country, where he can hear the heart of Nature beat, or in the dark, gray town, where he can hear and feel the throbbing heart of man?

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. I, ch. 8.

² Hell is paved with the skulls of great scholars.

GILLES FIRMIN, The Real Christian. See also HELL: ITS PAVEMENT.

³ The world's great men have not commonly been great scholars, nor its great scholars great men.

⁷ He is yet a scholar, than which kind of man there is nothing so simple, so sincere, none better.

PLINY, of ITRURI, the Greek sophist. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 15.)

⁸ Love seldom haunts the breast where learning lies,

And Venus sets ere Mercury can rise.
Those play the scholars who can't play the men,

And use that weapon which they have, their pen.

POPE, The Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 260.

⁹ He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one; Exceeding wise, fair-spoken and persuading: Lofty and sour to them that loved him not, But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

SCIENCE

I—Science: Definitions

¹⁰ Science is the labour and handicraft of the mind; poetry can only be considered its recreation.

FRANCIS BACON, Description of the Intellectual Globe. Ch. 1.

Science is for those who learn; poetry, for those who know.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. I, No. 71.

¹¹ What we might call, by way of eminence, the dismal science.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The Nigger Question. Referring to political economy and "social science."

PLANCHET, Preliminary Observations: Pursuivant of Arms. Speaking of Heraldry.

¹² What art was to the ancient world, science is to the modern.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarino. Bk. iv, ch. 1.

Science and art belong to the whole world, and the barriers of nationality vanish before them.

GOETHE, Remark, to a German historian, 1813.

¹³ Science distinguishes a man of honour from one of those athletic brutes whom undeservedly we call heroes.

DRYDEN, Fables: Preface. See also under GAME.

¹⁴ Men love to wonder, and that is the seed of our science.

And Lucy, dear child, mind your arithmetic.
... What would life be without arithmetic, but a scene of horrors?

STEWART SMITH, Letters: To Miss —, 22 July, 1835.

Science is the topography of ignorance.

O. W. HOLMES, Medical Essays, p. 211.

Equipped with his five senses, man explores the universe around him and calls the adventure Science.

EDWIN POWELL HUBBLE, Science.

Human science is uncertain guess.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. I, l. 740.

True science teaches, above all, to doubt and to be ignorant.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, The Tragic Sense of Life, p. 93.

A series of judgments, revised without ceasing, goes to make up the incontestable progress of science

DUCLAUZ, Pasteur, p. 111.

Science is nothing but perception.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Health and Education: Science.

One Science only will one genius fit.
So vast is Art, so narrow human wit.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. I, l. 60.

[We] do not learn for want of time
The sciences which should become our country.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act V, sc. 2, l. 58.

Only when genius is married to science, can the highest results be produced.
HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 1.

Science moves, but slowly, slowly, creeping on from point to point.
ALFRED TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 134.

Mystics always hope that science will some day overtake them
BOOTH TARKINGTON, Looking Forward, p. 112

III—Science: Its Shortcomings

'Twas thus by the glare of false science betrayed,
That leads to bewilder; and dazzles to blind.

JAMES BRATTLE, The Hermit. St. 5.

The atoms of Democritus,
And Newton's particles of light
Are sands upon the Red Sea shore,
Where Israel's tents do shine so bright.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Mech On, Voltaire, Rousseau.

1 Knowledge is not happiness, and science
But an exchange of ignorance for that
Which is another kind of ignorance.

BYRON, M Manfred. Act ii, sc. 4.

2 O star-eyed Science, hast thou wandered
there,

To wait us home the message of despair?

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 325.

When Science from Creation's face

Enchantment's veil withdraws,

What lovely visions yield their place

To cold material laws!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Rainbow.

3 Why does this magnificent applied science which saves work and makes life easier bring us so little happiness? The simple answer runs: Because we have not yet learned to make sensible use of it.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Address, California Institute of Technology, Feb., 1931.

4 'Tis a short sight to limit our faith in laws to those of gravity, of chemistry, of botany, and so forth.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

5 O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called.

New Testament: 1 Timothy, vi, 20.

The humble knowledge of thyself is a surer way to God than the deepest search after science.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i,
ch. 3.

6 Science robs men of wisdom and usually converts them into phantom beings loaded up with facts.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 55.

7 But beyond the bright searchlights of science,
Out of sight of the windows of sense,

Old riddles still bid us defiance,

Old questions of Why and of Whence.

SCOTLAND AND THE SCOTS

I—Scotland: Apothegms

God's will be done It came with a lass and will go with a lass.

JAMES V OF SCOTLAND, on his death-bed, when informed of the birth of a daughter. The Scottish crown was brought into the Stuart family through Margery Bruce, daughter of Robert Bruce, who married Walter Stuart.
The daughter born to James V was Mary Queen of Scots, whose son James removed to England and called himself James I of England and VI of Scotland.

Scotland, thy mountains, thy valleys and fountains
Are famous in story—the birth-place of song.
ALEXANDER CRAWFORD, Scotland.

From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas,
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.
JOHN GALT, Canadian Boat Song. (Blackwood's Magazine, Sept., 1829; Noctes Ambrosianae, No. 46.) The poem is introduced into the Noctes Ambrosianae by Christopher North (John Wilson), as "from a friend of mine now in upper Canada," where Galt had been serving as secretary to a land-purchase company. It has been attributed both to Wilson and to John G. Lockhart, and also to Hugh Montgomery, twelfth Earl of Eglinton. "Shieling" is Scotch for a small hut or dwelling.

Then Scotland's right and Scotland's might,
And Scotland's hills for me;
We'll drink a cup to Scotland yet,
Wi' a' the honours three
HENRY SCOTT RUSSELL, Scotland Yet.

O Caledonia, stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child!
Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,
Land of the mountain and the flood,
Land of my sires! what mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band,
That knits me to thy rugged strand!

III—Scotland: Some Gibes

³ Caledonia's ours.
And well I know within that bastard land
Hath Wisdom's goddess never held command;
A barren soil, where Nature's germs, confined
To stern sterility, can stint the mind;
Whose thistle well betrays the niggard earth,
Emblem of all to whom the land gives birth;
Each genial influence nurtured to resist;
A land of meanness, sophistry, and mist.

SIDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch.

⁵ In my youth, a Highland gentleman measured his importance by the number of men his domain could support. After some time the question was, to know how many great cattle it would feed. Today we are come to count the number of sheep. I suppose posterity will ask how many rats and mice it can feed.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows
Act ii.

A young Scotsman of your ability, let loose upon the world with three hundred pounds, what could he not do? It's almost appalling to think of; especially if he went among the English.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows
Act i.

¹² I've sometimes thought that the difference between the Scotch and the English is that the Scotch are hard in all other respects but soft

But as for them, there are no greater friends to Englishmen and England, when they are out on't, in the world, than they are. And for my own part, I would a hundred thousand of them were there [Virginia] for we are all one countrymen now, ye know, and we should find ten times more comfort of them there than we do here.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act III, sc. 2.

James I was offended at this reflection on his countrymen and compelled its deletion, threatening the authors, Chapman, Jonson, and Marston, with imprisonment.

6 The Scots are poor, cries surly English pride; True is the charge, nor by themselves denied. Are they not then in strictest reason clear, Who wisely come to mend their fortunes here?

In every corner of the world you will find a Scot, a rat, and a Newcastle grindstone.

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART, Life of Scott. Vol. v, p. 99. Quoted as an old saying.

You come of a race of men the very wind of whose name has swept the ultimate seas.

J. M. BARRIE, Reclotial Address, University of St. Andrew's, 3 May, 1922.

9 We will not lose a Scot.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. II, p. 542. Meaning nothing of importance.

10 The Scotch are a nation of gentlemen.

GEORGE IV, Saying, according to Sir Walter Scott. (See Noctes Ambrosianae, Nov., 1830.)

11 Much may be made of a Scotchman if he be caught young.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1772.)

12 The noblest prospects which a Scotchman ever sees is the highroad that leads him to England

SAMUEL JOHNSON, to Mr. Ogilvie, when the latter remarked that "Scotland had a great many noble wild prospects." (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

In all my travels I never met with any one Scotchman but what was a man of sense. I believe everybody of that country that has any, leaves it as fast as they can.

FRANCIS LOCKIER, Scotchmen.

13 I have been trying all my life to like Scotchmen, and am obliged to desist from the experiment in despair.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Imperfect Sympathies.

14 Bitin' and scratchin' is Scotch folks' wooing.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

15 It's ill taking the breeks off a Highlandman.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27.

16 It requires a surgical operation to get a joke well into a Scotch understanding. Their only idea of wit . . . is laughing immoderately at stated intervals.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, Ch. 2.)

The whole [Scotch] nation hitherto has been void of wit and humour, and even incapable of relishing it.

WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 1778.

The Scotch have no way of redeeming the credit of their understandings, but by avowing that they have been consummate villains.

SHAWAN bene; per star meglio, stante qui.
HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Rev. William Mason, 28 Aug., 1778.

SCOTT, SIR WALTER

The Ariosto of the North.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 40.

It can be said of him, when he departed he took a Man's life with him. No sounder piece of British manhood was put together in that eighteenth century of Time.

CARLYLE, Essays: Lockhart's Life of Scott.

On Waterloo's ensanguined plain
Lie tens of thousands of the slain;
But none by sabre or by shot
Fell half so flat as Walter Scott.

THOMAS, LORD ERSKINE, Epigram, on Scott's Field of Waterloo.

His morality is not in purple patches, ostentatiously obtrusive, but woven in through the very texture of the stuff.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen Vol 1, ch. 12.
(1834) Referring to Sir Walter Scott. See also APPENDIX, p. 1296.

SCRATCHING

Mules may ease each other's itch. (Mutuum muli scalpant.)

AUSONIUS, Technopaignon. Pt. iv, l. 12.

Itch . . . also is pleasing.

FRANCIS BACON, Natural History, vii, 694.

Scratching is one of the pleasantest gratifications of nature, especially with the hand. (Si est la gratterie des gratifications de nature les plus douces, et autant à main.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

Itch and ease can no man please.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 486.

I claw oft where it does not itch.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Elogs. No. 30. (c. 1510)

Thou makest me claw where it itcheth not.

JOHN HERRWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 2, ch. 8.

'Twould make one scratch where 't does not itch,
To see looks live grace to the sick.

THOMAS SHANWELL, Woman Captain. Act I.

And he, whose itching no scratching will Sopress,

He must bear the scratching that shall follow
there.

THOMAS FULLER, Græcologia. No. 5035.

There is more itching than scratching.

THOMAS FULLER, Græcologia. No. 5035.

You'll scratch a beggar before you die.

THOMAS FULLER, Græcologia. No. 5035.

She'll never scratch a grey head

SWIFT, Familiar Conversation. Dial. 3.

'Tis better than riches to scratch when it itches.

UNKNOWN An English proverb.

Scratch my head, Peaseblossom

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act iv, sc. 1, l. 7.

She loved not the savour of tar nor of pitch,
Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest Act ii, sc. 2, l. 55.

I would thou didst itch from head to foot and
I had the scratching of thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 1, 30

God bless the Duke of Argyle.

UNKNOWN A humorous phrase supposed to be addressed to Scotchmen when they scratch themselves. The story goes that the Duke of Argyle erected posts on his estates for his cattle to rub themselves against, and his herdsman, as they rubbed their own backs against the posts, uttered this blessing.

EXCELSIOR, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Sculpture is more divine, and more like Nature.

That fashions all her works in high relief,
And that is sculpture. This vast ball, the Earth,

Was moulded out of clay, and baked in fire;
Men, women, and all animals that breathe
Are statues and not paintings.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. III, sec. 5.

Sculpture is more than painting. It is greater
To raise the dead to life than to create Phantoms that seem to live.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. III, sec. 5.

⁴ Roll on, thou deep and dark-blue Ocean, roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain;
Man marks the earth with ruin, his control
Stops with the shore; upon the watery plain
The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth remain
A shadow of man's ravage.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 179.

Dark-heaving;—boundless, endless, and sublime—

The image of Eternity—the throne
Of the Invisible; even from out thy slime
The monsters of the deep are made; each zone
Obeys thee; thou goest forth, dread, fathomless, alone.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 183.

⁵ Unchangeable save to thy wild waves' play;
Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow;
Such as creation's dawn beheld, thou rollest

MADAME DE STAËL, Germany, Bk. i, ch. 4.

⁶ And I have loved thee, Ocean! and my joy
Of youthful sports was on thy breast to be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward. From a boy
I wanton'd with thy breakers, . . .
And trusted to thy billows far and near,

And laid my hand upon thy mane—as I do here.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 184.

I'll bid him welcome, clap his mane,
And hug his breakers to my breast.
GEORGE GRAY, The Storm.

He laid his hand upon "the Ocean's mane,"
And played familiar with his hoary locks.

POLLOCK, The Course of Time, Bk. iv, l. 689.

⁷ Behold the Sea,
The opaline, the plentiful and strong,
Yet beautiful as is the rose in June,
Fresh as the trickling rainbow of July;
Sea full of food, the nourisher of kinds,
Purger of earth, and medicine of men;
Creating a sweet climate by my breath,
Washing out harms and griefs from memory,
And, in my mathematic ebb and flow,
Giving a hint of that which changes not.
EMERSON, Sea-Shore.

The hollow murmur of the ocean-tide.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel, Bk. i, l. 340.

⁹ Sweet is the bitter sea, and the clear green in which the gaze seeks the soul, looking through the glass into itself. The sea thinks for me as I listen and ponder; the sea thinks, and every boom of the wave repeats my prayer.

RICHARD JEFFRIES, The Story of My Heart.

¹⁰ Who hath desired the Sea? Her excellent

Before their eyes in sudden view appear
The secrets of the hoary deep, a dark
Illimitable Ocean, without bound,
Without dimension, where length, breadth,
and height,
And time and place are lost; where eldest
Night

And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold
Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise
Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.
For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions
herce,

Strive here for mastery.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 890.

5
The sea! the sea! the open sea!
The blue, the fresh, the ever free!
Without a mark, without a bound,
It runneth the earth's wide regions round;
It plays with the clouds; it mocks the skies;
Or like a cradled creature lies.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

Remember to throw into the sea the oil which I give to you, when straightway the winds will abate, and a calm and smiling sea will accompany you throughout your voyage.

VENERABLE BEDD, Ecclesiastical History. Bk. III, ch. 15. Hence the expression, "To throw oil on troubled waters."

All seas are made calm and still with oil; and therefore the divers under the water do spirt and sprinkle it abroad with their mouths because it dulceth and allayeth the unpleasant nature thereof, and carrieth a light with it.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. II, ch. 103.

Why does pouring oil on the sea make it clear and calm? Is it because the winds, slipping the smooth oil, have no force, nor cause any waves?

PLUTARCH, Moralis: Natural Questions Sec. 12.

The sea heaves up, hangs loaded o'er the land,
Breaks there and buries its tumultuous strength.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act I.

Come hither, hither, my little page!

Why dost thou weep and wail?

Or dost thou dread the billows' rage,

Or tremble at the gale?

But dash the tear-drop from thine eye;

Our ship is swift and strong,

Our fleetest falcon scarce can fly

More merrily along.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto I, st. 13. Song.

Old Testament: Job, xli, 31.

Let him who knows not how to pray go to sea.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

He that will learn to pray, let him go to Sea.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculo Prudentum. No. 84.

And all day long the stone

Felt how the wind was blown;

And all night long the rock

Stood the sea's shock;

While, from the window, I

Looked out, and wondered why,

Why at such length

Such force should fight such strength.

JOHN MASKFELD, Watching by a Sick-bed.

Look when the clouds are blowing

And all the winds are free:

In fury of their going

They fall upon the sea.

But though the blast is frantic,

And though the tempest raves,

The deep immense Atlantic

Is still beneath the waves.

F. W. H. MYERS, Wind, Moon and Tides.

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean

And billows wild contend with angry roar,

'Tis said, far down beneath the wild commotion

That peaceful stillness reigneth evermore.

ELIZABETH BARRETT STOWE, Rymas.

1 Wherever I look, there is naught but sea and air—sea swollen with billows, air athreat with clouds; and between them are the hum and roar of the cruel winds. (Quocumque aspicio, nihil est, nisi pontus et aer, Fluctibus hic tumidus, nubilus ille minax. Inter utrumque fremunt inmani murmure venti.)
OVID, Tristia. Bk i, eleg. 2, l. 23.

The storm is master; man, like a ball,
Is toss'd 'twixt wind and billow.
(Der Sturm ist Meister; Wind und Welle spielen Ball mit dem Menschen.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 59.

We are carried up to the heaven by the circling wave, and immediately the wave subsiding, we descend to the lowest depths. (Tollimur in caelum curvato gurgite, et idem Subducta ad Manis imos descendimus unda.)

VERGIL, Aeneid Bk. iii, l. 564.

Ocean into tempest wrought
To wait a feather or to drown a fly.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 153.

2 As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 101.

3 Blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act v, sc. 1, l. 67.

4 Cease, rude Boreas, blustering railer!
List, ye landsmen all, to me:
Messmates, hear a brother sailor
Sing the dangers of the sea.
GEORGE A. STEVENS, The Storm.

5 Yet winds to seas
Are reconcil'd at length, and sea to shore.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 961.

V—Sea: Sailing

6 Once more upon the waters! yet once more!
And the waves bound beneath me as a steed
That knows his rider.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 2.

This quiet sail is as a noiseless wing
To wait me from distraction.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 85.

7 O'er the glad waters of the dark-blue sea,
Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls as free,
Far as the breezes can bear, the billows foam,
Survey our empire, and behold our home!

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

8 Give me a spirit that on this life's rough sea
Loves t' have his sails fill'd with a hasty wind,

Even till his sail-yards tremble, his masts crack,
And his rapt ship run on her side so low
That she drinks water, and her keel plows air.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, Byron's Conspiracy. Act iii, sc. 1.

9 The ship was cheered, the harbour cleared,
Merrily did we drop
Below the kirk, below the hill,
Below the lighthouse top
S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 6.
We were the first that ever burst
Into that silent sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. ii, st. 5.
10 But oars alone can ne'er prevail
To reach the distant coast;
The breath of heav'n must swell the sail,
Or all the toil is lost.
COWPER, Human Frailty. St. 6.

And all the way, to guide their chime,
With falling oars they kept the time.
ANDREW MARVELL, Bermudas.
Faintly as tolls the evening chime,
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time
THOMAS MOORE, A Canadian Boat-Song

11 A wet sheet and a flowing sea,—
A wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast,—
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While, like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.
ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea.

12 Well, then—our course is chosen, spread the sail,
Heave oft the lead, and mark the soundings well;
Look to the helm, good master; many a shoal
Marks this stern coast, and rocks, where sits the Siren,
Who, like ambition, lures men to their ruin
WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Quoted by Scott, Kentworth. Ch. 17.

13 Thus, thus I steer my bark, and sail
On even keel with gentle gale.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 814.
Though pleased to see the dolphins play,
I mind my compass and my way.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 826.

For me, my craft is sailing on,
Through mists to-day, clear seas anon.
Whate'er the final harbor be,
Tis good to sail upon the sea!
JOHN KENDRICK BAKER, The Voyage.

14 Come o'er the moonlit sea,

The waves are brightly glowing.

CHARLES JEFFREYS, The Moonlit Sea.

1 Some love to roam o'er the dark sea's foam,
Where the shrill winds whistle free.

CHARLES MACKAY, Some Love to Roam.

2 "Ahoy! and O-ho! and it's who's for the ferry?"

(The briar's in bud and the sun going down)

"And I'll row ye so quick and I'll row ye so steady,

And 't is but a penny to Twickenham
Town."

THÉOPHILE MARZIALS, Twickenham Ferry.

3 Well pleas'd they slack their course, and many a league

Cheer'd with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 164.

4 Thus far we run before the wind.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Apprentice. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 344.

But the principal failing occurred in the sailing,
And the Bellman, perplexed and distressed,
Said he had hoped, at least, when the wind blew
due East,

That the ship would not travel due West!

LEWIS CARROLL, The Hunting of the Snark.

5 Simple and strong and desolate and daring,
Leaps to the great embraces of the sea.

FREDERIC W. H. MYERS, St. Paul.

6 We have ploughed the vast ocean in a fragile bark. (Nos fragili ligno vastum sulcavimus æquor.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 35.

7 I'm on the sea! I'm on the sea!

I am where I would ever be,

With the blue above and the blue below,
And silence wheresoe'er I go.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Sea.

8 A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,

Where the scattered waters rave,
And the winds their revels keep!

EPES SARGENT, A Life on the Ocean Wave.

9 Upon the gale she stooped her side,
And bounded o'er the swelling tide,
As she were dancing home;

The merry seamen laughed to see
Their gallant ship so lustily

Furrow the green sea-foam.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 1.

10 Behold the threaten sails,
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,

Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd
sea,

Breasting the lofty surge.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, Prologue, l. 10.

Sail like my pinnae to these golden shores.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

11 Gentle airs

Curl'd the blue deep, and bright the summer
sun

Play'd o'er the summer ocean, when our barks
Began their way. And they were gallant barks
As ever through the raging billows rode;
And many a tempest's buffeting they bore.

Their sails all swelling with the eastern breeze,
Their tighten'd cordage clattering to the mast,
Steady they rode the main.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 5.

Day after day, with one auspicious wind,
Right to the setting sun we held our course. . . .

Day after day, day after day the same,—
A weary waste of waters!

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 16.

And still at morning where we were at night,
And where we were at morn, at nightfall still,
The centre of that drear circumference,
Progressive, yet no change!

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. iv, l. 83.

12 I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.

I will go down to her, I and none other,
Close with her, kiss her and mix her with me.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 33. See

13 Rocked in the cradle of the deep

I lay me down in peace to sleep;

Secure I rest upon the wave,

For Thou, O Lord! hast power to save.

EMMA HART WILLARD, Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep. Written at sea, 14 July, 1831.

VI—Sea: Sailors

14 Great seamen . . . in tall ships ribbed with brass,

To put a girdle round about the world.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act i, sc.

1. A proverbial expression for a voyage around the world.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 175.

He hath put a girdle 'bout the world,
And sounded all her quicksands.

JOHN WILKES, Duchess of Malfi. Act iii, sc. 2.

Round the world and home again,
That's the sailor's way.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Homeward Bound.

Whisper waves can roll, and winds can blow.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell.

While the hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

ALLAN CUMMINGHAM, A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea.

For they say there's a Providence sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack!

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack.

There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack.

For if bold tars are Fortune's sport,
Skill is they Fortune's care.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Blind Sailor.

Mayhap you have heard that as dear as their lives
All true-hearted tars love their ships and their wives.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Nancy.

In every mess I find a friend,
In every port a wife.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Jack in His Element.

They'll tell thee sailors, when away,
In every port a mistress find.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

A seafaring man may have a sweetheart in every port;
But he should steer clear of a wife as he would avoid a quicksand.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 21.

Here, a sheer hulk, lies poor Tom Bowling,
The darling of our crew;

No more he'll hear the tempest howling,
For death has broached him to.

His form was of the manliest beauty,
His heart was kind and soft;

Faithful, below, he did his duty;
But now he's gone aloft.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Tom Bowling.

Skill'd in the globe and sphere, he gravely stands,
And, with his compass, measures seas and lands.

DERRICK, Sketches of Jaxxamal, l. 760.

The wonder is always new that any sane man can be a sailor.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 36.

Four women are like your element, always tempestuous.

FAUGERAC, St. Harry's Whisker. Act I, sc. 1.

A wide and businessy world is the sea.
JOHN BOWEN, Deceit. Act II, sc. 1.

The shipper's heart and soul are in the sea.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act I, sc. 1.

"Nantucket's sunk and here we are Right over old Marm Hackett's garden!"
JAMES T. FIELDS, The Nantucket Shipper.

Now landsmen all, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise to the top of the tree,
If your soul isn't fettered to an office stool,
Be careful to be guided by this golden rule—
Stick close to your deaks and never go to sea,
And you all may be Rulers of the Queen's Navee!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

Sailors should never be shy.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

Sailors are but worldly men, and little prone to lead serious and thoughtful lives

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

Oak and brass of triple fold
Encompassed sure that heart, which first made bold

To the raging sea to trust a fragile bark.
(Illu robur et æs triplex)

Circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci Commissit pelago ratem Primus)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 3, l. 9. (Conington, tr.)

The hungry sea is fatal to sailors (Exitio est avidum mare nautis)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 28, l. 18

Trust to a plank, draw precarious breath,
At most seven inches from the jaws of death.

(Confusus ligno, digitis a morte remotus Quatuor aut septem, et sit latissima, medea.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 58.

Avoid business with the sea, and put thy mind to the ox-drawn plough, if it is any joy to thee to see the end of a long life On land there is length of days, but on the sea it is difficult to find a man with gray hair

PHALACUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 650.)

Ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, land-thieves and water-thieves, I mean pirates, and then there is the peril of waters, winds and rocks.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, I, 3, 22.

Of all the husbands on the earth,
The sailor has the finest berth,

For in 'is cabin he can sit
And sail and sail—and let 'er knit.

WALLACE LAWREN, A Grain of Salt.

A baby was sleeping, its mother was weeping,
For her husband was far on the wild-raging sea.

SAMUEL LOVER, The Angel's Whisper.

No man will be a sailor who has contrivance enough to get himself into a jail; for being in a ship is being in jail with the chance of being drowned. . . . A man in a jail has more room, better food, and commonly better company.

CHARLES JOHNSON, (Dorwell, Life, 1859.)

What is a ship but a prison?

ROBERT BURNES, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. II, sec. III, sect. 4.

4 Seek, sailor, the safe harbors. (Tutos, pete, navita, portus.)

OVID, Fastid. Bk. IV, l. 625.

A Passage perillus makyth a Port pleasant.

UNKNOWN, Motto, inscribed on a harbor wall on the Lake of Como.

Did you voyage all unspoken, small and lonely?

Or with fame, the happy fortune of the few?

So you win the Golden Harbour, in the old way;

There's the old sea welcome waiting there for you.

RONALD A. HOSWOOD, The Old Way. (London Times, 16 Sept., 1916.)

They saw the cables loosened, they saw the gangways cleared,

They heard the women weeping, they heard the men that cheered;

Far off, far off, the tumult faded and died away,

And all alone the sea-wind came singing up the Bay.

5 The seaman sets his sails to suit the wind. (Uicumque in alto ventust, exim velum vortitur.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 49. (Act I, sc. 1.)

6 There is no pleasure sailors have greater than sighting from the deep the distant land.

(Voluptas nullast navitis . . . quam quom ex alto procul terram conspiciant.)

PLAUTUS, Menachmi, l. 226. (Act II, sc. 1.)

Pass we the joys and sorrows sailors find,
Coop'd in their winged sea-girt citadel,
The foul, the fair, the contrary, the kind,
As breezes rise and fall and billows swell,
Till on some fœdred shore—lo, land! and all is well.

BYRON, Childs Harold. Canto II, st. 28.

7 They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 23, 24.

8 Like a drunken sailor on a mast;

Ready, with every nod, to tumble down

Into the fatal bowels of the deep

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act III, sc. 4, l. 101.

9 I make good the old saying, we sailors get money like horses, and spend it like asses.

SMOLLETT, Percegrine Pickle, Ch. 2.

Strike up the band, here comes a sailor,

Cash in his hand, just off a whaler;

Stand in a row, don't let him go;

Jack's a cinch, but every inch a sailor.

ANDREW B. STERLING, Strike Up the Band. (1900)

10 There were three sailors of Bristol city

Who took a boat and went to sea.

But first with beef and captain's biscuits

And pickled pork they loaded she.

There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmy,

And the youngest he was little Billee.

Now when they got as far as the Equator

They'd nothing left but one split pea.

VII—Sea and Land

13 Whenever you can make your journey by land, do not make it by sea. (Quando terra iter facere possis, ne mari facias.)

APOSTOLIUS, Adagia, Cent. II, sec. 54. One of the three things in his life which Cato

Major repented was having made a journey

by sea when he could have gone by land.

(PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato, Ch. 9, 6.)

There are many advantages in sea-voyaging, but security is not one of them.

VIII—Sea: Seasickness

20 He felt that chilling heaviness of heart,
Or rather stomach, which, alas! attends,
Beyond the best apothecary's art,
The loss of love, the treachery of
friends. . . .

No doubt he would have been much more pathetic,

But the sea acted as a strong emetic.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 21.

The best of remedies is a beef-steak
Against sea-sickness: try it, sir, before

You meer, and I assure you this is true,
For I have found it answer—so may you.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto II, st. 13.

There's not a sea the passenger e'er pukes in Turns up more dangerous breakers than the Euxine.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 5.

The bounding pinnace play'd a game
Of dreary pitch and toss;
A game that, on the good dry land,
Is apt to bring a loss!

THOMAS HOOD, The Sea-Spell, l. 21.

What of the poor man? . . . He hires a boat and gets just as sick as the rich man who sails in his yacht. (Quid pauper? . . . Conducto navigio æque Nauseat ac locuples quem

IX—Sea: Sea-Shell

I wiped away the weeds and foam,
I fished my sea-born treasures home;
But the poor, unsightly, noisome things
Had left their beauty on the shore.
With the sun and the sand and the wild uproar.

EMERSON, Each and All.

But I have sinuous shells of pearly hue; . . .
Shake one, and it awakens; then apply
Its polished lips to your attentive ear,
And it remembers its august abodes,
And murmurs as the ocean murmurs there.

W. S. LANDOR, Gebir. Bk. i, l. 159.

In the upper room I lay, and heard far off
The unsleeping murmur like a shell.

R. L. STEVENSON, To S. C.

The hollow sea-shell, which for years hath stood

On dusty shelves, when held against the ear
Proclaims its stormy parent, and we hear
The faint, far murmur of the breaking flood.
We hear the sea. The Sea? It is the blood
In our own veins, impetuous and near.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Sea-shell Murmurs.

The soul of music slumbers in the shell,
Till waked and kindled by the master's spell;

And feeling hearts—touch them but rightly —pour

A thousand melodies unheard before!
SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 361.

Gather a shell from the strown beach
And listen at its lips: they sigh
The same desire and mystery,
The echo of the whole sea's speech.
D. G. ROSSSETTI, The Sea-Limits.

From within were heard
Murmurings, whereby the monitor expressed
Mysterious union with its native sea.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1138.

I send thee a shell from the ocean-beach;
But listen thou well, for my shell hath speech.
Hold to thine ear And plain thou'lt hear
Tales of ships

CHARLES H. WEBB, With a Nantucket Shell.

It is perhaps a more fortunate destiny to have a taste for collecting shells than to be born a millionaire.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

X—Sea: Freedom of the Sea

Thus much is certain: that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will.

BACON, Essays: Of Kingdoms and Estates.

To all nations their empire will be dreadful, because their ships will sail wherever billows roll or winds can waft them.

SIR JOHN DALRYMPLE, Memoirs of Great Britain and Ireland. Vol. iii, p. 152.

The most advanced nations are always those who navigate the most.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

That the persons of our citizens shall be safe in freely traversing the ocean, that the transportation of our own produce, in our own vessels, to the markets of our own choice, and the return to us of the articles we want for 4 The tendinous part of the mind, so to speak, is more developed in winter; the fleshy, in summer. I should say winter had given the bone and sinew to literature, summer the tissues and the blood.

JOHN BURROUGHS, The Snow-Walkers

5 Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to thee,
Whether the summer clothe the general earth
With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing
Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch
Of mossy apple-tree.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Frost at Midnight, l. 65.

6 Four seasons fill the measure of the year.

KRATZ, The Human Seasons.

Perceiv'st thou not the process of the year,
How the four seasons in four forms appear,
Resembling human life in every shape they wear?
Spring first, like infancy, shoots out her head,
With talky juice requiring to be fed: . . .

Proceeding onward whence the year began,
The Summer grows adult, and ripens into
man . . .

Autumn succeeds, a sober, tepid age,
Not frage with fear, nor boiling into rage; . . .
Last, Winter creeps along with tardy pace.
Soar is his front, and furrow'd is his face.

OWEN, Metamorphoses, xv, 296 (Dryden, tr.)

Sing a song of Spring-time, the world is going round.

Shown by the north wind, listen to its sound. . . .
Sing a song of Summer, the world is nearly still,
The mid-pond has gone to sleep, and so has the mill. . . .

Sing a song of Autumn, the world is going back;
They glean in the sun-field, and stomp on the stack. . . .

Sing a song of Winter, the world stops dead;
Under heavy covered flowers lie dead.

GEORGE MACDONALD, A Song of the Seasons.

They have many are the times:
The Spring times, the Summer times! . . .

Now, how solemn are the times!

The Winter times! the Night times! . . .

Sing then, hopeful are all times!

Winter, Spring, Summer times!

BRYAN W. PROCTOR, A Song for the Seasons.

These, as they change, Almighty Father, these Are but the varied God. The rolling year
Is full of Thee Forth in the pleasing Spring
Thy beauty walks, thy tenderness and love. . . .
Then comes thy glory in the Summer-months,
With light and heat refulgent. Then thy sun Shoots full perfection through the swelling year. . . .

Thy bounty shines in Autumn unconfined,
And spreads a common feast for all that lives.
In Winter awful thou! with clouds and storms
Around thee thrown, tempest o'er tempest rolled,
Majestic darkness! On the whirlwind's wing
Riding sublime.

JAMES THOMSON, A Hymn on the Seasons, l. 1.

Spring, the low prelude of a lordlier song;
Summer, a music without hint of death;
Autumn, a cadence, lingeringly long Winter, a pause,—the Minstrel-Year takes breath.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Year's Ministry.

7 Our seasons have no fixed returns,
Without our will they come and go;
At noon our sudden summer burns,
Ere sunset all is snow
J. R. LOWELL, To —. St. 2.

II—Secrets: Their Betrayal

6 Little secrets are commonly told again, but great ones are generally kept.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 13 Sept., 1748.

If a fool knows a secret, he tells it because he is a fool; if a knave knows one, he tells it wherever it is his interest to tell it. But women and young men are very apt to tell what secrets they know from the vanity of having been trusted.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, Sentences, and Maxims.

The vanity of being known to be entrusted with a secret is generally one of the chief motives to disclose it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, No. 13.

7 None are so fond of secrets as those who do not mean to keep them; such persons covet secrets as a spendthrift covets money, for the purpose of circulation.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 40.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Old and New Schoolmaster.

14 Man is so made that by continually telling him he is a fool he believes it, and by continually telling it to himself he makes himself believe it. For man holds an inward talk with himself alone, which it behoves him to regulate well.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 536.

As I walk'd by myself, I talk'd to myself,
And myself replied to me;

17 Allow not sleep to draw near to your languorous eyelids

Until you have reckoned up each several deed of the daytime:

"Where went I wrong? Did what? And what to be done was left undone?"

Starting from this point, review, then, your acts, and thereafter remember,

Censure yourself for the acts that are base,
but rejoice in the goodly.

PYTHAGORAS (?), Golden Verses. (EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 2.)

Sum up at night what thou hast done by day;
And in the morning what thou hast to do.

Dress and undress thy soul; mark the decay

And growth of it; if, with thy watch, that too
Be down, then wind up both; since we shall be
Most surely judg'd, make thy accounts agree.
GEORGE HARRERT, The Church-Porch. St. 76.

Let not soft slumber close your eyes,
Before you've recollected thrice
The train of action through the day!
Where have my feet chose out their way?
What have I learnt, where'er I've been,
From all I've heard, from all I've seen?
What have I more that's worth the knowing?
What have I done that's worth the doing?
What have I sought that I should shun?
What duty have I left undone,
Or into what new follies run?
These self-inquiries are the road
That lead to virtue and to God.

13 Do your deed, and know yourself. (Fay ton

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 3.

Know thyself. (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

DIAGENES (DIODOTUS LAERTIUS, Thales. Sec. 40.) Diogenes Laertius asserts that this belongs to Thales, one of the seven wise men of Greece, although Aristarchus, in his Successions of Philosophers, attributes it to Phemonoe, and others to Chilon and to Solon. It was the first of the three maxims inscribed on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi. The others were "Nothing too much" (Μὴδὲ ἄγαν), and "Give surely, and trouble is at hand" (Εὐχρησά, ὥρα δ' ἔσται).

I commend my "know thyself," which is still preserved on a column at Delphi. (Commendo nostrum γνῶθι σεαυτόν, nosce te, Quod in columna jam tenetur Delphica.)

CHILON. (AUGUSTUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 138.)

That irksome toil produces most excellent fruit—to distinguish what you can endure and what you cannot, by night and day to examine what you are doing, what you have done, down to the smallest atom. All virtues—self-respect, honor, fortitude—lie in this.

AUGUSTUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 140.

The ancients gave as the injunction, "Know thyself." (Δὴ τότε παρρησιασθε αὐτοῦ καὶ αὐτὸν γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

EPICURUS, Discourses. Bk. I, ch. 18, sec. 18.

Know thyself. (Nosce te.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. I, ch. 22, sec. 53. The commonly used form of the proverb. The full quotation is. Cum igitur: Nosce te, dicat, hoc dicit: Nosce summum iusque, "When then Apollo says, 'Know thyself,' he says, 'Know thy soul'" (Burton, Anatomy of Melancholy, li. 3, 8.)

From heaven descended the precept, "Know thyself." (E caelo descendit γνῶθι σεαυτόν.)

JUVENAL, Satires No. xi, l. 27. It should be noted that σεαυτόν is a contraction of σεαυτόν, and that sometimes one is used and sometimes the other. Originally the word was separated, as in Homer, who always writes, εὐ αὐτόν.

The saying, "Know thyself," is silly. It were more practical to say, "Know other folks." (Γνῶθι τοὺς ἄλλους.)

MEANDER, Thyrallion: Fragment.

If the "Know thyself" (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν) of the oracle were an easy thing for every man, it would not be held to be a divine injunction.

PLUTARCHUS, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 3, sec. 2.

Γνῶθι σεαυτόν!—and is this the prime And heaven-sprung advice of the eldén time! . . . Vain peler of the wean—life, death, soul, clod—Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God!

II—Selfishness: Its Faults

18 Like a hog, or dog in the manger, he doth only keep it because it shall do nobody else good, hurting himself and others.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. 2, mem. 3, sub. 12.

19 You mayn't be changed to a bird though you live

As selfishly as you can;

But you will be changed to a smaller thing—
A mean and selfish man.

PHOEBE CAREY, A Legend of the Northland.

20 Selfishness is the greatest curse of the human race.

High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim,—
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentrat all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonoured, and unsung.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 31.

Twin-sister of Religion, Selfishness!

SHAKESPEARE, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 22.

14
I have yet to find a man worth his salt in any direction who did not think of himself first and foremost. . . . The man who thinks of others before he thinks of himself may become a Grand Master of the Elks, a Socialist of parts, or the star guest of honor at public banquets, but he will never become a great or successful artist, statesman, or even clergyman.

SENTIMENTALISM

4 The barrenest of all mortals is the sentimentalist.

CARLYLE, Characteristics.

Is not Sentimentalism twin-sister to Cant, if not one and the same with it?

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. I, bk. 2, ch. 7.

5

Society is infested by persons who, seeing that the sentiments please, counterfeit the expression of them. These we call sentimentalists,—talkers who mistake the description for the thing, saying for having.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

6

Sentimentalists are they who seek to enjoy without incurring the Immense Debtorship for a thing done.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 24.

The sentimental people fiddle harmonics on the string of sensualism.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.

Ch. I. The word "sentimental" is said to have been used for the first time in a letter written in 1740 by Laurence Sterne.

7

Sentimentality is the error of supposing that quarter can be given or taken in moral conflicts.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

SERVICE

I—Service: Definitions

19 We are his,
To serve him nobly in the common cause,
True to the death, but not to be his slaves.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 343. Referring to the King.

20 Command was service; humblest service done
By willing and discerning souls was glory.

GEORGE ELIOT, Agatha.

21 When I have attempted to join myself to others by services, it proved an intellectual trick,—no more. They eat your service like apples, and leave you out. But love them, and they feel you, and delight in you all the time.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Of Gifts.

Serve and thou shalt be served. If you love and serve men, you cannot, by any hiding or stratagem, escape the remuneration.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: The Sovereignty of Ethics.

1 Who seeks for aid
Must show how service sought can be repaid.
OWEN MEREDITH, Siege of Constantinople.

2 They also serve who only stand and wait.
MILTON, Sonnet: On His Blindness.

3 If I have done the public any service, it is due to patient thought.

ISAAC NEWTON, Remark to Dr. Bentley.

4 For what hard heart would not all service do
To help a fair, a chaste, a woman too?

FRANCIS ROUS, Thule.

5 Service is no heritage
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act I, sc. 3, l. 26.

Service is no inheritance
SWIFT, Directions to Servants: General Rules.

6 It did me yeoman's service.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 36.

7 Alas and alas! you may take it how you will,
but the services of no single individual are indispensable. Atlas was just a gentleman with a protracted nightmare!
R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

8 Enough, if something from our hands have power
To live, and act, and serve the future hour.
WORDSWORTH, After-Thought.

9 Small service is true service while it lasts:
Of humblest Friends, bright Creature! scorn not one:

The Daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the Sun.
WORDSWORTH, To a Child.

II—Service to God

10 All service is the same with God,
With God, whose puppets, best and worst,
Are we: there is no last nor first.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. iv.

Our voluntary service He requires,
Not our necessitated.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 529.

They serve God well, Who serve his creatures.
CAROLINE NORTON, The Lady of La Garaye: Conclusion. l. 9.

11 God curse Moawiyah. If I had served God as well as I have served him, He would never have damned me to all eternity.

SWAMSWA, to the Governor of BASTA, when deposed by the Caliph in 675. (See OCKLEY, History of Saracens. Hegira 54, A. D. 673.)

Had I but written as many odes in praise of Muhammad and Ali as I have composed for King Mahmud, they would have showered a hundred blessings on me.

ABUL KASIM FIRDUSI, The Shahnameh. (c. 1000)

12 Had I but served God as diligently as I have served my king, he would not have given me over in my grey hairs. But this is the just reward that I must receive for my indulgent pains and study, not regarding my service to God, but only to my prince.

CARDINAL WOLSEY, to Sir William Kingston, Constable of the Tower, at Leicester Abbey, 5 Nov., 1530. Wolsey, accused of high treason, was being conducted to London, but was overtaken by illness on the road, stopped at Leicester, and died there. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 30.)

Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not in mine age have left me naked to mine enemies.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 455. (1612)

13 Had I served God as well in every part
As I did serve my king and master still,
My scope had not this season been so short,
Nor would have had the power to do me ill.
THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Death of Morton. (1593)

2 Full little knowest thou that hast not tried,
What hell it is, in suing long to bide
To lose good days, that might be better spent,
To waste long nights in pensive discontent,
To speed today, to be put back tomorrow,
To feed on hope, to pine with fear and sorrow,

To fret thy soul with crosses and with cares,
To eat thy heart through comfortless despair,

To fawn, to crouch, to wait, to ride to run,
To spend, to give, to want, to be undone

SHADOW

1 If you measure your shadow, you will find it no greater than before.

ARCHIMANDRUS III, KING OF SPARTA, to Philip of Macedon, who sent him a haughty letter after his victory at Cheronæa. (PLUTARCH, Apollonius.) The French say, "Un petit homme projette parfois une grande ombre" (A little man sometimes casts a great shadow).

2 Man, shackled to his shadow, cannot move Without the base companionship of self.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Fortunatus the Pessimist. Act 1, sc. 4.

Always there is a black spot in our sunshine—It is the shadow of ourselves.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. 2, ch. 9.

Vain truly is the hope of your swiftest Runner to escape "from his own Shadow!"

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. II, ch. 6.

His shadow for his sole attendant.

LA FONTAINE, Fables: The Use of Knowledge. Bk. II, fab. 18.

3 Catch not at the shadow and lose the substance.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 335. Founded on the fable of the dog and his reflection in the water.

4 Think not thy own shadow longer than that of others, nor delight to take the altitude of thyself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals, i, 14.

5 The worthy gentleman [Mr. Coombe] . . . has feelingly told us, what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue EDMUND BURKE, Speech, Bristol, Sept., 1780.

SHAKESPEARE

8 This was Shakespeare's form;
Who walked in every path of human life,

Felt every passion, and to all mankind
Doth now, will ever, that experience yield
Which his own genius only could acquire.

MARK AKENSIDE, For a Statue of Shakespeare.

9 Bennet in hand, obsequious and discreet,
The butcher that served Shakespeare with his meat

Doubtless esteemed him little, as a man

Fits as silence?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Names.

15 Shake was a dramatist of note;
He lived by writing things to quote.

H. C. BUNNEN, Shake, Mulberry and Go-athe.

16 How often in the summer-tide,
His graver business set aside,
Has stripling Will, the thoughtful-eyed,
As to the pipe of Pan,

Stepped blithesomely with lover's pride
Across the fields to Anne.

RICHARD BUNTON, Across the Fields to Anne.

But were it to my fancy given
To rate her charms, I'd call them heaven;
For though a mortal made of clay,
Angels must love Anne Hathaway;
She hath a way so to control,
To rapture the impression'd soul,
And sweetest heaven-on-earth display,

That to be heaven Anne hath a way;
She hath a way,
Anne Hathaway,—

To be heaven's self Anne hath a way.
CHARLES DUDMAN, A Love Dittie. In his novel
Hannah Hewitt. (1795) Anne Hathaway was the maiden name of Shakespeare's wife.
These verses have often been attributed to Shakespeare, and a biting irony read into them.

1 And rival all but Shakespeare's name below.
CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 472.

2 If I say that Shakespeare is the greatest of intellects, I have said all concerning him. But there is more in Shakespeare's intellect than we have yet seen. It is what I call an unconscious intellect; there is more virtue in it than he himself is aware of.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics of Shakespeare.

3 Happy in tragic and in comic powers,
Have we not Shakespeare?—is not Jonson ours?
For them, your natural judges, Britons, vote;
They'll judge like Britons, who like Britons

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 223.

Things of the noblest kind his genius drew,
And look'd through Nature at a single view:
A loose he gave to his unbounded soul,
And taught new lands to rise, new seas to roll;
Call'd into being scenes unknown before,
And passing Nature's bounds, was something more.

Unmeasured still my Shakespeare sits,
Lone as the blessed Jew.

EMERSON, Quatrains: Shakespeare.

What point of morals, of manners, of economy, of philosophy, of religion, of taste, of the conduct of life, has he not settled? What mystery has he not signified his knowledge of? What office, or function, or district of man's work, has he not remembered? What king has he not taught state, as Talma taught Napoleon? What maiden has not found him finer than her delicacy? What lover has he not outloved? What sage has he not outseen? What gentleman has he not instructed in the rudeness of his behavior?

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

Shakespeare's principal merit may be conveyed by saying that he of all men best understands the English language, and can say what he will.
Hammond, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

1. New Hamlet Prince of Denmark played; but now the old plays began to disgust this refined age

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 26 Oct., 1661.

The play-bill which is said to have announced the tragedy of Hamlet, the character of the Prince of Denmark being left out.

4. Mellifluous Shakespeare, whose enchanting Quill

Commendeth Mirth or Passion, was but Wail.
 THOMAS HAYWOOD, Hierarchy of the Blessed Angels. (1635)

5. Shakespeare was an intellectual ocean, whose waves touched all the shores of thought, . . . towards which all rivers ran, and from which now the isles and continents of thought receive their dew and rain

ROBERT G. INGHAM, Shakespeare.

Shakespeare has done more for woman than all the other dramatists of the world.

ROBERT G. INGHAM, Shakespeare.

6. The stream of Time, which is continually washing the dissoluble fabrics of other poets, passes without injury by the adamant of Shakespeare

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Preface to the Works of Shakespeare.

When Learning's triumph o'er her barbarous foes
 First rear'd the stage, immortal Shakespeare rose;
 Both change of many-colour'd life he drew,
 Embodied wisdom, and those dangers new;
 Eminent he then upon her boundless reign,
 And painting Time tell'd after him in vain.
 His powerful strokes pursuing Truth's impress'd,
 And unobscured Fables form'd the breast.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Preface to the Opening of Drury Lane Theatre, l. 1.

Cornelia is to Shakespeare as a sheep's head to a forest.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, No. 180.

7. This Figure, that thou here seest put,
 It was for gentle Shakespeare cut;
 Wherein the Graver had a strife
 With Nature, to out-doo the life:
 O, could he but have drawn his wit
 As well in brass, as he hath hit
 His face; the Print would then surpass
 All, that was ever writ in brass.

But, since he cannot, Reader, looke

Not on his Picture, but his Booke

BEN JONSON, To the Reader. These verses were printed facing the portrait of Shakespeare prefixed as a frontispiece to the first folio edition of his works, 1623.

8. Soul of the Age!

The applause! delight! the wonder of our stage!

My Shakespeare, rise; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lie
 A little further, to make thee a room
 Thou art a monument, without a tomb,
 And art alive still, while thy book doth live
 And we have wits to read, and praise to give

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of My Beloved Master, William Shakespeare, and What He Hath Left Us, l. 17. Printed on the fifth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

And though thou hadst small Latin, and less Greek,

From thence to honour thee, I would not seek
 For names.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 31.

Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show,
 To whom all scenes of Europe homage owe.
 He was not of an age, but for all time!

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 41.

Nature herself was proud of his designs,
 And joy'd to wear the dressing of his lines!
 Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
 As, since, she will vouchsafe no other wit

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 47.

Yet must I not give Nature all: thy Art,
 My gentle Shakespeare, must enjoy a part.
 For though the poet's matter Nature be,
 His art doth give the fashion.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 55.

For a good poet's made, as well as born,
 And such wert thou! Look how the father's face Lives in his issue; even so, the race
 Of Shakespeare's mind and manners brightly shines

In his well-turned and true fitted lines:

In each of which he seems to shake a lance,
 As brandish'd at the eyes of ignorance.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare, l. 64.

Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were,

To see thee in our waters yet appear.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare,
l. 71.

Shakespeare, at length thy pious fellows give
The world thy works: thy works, by which out-
live

Thy tomb, thy name must: when that stone is rent,

And Time dissolves thy Stratford monument,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This book,
When brass and marble fade, shall make thee
look

Fresh to all ages.

LEONARD DIGGES, To the Memory of the Deceased Author Master, W. Shakespeare.
Eighth preliminary leaf to first folio, 1623.

His days are done, that made the dainty plays,
Which made the Globe of heav'n and earth to ring.

HUGH HOLLAND, Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenicks Poet, Master William Shakespeare. Sixth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

We wonder'd (Shakespeare) that thou went'st so soon

From the World's-Stage, to the Grave's-Tyringroom.

We thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tells thy spectators, that thou went'st but forth
To enter with applause. An actor's art,
Can die, and live, to act a second part.

JAMES MARSH [?], *To the Memory of W.
Shakespeare*. Eighth preliminary leaf to the first folio, 1623.

1 I remember, the players have often mentioned it as an honour to Shakespeare, that in his writing (whatsoever he penn'd) he never blotted out a line. My answer hath been, would he had blotted a thousand.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Shakespeare Nostrat.

2 Shakespeare is not our poet, but the world's,— Therefore on him no speech!

W. S. LAMON, To Robert Browning.

3 The great poet who foreruns the ages,
Anticipating all that shall be said!

LONGFELLOW, Sonnet on Mrs. Kemble's Readings from Shakespeare.

Now you who rhyme, and I who rhyme,
Have not we sworn it, many a time,
That we no more our verse would scrawl,
For Shakespeare he had said it all!

R. W. GILDER, The Modern Rhymer.

4 Then to the well-trod stage anon,
If Jonson's learned sock be on,
Or sweetest Shakespeare, fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 131.

What needs my Shakespeare for his honour'd bones,

The labour of an age in piled stones,
Or that his hollow'd reliques should be hid

Under a star-pointing pyramid?

Dem? son of memory, great heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy
name?

Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a live-long monument, . . .
And so sepulch'r'd in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

MILTON, On Shakespeare. (1630)

5 And one wild Shakespeare, following Nature's lights,

Is worth whole planets, fill'd with Stagyrates.
THOMAS MOORE, The Sceptic, l. 121.

6 I know of no more heartrending reading than Shakespeare. How a man must have suffered to be so much in need of playing the clown.

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Ecce Homo.

7 Shakespeare (whom you and every playhouse bull

Style the divine! the matchless! what you will),

For gain, not glory, wing'd his roving flight,
And grew immortal in his own despite.

epis. 1, l. 69.

Or damn all Shakespeare, like th' affected fool
At court, who hates whatever he read at school
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. II,
epis. 1, l. 105.

8 He seems to have known the world by intuition, to have looked through nature at one glance.

POPE, Preface to the Works of Shakespeare.

9 Hour after hour he loved to pore
On Shakespeare's rich and varied lore.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto I, st. 24.

10 With the single exception of Homer, there is no eminent writer, not even Sir Walter Scott, whom I despise so entirely as I despise Shakespeare when I measure my mind against his.
. . . It would positively be a relief to me to dig him up and throw stones at him.

BERNARD SHAW, Dramatic Opinions and Essays. Vol. v, p. 2.

11 And he the man, whom Nature self had made
To mock her self, and Truth to imitate,
With kindly counter under Mimic shade,
Our pleasant Willy, ah! is dead of late:
With whom all joy and jolly merriment
Is also deaded, and in dolour drent.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Tears of the Muses.

12 Realms yet unborn, in accents now unknown,
Thy song shall learn, and bless it for their
own.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Shakespeare Ode.

1 No man ever spake as he that bade our England be but true,

Keep but faith with England fast and firm,
and none should bid her rue;

None may speak as he: but all may know the sign that Shakespeare knew.

4 Shakespeare is a savage with sparks of genius which shine in a dreadful darkness of night. (Shakespeare est un sauvage avec des étincelles de génie qui brillent dans une nuit horrible.)

VOLTAIRE, Œuvres: Preliminary Letter.

When I gained a fuller acquaintance with the speech, I perceived that the English were right. . . . They saw, as I did, the gross faults of their favorite author, but they felt better than I his beauties, all the more remarkable because they are lightning flashes which have sent forth their gleams in profoundest night.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. Pt. I. Referring to Shakespeare's plays.

7 There is not anything of human trial
That ever love deplored or sorrow knew,
No glad fulfilment and no sad denial,
Beyond the pictured truth that Shakespeare drew.

WILLIAM WINTER, Ashe.

8 The sightless Milton, with his hair
Around his placid temples curled;
And Shakespeare at his side,—a freight
If clay could think and mind were weight,
For him who bore the world!

WORDSWORTH, The Nation's Interest. Pt. I, st. 1.

9 Few of the university pen plays well, they smelt too much of that writer Ovid, and talk too much of Proserpina and Jupiter. Why, here's our fellow Shakespeare puts them all down.

UNKNOWN, Return from Parnassus. Act IV, sc. 3. Printed in 1606, and acted before that date by the students of St. John's College, Cambridge.

10 Good friend for Jesus sake forbear,
To dig the dust enclosed here.
Blessèd be ye man yt spares thes stones.
And curst be he yt moves my bones.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on Shakespeare's tombstone in Stratford Church. Said to have been chosen by him, but not from his pen. The lines are rudely engraved in capital letters on the stone slab which covers his body, the last line an evident imitation of the damnation clause so frequent in Roman sepulchral inscriptions.

11 Stay Passenger, why goest thou by so fast?
Read if thou canst, whom envious Death hath plast,
With in this monument Shakspeare. with whome,

Quick nature dide: whose name doth deck ys Tombe,

Far more then cost: sieh all, yt He hath writt,
Leaves living art, but page, to serve his witt.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on the monument in Stratford Church, erected before 1623.

13 Shame is an ornament to the young, a disgrace to the old, since an old man ought not to do anything of which he need be ashamed. The virtuous man does not feel shame, if shame is the feeling caused by base actions, since the virtuous man does not do base actions. Shame is a mark of a base man, and springs from a character capable of doing a shameful act.

an Italian proverb.

He that makes himself a sheep will find that the wolves are not all dead.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

He that will needs be a sheep, cannot greatly grudge to be bitten with a fox.

BRIAN MELBRANCE, Philobius. Sig. Bb4.
(1583)

He that will make himself a sheep, it is no matter though the wolves do eat him.

BARNABE RICH, Irish Hubbub, 4. (1619)

It is a foolish sheep that makes the wolf his confessor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 23.

You have entrusted the sheep to the wolf.

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 832. (Act v, sc. 1.)

III—Shepherd

Sooth 't were a pleasant life to lead,

With nothing in the world to do

But just to blow a shepherd's reed,

The silent season thro',

And just to drive a flock to feed,—

Sheep—quiet, fond and few!

LAMAR BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente. St. 1.

In summer's heat, and winter's cold,

He fed his flock, and penn'd the fold.

JOHN GAY, Fables; Introduction.

For kings have often fears when they do sup,
Where shepherds dread no poison in their cup.

ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.

The shepherd's homely curds,

His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,

His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,

All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,

Is far beyond a prince's delicates,

His viands sparkling in a golden cup,

His body couched in a curious bed,

When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 47.

My name is Norval; on the Grampian hills

My father feeds his flock; a frugal swain,

Whose constant cares were to increase his store,
And keep his only son, myself, at home.

JOHN HOME, Douglas, Act II, sc. 1.

And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 67. "Tells his tale": i.e., counts his sheep.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?
Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,
Thy sheep shall take no harm.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act III, sc. 6, l. 42.

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss.

SHAKESPEARE [?], The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 245.

SHELLEY, PERCY BYSSHE

In his poetry, as well as in his life, Shelley was indeed "a beautiful and ineffectual angel, beating in the void his luminous wings in vain."

ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma: Shelley.

Ah, did you once see Shelley plain,
And did he stop and speak to you,
And did you speak to him again?

How strange it seems and new!

ROBERT BROWNING, Memorabilia.

For they who shrank from his mad human ache
Call him high Shelley now and praise his wake.

ALFRED KREYMER, A Man Whom Men Deplore.

Knight-errant of the Never-ending Quest,
And Minstrel of the Unfulfilled Desire;
For ever tuning thy frail earthly lyre
To some unearthly music.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Shelley.

Shelley, lyric lord of England's lordliest singers,
here first heard

Ring from lips of poets crowned and dead the Promethean word

Whence his soul took fire, and power to out-soar the sunward-soaring bird.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Elion: An Ode.

'Tis no mean fortune to have heard
A singer who, if errors blurred
His sight, had yet a spirit stirred
By vast desire,

And ardour deciding the swift word
With plumes of fire.

WILLIAM WATSON, Shelley's Centenary.

All the rapturous heart of things
Flashes through his own.

WILLIAM WATSON, Shelley's Centenary.

Shelley, the hectic, flamelike rose of verse,
All colour, and all odour, and all bloom,
Steeped in the moonlight, glusted with the sun,
But somewhat lacking root in homely earth.

SHERIDAN, RICHARD BRINSLEY

Good at a fight, but better at a play;
Godlike in giving, but the devil to pay.

BYRON, On a Cast of Sheridan's Hand.

The flash of Wit, the bright Intelligence,
The beam of Song, the blaze of Eloquence,
Set with their Sun, but still have left behind
The enduring produce of immortal Mind;
Fruits of a genial morn, and glorious noon,
A deathless part of him who died too soon.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 27.

The matchless dialogue, the deathless wit,
Which knew not what it was to intermit;
The glowing portraits, fresh from life, that bring Home to our hearts the truth from which they spring;

These wondrous beings of his Fancy, wrought
To fulness by the fiat of his thought . . .

Long shall we seek his likeness—long in vain,
And turn to all of him which may remain,
Sighing that Nature form'd but one such man,
And broke the die—in moulding Sheridan.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 49.

And could call up its sunshine, or bring down its show'rs:—

Whose humour, as gay as the fire-fly's light,
Play'd round every subject, and shone as it play'd;—

Whose wit, in the combat, as gentle as bright,
Ne'er carried a heart-stain away on its

GEORGE VILLIERS, The Rehearsal. (1671)

6 The ship hangs hovering on the verge of death,
Hill yawns, rocks rise, and breakers roar beneath!

In vain the cords and axes were prepared,
For every wave now smites the quivering yard;

High o'er the ship they throw a dreadful shade,

Then on her burst in terrible cascade. . .
Again she plunges! hark! a second shock
Bids the splitting vessel on the rock—

Down on the vale of death, with dismal cries,
The fated victims shuddering cast their eyes. . .

Ah Heaven!—behold her crashing ribs divide!
She loosens, parts, and spreads in ruin o'er the tide.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 24.

5 'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1114.

Lord, Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
Ten thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,

SHOEMAKER

10 I do not think that shoemaker a good workman who makes a great shoe for a little foot.

ACESILAUS THE GREAT, to one commending an orator for his skill in amplifying petty matters. (PLUTARCH, Laconic Apophthegms.)

11 Let not the cobbler go above his last. (Ne sutor supra crepidam.)

APOLLIS. He was in the habit of hanging his pictures where they could be seen by the passers-by, and listening to their comments. One day a shoemaker criticised the shoes in a certain picture, and found next day that they had been repainted. Proud of his success as a critic, he began to find fault with the thigh of the figure, when Apelles called out from behind the canvas, "Shoemaker, don't go above your last!" (Sutor, ne supra crepidam judicet. PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxxv, ch. 10, sec. 36.) Lucian tells the same story of Phidias.

Let not the cobbler go beyond his last. (Ne sutor ultra crepidam.)

ERASMUS, quoting the proverb in the form generally used. And the usual rendering is, of course, "Cobbler, stick to your last."

Remember, cobbler, to keep to your leather. (Memento, in pellicula, cetero, tenere tua.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, p. 16, l. 6.

Do you not perceive that you are speaking beyond your hammer? (Non sentis, inquit, te ultra malleum loqui?)

8 When boots and shoes are torn up to the luffs, Cobblers must thrust their awls up to the hefts.

NEWMARKET, WARD, The Simple Cobbler of Apprentice in America. Title page.

9 Marry, because you have drank with the King,
And the King hath so graciously plied you,
You shall be made the chief shoemaker
But you and yours to the world's end
Shall be call'd the Trade of the Gentle Craft.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, George-a-Greens, act. II
sc. 4th. (1. 1923) The King's speech was made.

went IV, who, in one of his disguises, is said to have drunk with a party of shoemakers and pledged them. The term, "gentle craft," probably arose from the legend that St. Crispin, after he left Rome for Seasons to preach Christianity, supported himself by shoemaking.

10 I'll . . . fall to my old trade of the gentle craft the cobbler.

ROBERT WILSON, Cobbler's Prophecy, l. 1677. (1594)

11 Brave shoemakers, all gentlemen of the gentle craft.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto i, st. 5

12 And sighed, and wept, and said no more.

CHAUCER, Chaucer's Dream, l. 931. Usually attributed to Chaucer, but probably spurious. The line is borrowed from Alan de Lisle (or de Insulis), De Planctu Naturæ.

Sigh'd and look'd, and sigh'd again.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 120.

Sighed and looked unutterable things

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1188.

13 Not such sorrowful sighs as men make
For woe, or else when that folk be sick,
But easy sighs, such as been to like

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1361.

And easy sighs, such as folk draw in love.

HENRY HOWARD, Prisoner in Windsor.

14 Drew a long, long sigh, and wept a last adieu!
COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture, l. 30.

15 To sigh, yet not recede; to grieve, yet not repent.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. iii.

To sigh, yet feel no pain.

THOMAS MOORE, The Blue Stocking. Song ii.

16 When he is here, I sigh with pleasure—
When he is gone, I sigh with grief.

 Sighs are the natural language of the heart.
 THOMAS SHADWELL, Prycke. Act iii.
- ✓ 5 He raised a sigh so piteous and profound,
 That it did seem to shatter all his bulk
 And end his being
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 94.
- ✓ 6 A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder
 SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 364.
- 7 Hushed be that sigh, be dry that tear,
 Nor let us lose our Heaven here.
 SHREEDAN, Dry Be That Tear.
- 7 Never sigh, but send.

SILENCE

I—Silence: Definitions

8 Silence is gain to many of mankind. (Πολλοὶς χρηστὸν ἀπὸς χάρις ἐστὶ σιωπῆς.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus. Frag. 103.

Silence is a healing for all ailments.
Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, p. 18a.

9 Silence is the virtue of fools, so he rightly said to the silent man: "If you are wise, you are a fool; if you are a fool, you are wise."

BOGGE, De Augustinis Scientiarum: Loquacitas.

Silence is the wit of Ipsi. (Le silence est l'esprit des sots.)

Le Deutisme, Les Comptiens: Conversation.

10 Silence is the eternal duty of man.
CARLYLE, Insular Address at Edinburgh.

Silence, the great Empire of Silence: higher than all stars; deeper than the Kingdom of Death!
It alone is great; all else is small.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. vi.
Silence is the element in which great things fashion themselves together.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. III, ch. 3.

11 The uttered part of a man's life, let us always repeat, bears to the unuttered, unconscious part a small unknown proportion.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.
Of every noble work the silent part is best
Of all expression that which cannot be expressed.
W. W. STORY, The Unexpressed.

12 Silence is the mother of Truth
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iv, ch. 4.

13 The ancient sentence said, Let us be silent for so are the gods. Silence is a solvent that destroys personality, and gives us leave to be great and universal.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

14 Silence is true wisdom's best reply.
EUKIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 947.

Silence is man's chief learning. ('H μὲν ἀνὴρ καλὸς ἐν ἀσκήσει σιωπῆς.)

Auripa nothing writes though learn'd, for he
By a wise silence seems more learn'd to be.

JANUS PANNONIUS, On Auripa.

15 Stillborn silence! thou that art
Flood-gate of the deeper heart!

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Silence.

16 Silence is one great art of conversation He is not a fool who knows when to hold his tongue.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 59.

Silence and modesty are very valuable qualities in the art of conversation. (Le silence et la modestie sont qualités très commodes à la conversation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 25.

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero himself, who says, there is not only an art, but even an eloquence in it.

HANNAH MORE, Essays on Various Subjects: Thoughts on Conversation.

17 Silence is strength (Qui silet, est firmus.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 697.

Love silence, even in the mind; for thoughts are to that as words are to the body, troublesome:
much speaking, as much thinking, spends. True silence is the rest of the mind; and it is to the spirit what sleep is to the body, nourishment and refreshment.

Do you wish people to think well of you? Don't speak. (Voulez-vous qu'on croie du bien de vous? n'en dites pas.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Appendix to ch. 29, No. 15.

If thou wouldst be known a wise man, let thy words show thee so; if thou doubt thy words, let thy silence feign thee so. It is not a greater point of wisdom to discover knowledge than to bide ignorance.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emchiridion. Cent. III, No. 57.

O my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, I, 1, 95.

An event has happened, upon which it is difficult to speak, and impossible to be silent.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 5 May, 1789.

Under all speech that is good for anything there lies a silence that is better. Silence is deep as Eternity; Speech is shallow as Time.

CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

Speech is great, but silence is greater.

CARLYLE, Characteristics of Shakespeare.

As the Swiss inscription says: Speechen ist silbern, Schweigen ist golden—Speech is silver, Silence is golden; or, as I might rather express it, Speech is of Time, Silence is of Eternity.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus, Bk. III, ch. 3.

Silence sweeter is than speech.

And women's slander is the worst.

TENNYSON, The Letters. St. 5.

4 What is slander? A verdict of "guilty" pronounced in the absence of the accused, with closed doors, without defence or appeal, by an interested and prejudiced judge.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Mind. No. 67.

Believe not each accusing tongue,

As most weak mortals do;

But still believe that story wrong

Which ought not to be true.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN, Sheridaniana.

There are two sides to a story,

Hear them both before you blame;

For a woman's crowning glory

Is a fair, unblemished name!

Heaven holds no gift that's grander,

So beware of idle slander;

There are two sides to a story—

Right and wrong!

WILL A. HEZELAN and J. FRED HELE, There Are Two Sides to a Story. (1900) Popularized by Florence Brooks. See 99.3.

5 'Tis slander,

Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath

Rides on the posting winds and doth belie

All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maids, matrons, may, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 35.

Whom whisper o'er the world's diameter,

As level as the cannon to his blank,

Transports his poison'd shot.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 41.

Slander's mark was ever yet the fair;

The ornament of beauty is suspect,

A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.

So thou be good, slander doth but approve

Thy worth the greater.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxx.

Soft-buzzing slander—silly moths, that eat
An honest name.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iv, l. 419.

II—Slander: Apothegms

8 Slander flings stones at itself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4183 (1732)

Who by aspersions throw a stone

At th' head of others, hit their own.

GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots.

If I tell a malicious lie, in order to affect any man's fortune or character, I may indeed injure him for some time; but I shall be sure to be the greatest sufferer myself at last.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

See also under RETRIBUTION.

9 It is said that self-praise stinks in the nostrils. For the kind of smell that arises from the unjust abuse of others, people have no nose at all.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

10 It may be a slander, but it is no lie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

That is no slander, sir, which is a truth.

13 Brand him who will with base report,—
He shall be free from mine.

SCOTT, Bridal of Triermain. Canto ii, st. 18.

To speak no slander, no, nor listen to it.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 468.

14 Thee nor carketh care nor slander.

TENNYSON, A Dirge. St. 2.

III—Slander: Its Baseness

15 The man that dares traduce, because he can
With safety to himself, is not a man.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 432.

16 If you mean wild beasts, the slanderer's; if tame ones, the flatterer's.

DIOGENES, when asked which beast's bite was the most dangerous. (SENeca, Epistles.)

The most dangerous of wild beasts is a slanderer; of tame ones a flatterer.

V.—Slander: Contempt for Slander

One may even scourge me, so it be in my absense.

ARISTOTLE, when told that some one had slandered him. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, sec. 18.)

Better he speak where we are both known, than where we are both unknown.

PHILIP DE MACKDON, when advised to banish a man who had spoken ill of him. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 103.)

If I am

Traduced by ignorant tongues, which neither know

My faculties nor person, yet will be

The chronicles of my doing, let me say,

'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake

That virtue must go through.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 2, l. 71.

The man that despiseth slander deserveth it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 255.

That they speak [evil of me] is not the point; that they do not speak it justly, that is the point. (Quon dicant non est: merito ut ne dicant, id est.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act i, sc. 2.

Spiteful songs, if despised, are soon forgotten; but if you show displeasure, they seem to be admitted as true. (Carmine . . . sprete exoleant; si irascere, agnita videntur.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 34.

Where it concerns himself,

Who's angry at a slander, makes it true.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 1.

VI.—Slander: Admonitions

Carry no tales, be no common teller of news, be not inquisitive of other men's talk, for those that are desirous to hear what they need not, commonly be ready to babble what they should not.

ROGER ASCHAM, Advice to Lord Warwick's Servant.

Though the quickness of thine ear were able to reach the noise of the moon, which some think it maketh in its rapid revolution, though the number of thy ears should equal Argus his eyes; yet stop them all with the wise man's wax, and be deaf unto the suggestions of tale-bearers, calumniators, pickthank or malevolent detectors, while, while quiet men sleep, seeing the seeds of discord and division, distract the tranquillity of charity and all friendly society.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 20.

Avoid gossip lest you come to be regarded as its originator; for silence harms no one, but speech is harmful. (Rumorem fuge, ne incipias novus auctor haberi; Nam nulli tacuisse nocet nocet esse locutum.)

DIOMEDES CATO, Disticha de Moribus. Bk. i, No. 12.

Don't be a Prittle-prattle, nor Prate-apace, nor be a minding anything but what is said to you.

ERASMUS, The Schoolmaster's Admonitions.

Ever have an eye as to what and to whom you speak concerning any man. (Quid de quoque viro, et cui dicas, sæpe videto.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epus. 18, l. 68.

Speak no ill of a friend, nor even of an enemy. (Φίλον μὴ λέγειν κακόν, ἀλλὰ μὴδὲ ἐχθρόν.)

PITTACUS (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 78.)

Hear no ill of a friend, nor speak any of an enemy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

Slander-mongers and those who listen to slander, if I had my way, would all be strung up, the talkers by the tongue, the listeners by the ears. (Homines qui gestant quique auscultant crimina, si meo arbitratu liceat, omnes pendebant. Gestores linguis, auditores auribus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 427 (Act i, sc. 5.)

I ne'er with Wits or Withings pass'd my days To spread about the itch of verse and praise; Nor like a puppy daggled thro' the town To fetch and carry sing-song up and down

POPE, Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot, l. 223.

Publish not men's secret faults, for by disgracing them you make yourself of no repute.

SADI, Gulistan: Rules for Conduct. No. 39.

Thy friend has a friend, and thy friend's friend has a friend, so be discreet.

The Talmud

Refrain your tongue from backbiting, for . . . the mouth that belitteth slayeth the soul.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, i, 11.

Rebuke backbiters, and encourage them not by hearkening to their tales.

SAMUEL BAGSTER, Christian Politics.

If for a tranquil mind you seek, These things observe with care: Of whom you speak, to whom you speak, And how, and when, and where. Unknown, A Rule of Conduct. Quoted by Edwin Booth.

SLAVERY

I.—Slavery: Definitions and Apothegms

So free we seem, so fettered fast we are! ROBERT BROWNING, Widush del Sarto.

Born slaves, bred slaves,
Branded in the blood and bone slaves.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

So we are slaves,
The greatest as the meanest.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1.
Nations of slaves, with tyranny debas'd,
(Their Maker's image more than half defac'd).
ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 81.

Slavery they can have anywhere. It is a weed that grows in every soil.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

As the slave departs, the man returns.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 348.

Was man ordained the slave of man to toil,
Yoked with the brutes, and fettered to the soil?
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 495.

He that is one man's slave, is free from none.
CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act i, sc. 1.

Excessive liberty leads both nations and individuals into excessive slavery. (Nimiam libertas et populus et privatis in nimiam servitutum cadit.)

CICERO, De Republica. Bk. i, sec. 44.

I own I am shock'd at the purchase of slaves,
And fear those who buy them and sell them
are knaves;

What I hear of their hardships, their tortures,
and groans,

Is almost enough to draw pity from stones.

COWPER, Pity for Poor Africans, l. 1 (1788)

He blam'd and protested, but join'd in the plan;
He shar'd in the plunder, but pitted the man.
COWPER, Pity for Poor Africans, l. 43.

Base in kind, and born to be a slave.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 28.

I would not have a slave to till my ground,
To carry me, to fan me while I sleep,
And tremble when I wake, for all the wealth
That sinews bought and sold have ever earn'd.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 29.

Under the whip of the driver, the slave shall feel his equality with saints and heroes.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Slavery it is that makes slavery; freedom, freedom.
The slavery of women happened when the men were slaves of kings.

EMERSON, Miscellaneous: Women.

Freedom and slavery! the one is the name of virtue, and the other of vice, and both are acts of the will.

EPICURUS, Fragment. No. 8.

Slaves bought with a price do not put up with unjust treatment from their masters; will you,

Roman citizens born to power, endure slavery with patience?

CATUS MENAETIUS. (SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. xxi, sec. 11.)

Corrupted freemen are the worst of slaves.
DAVID GARRICK, The Gossiers: Prologue.

Nothing in the world is lawless except a slave.
J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

He loves his bonds, who, when the first are broke.

Submits his neck unto a second yoke.

ROBERT HERICK, Hesperides. No. 42.

Whatever day
Makes man a slave, takes half his worth away.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 392. (Pope, tr.)

Men! whose boast it is that ye
Come of fathers brave and free,

If there breathe on earth a slave,

Are ye truly free and brave?

J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak; . . .

They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three.

J. R. LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

It is useless, believe me, to be the slave of a slave, even though he be a friend: let him be free who shall wish to be my master.

(Non bene, crede mihi, servo servitur amico:
Sit liber, dominus qui volet esse meus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 32, l. 7.

Better the devil's than a woman's slave.

MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act ii, sc. 2.

Retain a free man's mind though slave, and slave thou shalt not be. (Ἐλευθέρου δούλου δούλος εἶναι θέλει.)

MENANDER (?), Fragment. Frag. 857.

Man's mind and not his master makes him slave.
R. U. JOHNSON, To the Spirit of Byron.

They set the slave free, striking off his chains. . .
Then he was as much of a slave as ever. . .

His slavery was not in his chains,

But in himself . . .

They can only set free men free . . .

And there is no need of that:

Free men set themselves free.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, The Slave.

The idiom that liberates the slave

But sets the master free.

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHER, Gatesburg.

See also under MASTER.

He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl,
Dominion absolute; that right we hold

By His donation; but man ever man

He made not lord, such title to himself

Reserving, human left from human free.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 67.

1 And ne'er shall the sons of Columbia be slaves,
While the earth bears a plant, or the sea rolls its waves.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE, Adams and Liberty.
(1798)

2 Slave before slave, and master before master.
(Δούλος πρὸ δούλου, δεσπότης πρὸ δεσπότης.)

PHILEMON, Fragment. (ARISTOTLE, Politics.
Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 22.)

3 None can be free who is a slave to, and ruled by, his passions.

PYTHAGORAS, (STOBEUS, Florilegium. Pt. xviii,
l. 23.)

Show me a man who is not a slave. One is a slave to lust, another to greed, another to ambition, and all men are slaves to fear. I will name you an ex-consul who is slave to an old bag, a millionaire who is slave to a serving-maid; I will show you youths of the noblest birth in seridom to pantomime players! No servitude is more disgraceful than that which is self-imposed. (Nulla servitus turpius est quam voluntaria.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epis. 47, sec. 17.

4 Slavery enchains a few; more enchain themselves to slavery. (Paucos servitus, plures servitutem tenent.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epis. 22. 11.

The most odorous slavery is to be a slave to oneself.

SENECA, Natural Questions: Bk. iii, Præfatio. Sec. 17.

So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 101.

5 The foulest death is preferable to the fairest slavery. (Præferendam esse spurcissimam mortem servitute mundissimæ.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epis. 70, 21.

It is far better to be a mortal freeman than an immortal slave.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Voltaire.

6 As many have been killed by the wrath of slaves as by that of kings. (Non pauciores servorum ira cecidisse quam regnum.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epis. iv, sec. 8.

7 O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 576.

A base slave,

A bidding for a sivery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 127.

8 You have among you many a purchased slave,
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,

You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 90.

The distinguishing sign of slavery is to have a price, and to be bought for it.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: War

9 Disguise thyself as thou wilt, still, Slavery!
said I,—still thou art a bitter draught!

LAURENCE STERNE, Sentimental Journey: The Passport: The Hotel at Paris.

10 The thrall in person may be free in soul

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 162.

11 O men, made for slavery! (O homines, ad servitutem paratos!)

TIBERIUS. (TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 65.)

13 The meanest Briton scorns the highest slave.

ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 300.

14 It could not, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1906. Referring to Chinese labor in South Africa.

15 Slaves cannot breathe in England, if their lungs

Receive our air, that moment they are free;
They touch our country, and their shackles fall.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 40

I speak in the spirit of the British law, which makes liberty commensurate with and inseparable from British soil; which proclaims even to the stranger and sojourner, the moment he sets his foot upon British earth, that the ground on which he treads is holy and consecrated by the genius of universal emancipation

JOHN PHILIPOT CURRAN, British Law.

16 A soil whose air is deemed too pure for slaves to breathe in

FRANCIS HARGRAVE, *Argument in Somerset
Habeas Corpus Case*, 14 May, 1772. James Somerset was a negro slave from Jamaica who accompanied his master to England, and claimed his freedom. The decision upheld the argument of Hargrave, Somerset's counsel, that slaves could not exist in England.

Every man who comes to England is entitled to the protection of the English law, whatever oppression he may heretofore have suffered, and whatever may be the colour of his skin, whether it is black, or whether it is white (Quamvis ille niger, quamvis tu candidus)

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Decision, in Somerset Habeas Corpus Case, May, 1772 (State Trials Vol xx, p 1)

Lord Mansfield first established the grand doctrine that the air of England is too pure to be breathed by a slave

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Lord Chancellors Vol ii, p 418

Foreign slaves as soon as they come within the limits of France are free (Servi peregrini, ut primum Gallie fines penetraverunt, eodem momento liberi sunt)

No more slave States and no more slave territory

SALMON P CHASE, Platform Resolutions, adopted by the Free-Soil National Convention, 9 Aug, 1848

6 I do not see how a barbarous community and a civilized community can constitute a state I think we must get rid of slavery or we must get rid of freedom

EMERSON, The Assault upon Mr Sumner's Speech, 26 May, 1856

"A house divided against itself cannot stand" I believe this government cannot endure permanently half slave and half-free I do not expect the Union to be dissolved—I do not expect the house to fall—but I do expect it will cease to be divided It will become all one thing, or all the other Either the opponents of slavery will arrest the further spread of it, and place it where the public mind shall rest in the belief that it is in the course of ultimate extinction, or its advocates will push it forward, till it shall become alike lawful in all the States old as well as new—North as well as South

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech at the Republican state convention, Springfield Ill. 17 June, 1858

Where Slavery is, there Liberty cannot be, and where Liberty is, there Slavery cannot be

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Horace Greeley, 22 Aug., 1862 (RAYMOND, History of Lincoln's Administration)

In giving freedom to the slave we assure freedom to the free,—honorable alike in what we give and what we protect.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Annual Message to Congress, 1 Dec., 1862.

It is my last card, and I will play it and may win the trick.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, referring to the Emancipation Proclamation. (ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Diary, Sharon Springs, N. Y., 31 July, 1863.) Judge Edwards Perrepoint described to Winthrop a visit paid by him to the President on the Sunday preceding the issuing of the Proclamation, during the course of which he alleged that Lincoln made the remark as quoted.

Whenever I hear anyone arguing for slavery, I feel a strong impulse to see it tried on him personally.

LINCOLN, Address, 17 March, 1865.

Out from the land of bondage 'tis decreed our slaves shall go,

And signs to us are offered as erst to Pharaoh; If we are blind, their exodus, like Israel's of yore,

Through a Red Sea is doomed to be, whose surges are of gore.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves Near Washington. (1850)

But Hibbaty's a kind o' thing
Thet don't agree with niggers.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. 1, No. 6.

Slavery is in flagrant violation of the institutions of America—direct government—over all the people, by all the people, for all the people.

THEODORE PARKER, Sermon, Music Hall, Boston, 4 July, 1858. See also under DEMOCRACY.

No slave is here:—our unchained feet
Walk freely as the waves that beat
Our coast.

JAMES GATES PERCIVAL, New England.

An irrepressible struggle between opposing and enduring forces.

W. H. SEWARD, Speech, at Rochester, N. Y., 25 Oct., 1858, referring to slavery.

This is a world of compensations, and he who would be no slave must consent to have no slave. Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and, under a just God, they cannot long retain it.

CHARLES SUMNER, Letter, 6 April, 1859, declining to attend festival in honor of anniversary of Jefferson's birthday. Has been wrongly attributed to Abraham Lincoln, who probably quoted it.

By the Law of Slavery, which, based in the selfishness of God, is devoid of the human character, and declared to be a law of God.

CHARLES SUMNER, The Anti-Slavery Enterprise. Address at New York, 4 May, 1850.

We preach Democracy in vain while Tory and Conservative can point to the other side of the Atlantic and say: "There are nineteen millions of the human race free absolutely, governing themselves—the government of all, by all, for all; but instead of being a consistent republic, it is one widespread confederacy of free men for the enslavement of a nation of another complexion."

GEORGE THOMPSON, Speech, House of Commons, 1851.

Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison. . . . the only house in a slave State in which a free man can abide with honor.

H. D. THOREAU, The Duty of Civil Disobedience.

Mister Ward, don't yur blud bile at the thawt that three million and a half of your culled brethren air a clanking their chains in the South?—Ses I, not a bile! Let 'em clank!

ARTEMUS WARD, His Book: Oberlin.

I never mean, unless some particular circumstances should compel me to do it, to possess another slave by purchase, it being among my first wishes to see some plan adopted by which slavery in this country may be abolished by law.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 19 Sept., 1796.

That execrable sum of all villainies commonly called the slave-trade.

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 12 Feb., 1772.

Perjury only filches your neighbor's rights. Man-stealing takes rights and neighbor too.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Progress. Address delivered at Boston, 17 Feb., 1861.

Our fellow-countrymen in chains!
Slaves, in a land of light and law!
Slaves, crouching on the very plains
Where rolled the storm of Freedom's war!

What! mothers from their children riven!
What! God's own image bought and sold!
Americans to market driven,
And bartered as the brute for gold!
WHITTIER, Expostulation, l. 7. (1842)

II—Sleep: Care-Charmer Sleep

What means this heaviness that hangs upon me?

This lethargy that creeps through all my senses?

Nature, oppress'd and harass'd out with care,
Sinks down to rest.

ADISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

Sweet are the slumbers of the virtuous man.

ADISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 4.

Heaven trims our lamps while we sleep.

A. B. ALCOCK, Table Talk: Sleep.

Sleep is a sort of innocent and purification.
Blessed be He who gave it to the poor sons of men as the sure and faithful companion of life, our daily healer and consoler.

AMIEL, Journal, 20 March, 1853.

Silken rest Tie all thy cares up!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Four Plays in One:
Sc. 4, Triumph of Love.

Blessings on him that first invented sleep! It covers a man, thoughts and all, like a cloak;
it is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, and cold for the hot. It is the current coin that purchases cheaply all the pleasures of the world, and the balance that sets even king and shepherd, fool and sage.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 68. Quoted by Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iv, 15.

"God bless the man who first invented sleep!"
So Sancho Panza said and so say I;
And bless him, also, that he didn't keep
His great discovery to himself, nor try
To make it,—as the lucky fellow might—
A close monopoly by patent-right.

J. G. Saxe, Early Rising.

So long as I am asleep I have neither fear nor hope, trouble nor glory.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 68.

Sleep is the best cure for waking troubles.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 70.

O sleep! it is a gentle thing,

Beloved from pole to pole!

To Mary Queen the praise be given!

JOHN FLETCHER, The Woman-Hater.

O sleep! in pity thou art made

A double boon to such as we;

Beneath closed lids and folds of deepest shade,

We think we see.

NATHANIEL FROTTHINGHAM, The Sight of the Blind.

Oh, lightly, lightly tread!

A holy thing is sleep,

On the worn spirit shed,

And eyes that wake to weep.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Sleeper.

Dream, who loves dreams! forget all grief;

Find in sleep's nothingness relief.

LIONEL JOHNSON, Oxford Nights.

O magic sleep! O comfortable bird,

That broadest o'er the troubled sea of the mind

Till it is hush'd and smooth! O unconfin'd

Restraint! imprison'd liberty! great key

To golden palaces, strange minstrelsy,

Fountains grotesque, new trees, bespangled caves,

Echoing grottoes, full of tumbling waves

And moonlight; aye, to all the mazy world

Of silvery enchantment!—who, upfur'd

Beneath thy drowsy wing a triple hour,

But renovates and lives?

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. I, l. 453

O soft embalmer of the still midnight,

Shutting, with careful fingers and benign,

Our gloom-pleas'd eyes, embower'd from the

And men that laugh and weep
Of what may come hereafter

For men that sow to reap:

I am weary of days and hours,
Blown buds of barren flowers,
Desires and dreams and powers,
And everything but sleep

SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine. St. 2.

Thou art more than the day or the morrow, the seasons that laugh or that weep;
For these give joy and sorrow; but thou, Proserpine, sleep.

Sweet is the treading of wine, and sweet the feet of the dove;

But a goodlier gift is thine than foam of the grapes or love.

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 3.

¹⁶ The end is come of pleasant places,
The end of tender words and faces,
The end of all, the popped sleep.

SWINBURNE, Illicit. St. 1.

All gifts but one the jealous God may keep
From our soul's longing, one he cannot—sleep.
This, though he grudge all other grace to prayer,
This grace his closed hand cannot choose but spare.

This, though his ear be sealed to all that live,
Be it lightly given or lothly, God must give.

SWINBURNE, Triumph of Lyonesse: Prelude, l. 205.

1 To sleep! to sleep! The long bright day is done,
And darkness rises from the fallen sun.
To sleep! to sleep!
Whate'er thy joys, they vanish with the day;
Whate'er thy griefs, in sleep they fade away.
To sleep! to sleep!
Sleep, mournful heart, and let the past be past!
Sleep, happy soul! all life will sleep at last.
To sleep! to sleep!

5 Visit her, gentle Sleep! with wings of healing,
And may this storm be but a mountain-birth,
May all the stars hang bright above her dwelling,
Silent as though they watched the sleeping Earth!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Dejection, l. 128.

6 Softly, O midnight hours!
Move softly o'er the bowers
Where he in happy sleep a girl so fair:
For ye have power, men say,
Our hearts in sleep to sway
And cage cold fancies in a moonlight snare.
ALFRED DE VILLE, Softly, O Midnight Hours.

7 Sleep sweet within this quiet room,
O thou! whate'er thou art,
And let no mournful yesterday
Disturb thy quiet heart.
Forget thyself and all the world,
Put out such feverish light.
The stars are watching overhead.
Sleep sweet! Good night! Good night!

KELAN HUNTERMAN GATES, Sweet Sleep. Originally written by Mrs. Gates as a letter to a friend, and made by a friend, the first line reads, "Sleep sweet, though this is a quiet night."

8 Breathe thy balm upon the lonely,
Gentle Sleep!

Thy mother's shaking the dreamland tree,
And down drops a little dream for thee.

Sleep, baby, sleep!

ELIZABETH PRENTISS, Cradle Song.

9 I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep:
for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety.
Old Testament: Psalms, iv, 8.

10 O, hush thee, my babe, thy sire was a knight,
Thy mother a lady both lovely and bright;
The woods and the glens, from the towers which we see,

They all are belonging, dear babe, to thee.
SCOTT, Lullaby of an Infant Chief.

11 Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber!
Holy angels guard thy bed!

Heavenly blessings without number
Gently falling on thy head.

ISAAC WATTS, A Cradle Hymn.

12 Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

UNKNOWN, Prayer at Lying Down. (New England Primer, 1737.) A few editions give the reading, "I pray, Thee, Lord."

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
When in the morning light I wake,
Lead Thou my feet, that I may take
The path of love for Thy dear sake.

UNKNOWN, Now I Lay Me: Revised.

I lay me down in peace and sleep,
For thou, dear Lord, my soul will keep.
And as I rest, this prayer I make:
To do thy will when I awake.

GRENVILLE KLEISER, Evening Prayer.

N.R.A. me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my codes I'll keep;
If I should bust before I wake,
A.F.O.L. my plant will take.

UNKNOWN, Now I Lay Me: New Deal Version. For the benefit of future generations, it may be worth explaining that in the summer of 1933, a government agency known as the National Recovery Administration, which was declared unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court in 1935, endeavored to regulate American industry by a series of codes, establishing wages and working hours; and the American Federation of Labor sought to organize the country's workers in order to enforce them. The whole movement, of which the N.R.A. was only a part, was known as the "New Deal."

13 Hush-a-bye, baby, on the tree-top,
When the wind blows, the cradle will rock;
When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall,
And down will come baby, cradle, and all.

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme: The Book Lover (Feb., 1904) says it was the first poem produced on American soil, by a youth who came over in the Mayflower. It has also been attributed to Charles Blake.

V—Sleep of Little and Great

14 Art thou poor, yet hast thou golden slumbers?
O sweet content!

THOMAS DEKKER, Patient Grisil: Song.

15 The sleep of a labouring man is sweet.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 12.
Sleep is sweet to the labouring man.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology.

Weariness

Can shroud upon the flint, when resty slough
Finds the down pillow hard.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 33.

1 Soft sleep does not disdain the humble cottage of the peasant, nor the shady bank, nor the valley by zephyrs fanned. (Somnus agrestium Lenis vivorum non humilia domos Fastidit umbrosamque ripam, Non Zephyris agitata Tempe.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. III, ode 1, l. 21.

2 The lowliest cot will give thee peaceful sleep, While Gaius tosses on his bed of down.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 92, l. 3.

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, . . . Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under the canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leavest the kingly couch A watch-case or a common larum-bell?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude, And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down! Unguarded lies the head that wears a crown.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet As he whose brow with homely biggen bound Snores out the watch of night.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 26.

VI—Sleep and Health

3 It is recorded of Methusalem, who, being the longest liver, may be supposed to have best preserved his health, that he slept always in the open air; for, when he had lived five hundred years, an angel said to him, "Arise, Methusalem, and build thee an house, for thou shalt live yet five hundred years longer." But Methusalem answered and said, "If I am to live but five hundred years longer, it is not worth while to build me an house; I will sleep in the air, as I have been used to do."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Miss —, on the art of procuring pleasant dreams. The story is one of Franklin's pleasant inventions.

4 One hour's sleep before midnight is worth three afterwards.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

5 It does not become a man of counsel to sleep the whole night through. (Ὁδὸν χρὴ παραύχου ὅλην βραδυμένην διδρα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. II, l. 24.

6 I never take a nap after dinner but when I have had a bad night, and then the nap takes me.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Boswell's Life, 1775.)

For his sleep

Was aery light, from pure digestion bred.

Let your midday sleep be short or none at all. (Sit brevis aut nullus tibi somnus meridianus.)

UNKNOWN, Maxim, School of Salerno.

9 Five hours sleep a traveller, seven a scholar, eight a merchant, and eleven every knave.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 114. (1666)

Six hours for a man, seven for a woman, and eight for a fool. The precept seems to be based on the Latin lines: Sex horis dormire sat est junevique senique, Septem vix pigro, nulli concedimus octo.

Collectio Salmatiana, v, 7. (Notes and Queries, xi, v, 52.)

10 When it is time to turn over, it is time to turn out. (Or exactly, "When one begins to turn in bed, it is time to get up.")

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Maxims and Table-Talk.

VII—Sleep: Brother of Death

See also Death: The Last Sleep

11 Since the brother of death daily haunts us with dying mementoes.

Sopor.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 278.

Heavy Sleep, the Cousin of Death.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Sleep.

How wonderful is Death,
Death and his brother Sleep!

One, pale as yonder waning moon

With lips of lurid blue;

The other, rosy as the morn

When throned on ocean's wave

It blushes o'er the world:

Yet both so passing wonderful!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab, l. 1. Queen Mab was written in 1813. Two years later, Shelley wrote another poem, The Daemon of the World, which began with the same lines.

When in the down I sink my head,
Sleep, Death's twin-brother, times my breath.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxvii.

Sleep, kinsman thou to death and trance
And madness, thou hast forged at last
A night-long present of the past.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxi.

VIII.—Sleep: Death's Counterfeit

Sleep is like death, and after sleep

The world seems new begun;

White thoughts stand luminous and firm,

Like statues in the sun;

Refreshed from supersensuous founts,

The soul to clearer vision mounts.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Sleep.

Death without dying—living, but not Life.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of the World.
Bk. iv, l. 164.

We term sleep a death . . . by which we may be literally said to die daily; in fine, so like death, I dare not trust it without my prayers.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II,
sec. 12.

Sleep is a death: O make me try,

By sleeping, what it is to die;

And as gently lay my head

On my grave, as now my bed.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II,
sec. 12.

Sleep falls like snowflakes, and it seems

'Tis always drifting into dreams;

But Death falls like the snow at sea,

And drifts into Eternity.

FRANCIS CARLIS, Sleep.

Sleep, I have heard say, has only one fault, that it is like death; for between a sleeping man and a dead man there is very little difference.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 68.

Sleep's but a short death; death's but a longer
sleep.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Apollonists. Canto i, st. 6.

There will be sleeping enough in the grave.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758. A parody of a popular saying, "Thou shalt sorrow enough in hell," derived from a tale in the Gesta Romanorum.

O fool, what else is sleep but the image of chill death? (Stulte, quid est somnus, gelidæ nisi mortis imago?)

OWEN, Amores. Bk. II, eleg. ix, l. 41.

Lived she?—in sooth 't were hard to tell,
Sleep counterfeited Death so well.

W. M. PRARD, The Bridal of Belmont, l. 238.

O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her sense but as a monument.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act II, sc. 2, l. 31.

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,

And look on death itself!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act II, sc. 3, l. 81.

O'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act III, sc. 2, l. 364.

Thy eyes' windows fall,

Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;

Each part, deprived of supple government,

Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act IV, sc. 1,
l. 100.

Sleep, death's ally.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, St. Peter's Complaint.

For next to Death is Sleep to be compared:
Therefore his house is unto his annex.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. II, canto vii, st. 25.

Deep rest and sweet, most like indeed to death's own quietness. (Dulcis et alta quies, placidæque simillima morti.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. VI, l. 522.

Come, gentle sleep! attend thy votary's
prayer,

And, though death's image, to my couch repair;

How sweet, though lifeless, yet with life to lie,
And, without dying, O how sweet to die!

THOMAS WATSON, Latin Epigram on Sleep.
(John Wolcott, tr.)

Each night we die,
Each morn are born anew: each day, a life!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night II, l. 286.

IX—Sleep: Insomnia

1 Slumber everywhere! . . .
But I in chilling twilight stand and wait
At the portcullis of thy castle gate,
Longing to see the charmed door of dreams
Turn on its noiseless hinges, delicate Sleep!
THOMAS BAILEY ALDERICE, Invocation to Sleep.

2 Come to me now! O, come! benignant sleep!
And fold me up, as evening doth a flower,
From my vain self, and vain things which have power

Upon my soul to make me smile or weep.
And when thou comest, oh, like Death be deep.
PATRICK PRITCHARD ALEXANDER, Sleep.

3 Sleep I can get none For thinking on my dearie.
BURNS, Simmer's a Pleasant Time.

4 In vain from side to side he throws
His form, in courtship of repose.
BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 13.

My slumbers, if I slumber, are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought.
BYRON, Manfred. Act I, sc. 1.

Sleep, Which will not be commanded.
BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act IV, sc. 1.

5 And I with sobs did pray—
O let me be awake, my God!
Or let me sleep away.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vi.

6 Sister Simplicitie!
Sing, sing a song to me,—
Sing me to sleep!
Some legend low and long,
Slow as the summer song
Of the dull Deep.

SIDNEY DOCKILL, A Sleep Song.

7 Those only can sleep who do not care to sleep.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Still hast to come where thou art wanted most.
WORDSWORTH, To Sleep.

8 Insomnia never comes to a man who has to get up at exactly six o'clock. Insomnia troubles only those who can sleep any time.
ELIZABETH HURDARD, Philistia. Vol. xiv, p. 72.

9 But sleep stole on me unawares,
Even on me at last;
Though drop by drop the minutes faint,
Like hours at midnight passed.

HAROLD ELLIOTT KING, The Fleet of June.

10 Over the edge of the purple dawn,
Where the night twilight gleams,
Know ye the road to the Island of Dreams
That is hard by the Sea of Dreams—
Where the poor lay their weary heads,
And the sick may find the cure.

But we—pity us! Oh, pity us!
We wakid; ah, pity us!—
We must go back with Policeman Day—
Back from the City of Sleep!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The City of Sleep. St. 1.

For I am weary, and am overwrought
With too much toil, with too much care distraught,
And with the iron crown of anguish crowned.
Lay thy soft hand upon my brow and cheek,
O peaceful Sleep!

LONGFELLOW, Sleep.

11 I have forgotten how to sigh—
Remembered how to sleep.

DOROTHY PARKER, The Danger of Writing Defant Verses.

12 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxii, 4; Proverbs, vi, 4.

13 Sleep came at length, but with a train
Of feelings true and fancies vain,
Mingling, in wild disorder cast,
The expected future with the past.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 2.

14 I have not slept one wink

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 103

And for my soul I cannot sleep a wink
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires, ii, 1, 12.

15 I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 104.

16 O sleep, O gentle sleep,
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 5.

Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 286.

17 At their chamber-door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 119.

18 Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 12.

19 Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 3, l. 19.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'st yesterday.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 330.

Give me to drink mandragora.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, 4, 1, 4.

1 O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 2.

All the wild trash of sleep, without the rest.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 70.

2 And Sleep shall obey me,

4 A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by,
One after one: the sound of rain, and bees
Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure sky;

I have thought of all by turns and yet do lie
Sleepless! . . .
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

WORDSWORTH, To Sleep

If, my dear, you seek to slumber,
Count of stars an endless number;
If you still continue wakeful,
Count the drops that make a lakeful;
Then, if vigilance yet above you
Hover, count the times I love you;
And if slumber still repel you,
Count the times I did not tell you.

smile

When everything goes dead wrong;
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
But the smile that is worth the praise of earth
Is the smile that comes through tears.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, World's White.

It's easy to fight when everything's right
And you're mad with the thrill and the glory;
It's easy to cheer when victory's near,
And wallow in fields that are gory.
It's a different song when everything's wrong,
When you're feeling infernally mortal;
When it's ten against one, and hope there is none,
Buck up, little soldier, and cheer!
ROBERT W. SERVICE, Carry On.

SMITH

The first artificer of death; the shrewd
Confriver who first sweated at the forge,
And forc'd the blunt and yet unbloodied steel
To a keen edge, and made it bright for war.

And the first smith was the first murderer's son.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 215.
And he sang: "Hurra for my handiwork!"
And the red sparks lit the air;
Not alone for the blade was the bright steel
made;

And he talked of the first blacksmith.
COWPER, MacKay, The Task, Bk. v, l. 215.
And he sang: "Hurra for my handiwork!"
And the red sparks lit the air;
Not alone for the blade was the bright steel
made;

Some rest upon their hedges here, some work the windlass there.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Forging of the Anchor.

The smith hath always a spark in his throat.
THOMAS FULLER, Græmologia. No. 4754.
Meaning he is always thirsty.

He is not a blacksmith, but he has a spark in his throat.

C. H. SPURGEON, Plowman's Pictures, 39.

I heard that Smug the smith, for ale and spice
Sold all his tools, and yet he kept his vice

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of a Drunken Smith
(Epigrams Bk. iv, epig. 301)

The smith and his penny both are black.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

As great Pythagoras of yore,
Standing beside the blacksmith's door,
And hearing the hammers, as they smote
The anvils with a different note,
Stole from the varying tones, that hung
Vibrant on every iron tongue,
The secret of the sounding wire,
And formed the seven-chorded lyre.

LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l. 175.

And the smith his iron measures hammered to
the anvil's chime,
Thanking God, whose boundless wisdom makes the flowers of poetry bloom
In the forge's dust and cinders, in the tissues of the loom.

LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg, l. 34.

Under a spreading chestnut-tree
The village smithy stands;
The smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Are strong as iron bands
LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith, l. 1.
The tree was really a horse-chestnut.

Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can hear his bellows blow;
You can hear him swing his heavy sledge,
With measured beat and slow,
Like a saxon ringing the village bell,
When the evening sun is low.
LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith, l. 13.

In other part stood one who at the forge
Labouring, two massy clods of iron and brass
Had melted.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 560.

From whence came Smith, albe he knight or squire.

But from the smith that forgoeth at the fire?

Intelligence, p. 316. (c. 1600)

Fate tried to condemn him by naming him Smith.
G. W. HAYES, The Boys of Samuel Francis
Smith, smith of America.

Here was what had no birth, nor shape, nor
name;

No gentleman! no man! no thing! no name! . . .
More, shrunk to Smith—and Smith's no name at
all.

POPE, Epitaph on James More-Smythe.

The Smiths never had any arms, and have invariably sealed their letters with their thumbs.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol.
I, p. 244.)

I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 103.

The painful smith, with force of fervent heat,
The hardest iron soon doth mollify,
That with his heavy sledge he can it beat,
And fashion it to what he it list apply.

SNAIL

Where's'er he roam,— Knock when you will,—he's sure to be at home

VINCENT BOURNE, The Snail (Charles Lamb,
tr.)

The snail, which everywhere doth roam,
Carrying his own house still, still is at home.
JOHN DOWNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

I can tell you why a snail has a house . . .
To put his head in
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act i, sc. 5, l. 30.

He was a sort of snail which crawled over a man in his sleep and left its slime.

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY Referring to an artist named Carter. (DUNLAP, History of the Arts of Design in the U.S., l. 129.)

An inadvertent step may crush the snail
That crawls at ev'ning in the public path;
But he that has humanity, forewarn'd,
Will tread aside, and let the reptile live.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 564.

Like snails I see the people go
Along the pavement, row on row;
And each one on his shoulder bears
His coiling shell of petty cares—
The spiral of his own affairs.

ELEANOR HAMMOND, From a Street Corner.

Wise emblem of our politic world,
Sage snail, within thine own self curled,
Instruct me softly to make haste,
Whilst these my feet go slowly fast.

He is easy-paced, this snail.

JOHN DOWNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

I will thitherward bid me in haste like a snail
JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. I, ch. 9. (1546)

The snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1033.

"The snail," says the Hindoo, "sees nothing but his own shell, and thinks it the grandest palace in the universe."

2
He's a friend at a sneeze; the most you can get of him is a God bless you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2436.

Will you demand of me, whence this custom aris-eth, to bless and say God help to those that sneeze? We produce three sorts of wind: that issuing from below is too undecent; that from the mouth implieth some reproach of gourman-dise; the third is sneezing: and because it cometh from the head, and is without imputation, we thus kindly entertain it. Smile not at this subtlety; it is (as some say) Aristotle's.

11 Lo, what wonders the day hath brought,
Born of the soft and slumbrous snow!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLAN, Snow.

12 And out of the frozen mist the snow
In wavering flakes begins to glow;

Flake after flake

They sink in the dark and silent lake.

BRYANT, The Snow-Shower.

Through the sharp air a flaky torrent flies,
Mocks the slow sight, and hides the gloomy sides;

The fleecy clouds their chilly bosoms bare,
And shed their substance on the floating air.

Lights on a rosy maiden's cheek,
It starts—"How warm and soft the day!"
"Tis summer!" and it melts away.

MARY MAPES DODGE, Snowflakes.

14 Announced by all the trumpets of the sky,
Arrives the snow, and, driving o'er the fields,
Seems nowhere to alight: the whited air
Hides hills and woods, the river, and the heaven,

And veils the farm-house at the garden's end.
The sled and traveller stopped, the courier's feet

Delayed, all friends shut out, the housemates sit

SOCIETY

I.—Society: Definitions

Man seeketh in society comfort, use, and protection.

RACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

Man was formed for society.

WILLIAM WHATELY, Of the Nature of Liberty in General.

Society is a social compact, whereby a number of persons, by mutual agreement, unite themselves together, for the mutual preservation of their lives, liberties, and estates, in which they all consist, in a peaceable and lawful manner.

The bond of human society is reason and speech. (In universi generis humani societas
 . . . vinculum est ratio et oratio.)
 CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 16, sec. 50.

Fine society is only a self-protection against the vulgarities of the street and the tavern.
 'Tis an exclusion and a precinct. . . . It is an unprincipled decorum; an affair of clean linen and coaches, of gloyes, cards, and elegance in trifles.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
 the Way*.

Society is a masked ball, where every one hides his real character, and reveals it by hiding.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Society is a joint stock company, in which the members agree, for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater.

19 Society is no comfort To one not sociable.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

20 No society can surely be flourishing and happy, of which the far greater part of the members are poor and miserable.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Bk. i, ch. 8.

21 Other people are quite dreadful. The only possible society is oneself.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act III.

22 High society is for those who have stopped

¹ "I am afraid," replied Elinor, "that the pleasantness of an employment does not always evince its propriety."

JANE AUSTEN, Sense and Sensibility. Ch. 13.

² Conventionality is not morality. Self-righteousness is not religion. To attack the first is not to assail the last. To pluck the mask from the face of the Pharisee, is not to lift an impious hand to the Crown of Thorns.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre: Preface.

³ It's wiser being good than bad;
It's safer being meek than fierce:
It's fitter being sane 'than mad.

ROBERT BROWNING, Apparent Failure.

⁴ For a "mixt company" implies, that, save Yourself and friends, and half a hundred more,

Whom you may bow to without looking grave,
The rest are but a vulgar set.

BYRON, Beppo St. 59.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 18.

⁸ Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members. . . . The virtue in most request is conformity. Self-reliance is its aversion. It loves not realities and creators, but names and customs.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Society will pardon much to genius and special gifts, but, being in its nature a convention, it loves what is conventional, or what belongs to coming together.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Comme il faut, is the Frenchman's description of good society.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

⁹ The snow is lying very deep,
My house is sheltered from the blast.
I hear each muffled step outside,
I hear each voice go past.

But I'll not venture in the drift
Out of this bright security,
Till enough footsteps come and go
To make a path for me.

AGNES LEE, Convention.

¹⁰ Where it is a duty to worship the sun it is pretty sure to be a crime to examine the laws of heat.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Voltaire.

¹¹ What will Mrs Grundy say?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. (1798)

Mrs. Grundy, in the play, is a neighbor and obsession of Dame Ashfield, who constantly refers to her, wondering what she will think or say. Mrs. Grundy never appears. It was this play which, on 8 Feb., 1798, at Covent Garden, introduced Mrs. Grundy into English literature.

Always ding-ding Dame Grundy into my ears—
What will Mrs Grundy say? er, What will Mrs. Grundy think?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. Act i, sc. 1.

The world's an ugly world. Offend
Good people, how they wrangle!
Their manners that they never mend,—
The characters they mangle!
They eat, and drink, and scheme, and plod,—
They go to church on Sunday;
And many are afraid of God—
And more of Mrs. Grundy.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Jester's Plea.

There be four things that keep us all from having our own way,—
Money, Fortune, Mrs. Grundy, and Policeman A.

PYRRHO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec. 61.)

Society has only one law, and that is custom.

P. G. HAMERTON, Intellectual Life. Pt. vi, let. 1.

¹³ Conventional people are roused to fury by departure from convention, largely because they regard such departure as a criticism of themselves.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 131.

¹⁴ Keep decorum.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 77.

Let them cant about decorum
Who have characters to lose.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggar.

¹⁵ Men like conventions because idea made them.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 64.

¹⁶ To say what you think will certainly damage you in society; but a free tongue is worth more than a thousand invitations.

LOGAN PEARBALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

VI—Society and Solitude

- 1
Solitude is very sad,
Too much company twice as bad.
WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.
Society than solitude is worse.
And man to man is still the greatest curse.
ANNA LETITIA BARRAULD, Ovid to His Wife.
- 2
If from society we learn to live,
'Tis solitude should teach us how to die.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto IV, st. 33.
- 3
There is a society in the deepest solitude.
ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 10.
- 4
Solitude is impracticable, and society fatal.
EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.
The solitary worshipper knows the essence of the thought: the scholar in society sees only its fair face.
EMERSON, Journals, 1864.
- 5
Solitude is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character.
J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dryden.
- 6
Solitude is often the best society.
W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 335.
For solitude sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 249.
- 7
I love tranquil solitude,
And such society
As is quiet, wise, and good.
SHILLLEY, Song: Rarely, Rarely Comest Thou.

9 Malbrouck is off to the wars;
I don't know when he'll return.

(Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre;

Mironfont, mironfont, mironfont,

Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre,

Ne sait quand reviendra.)

UNKNOWN, Malbrouck. A famous old French song, sometimes attributed to Madame de Sévigné, and supposed to refer to the unsuccessful expedition against St. Malo made by Charles, Third Duke of Marlborough, in 1758. Found in many collections; popularized by Marie Antoinette about 1780, introduced by Beaumarchais into Le Mariage de Figaro, and by George Du Maurier into Trilby. Sung to the air of "We won't go home till morning."

O, send Lewis Gordon home

And the lad I mauna name,

Though his back be at the wa'

Here's to him that's far awa'.

WILLIAM GEORGE (?), Lewis Gordon.

The unreturning brave.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iii, st. 27.

V—Soldiers and Public Ingratitude

10 For a soldier I listed, to grow great in fame,
And be shot at for sixpence a day.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Charity.

How happy's the soldier who lives on his pay,
And spends half-a-crown out of sixpence a day!

JOHN O'KEEFE, The Poor Soldier.

Ninepence a day fer killin' folks comes kind o' low fer murder.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 2.

11 For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an'
"Chuck 'im out, the brute!"

But it's "Saviour of 'is country" when the guns begin to shoot.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an'
"Tommy, 'ow's yer soul?"

But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

We aren't no thin red 'eroes, nor we aren't no blackguards too,

But single men in barracks, most remarkable like you;

An' 'is sometimes our cooduck isn't all your fancy paints,

Why, single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy.

The world's wicked.

We are men, not saints, sweet lady.

MASSENGRAM, Unnatural Combat. Act I, sc. 1.

Tommy Atkins, as a sobriquet of the British soldier, comes from the imaginary name "Thomas Atkins," employed in 1815 in connection with The Soldier's Account Book, called into use by the War Office. "Thomas Atkins" appeared in the sample forms accompanying the official circular letter, 31 August, 1815.

1 The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xiv.

Our God and soldier we alike adore,
When at the brink of ruin, not before;
After deliverance, both alike requited,
Our God forgotten, and our soldiers slighted.

6 Captains are casual things.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife.
Act iii.

An army all of captains, used to pray
And stiff in fight, but serious drill's despair,
Skilled to debate their orders, not obey.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. Referring to the Continental army.

That in the captain's hut a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,

SWIFT, The Grand Question Debated.

6a Hail, ye indomitable heroes, hail!
Despite of all your generals, ye prevail.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, The Crimean Heroes.

Grant lies asleep in his great white tomb, where the Hudson tides run deep;

And Sheridan and Sherman lie on marble beds asleep; . . .

But what of the men those heroes led: of Smith and Robinson?

REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN, Heroes of Yesterday.

7 I have heard, in such a way as to believe it,
of your recently saying that both the army and the government needed a dictator. . . .
Only those generals who gain successes can set up dictators. What I ask of you now is military success, and I will risk the dictatorship.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Letter to Major-General
Joseph Hooker*, appointing him commander of the Army of the Potomac, 26 Jan., 1863.

8 I personally wish Jacob Freese, of New Jersey, to be appointed colonel of a colored regiment, and this regardless of whether he can tell the exact shade of Julius Caesar's hair.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Secretary of War Sutton.

9 "Companions," said he [Saturninus], "you have lost a good captain, to make of him a bad general."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

1 Yet, trained in camps, he knew the art
To win the soldier's hardy heart.
They love a captain to obey,
Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May;
With open hand and brow as free,
Lover of wine and minstrelsy;
Ever the first to scale a tower,
As venturous in a lady's bower:—
Such buxom chief shall lead his host
From India's fires to Zembla's frost.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iii, st. 4.

2 It is a bad soldier who grumbles when following his commander. (Malus miles est qui imperatorem gemens sequitur.)

3 SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, sec. 10.

4 If you have a station in the file,
Not 't the worst rank of manhood, say 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 102.

5 'Tis the curse of service,
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act I, sc. 1, l. 35.
Worked himself, step by step, through each preferment,

From the ranks upwards. And verily, it gives
A precedent of hope, a spur of action
To the whole corps, if once in their remembrance
An old, deserving soldier makes his way.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Pt. I, act I, sc. 1. (Coleridge, tr.)

6 Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act II, sc. 3, l. 248.

7 A thousand soldiers are easily got, but a single general is hard to find. ('Chien ping i tē i chiang nan 'chui.)

UNKNOWN. A Chinese proverb.

VII—Soldiers: How Sleep the Brave

8 Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clever or the snow!
What cares he? he cannot know:
Lay him low!

GEORGE HENRY BAKER, Dirge for a Soldier.
He rush'd into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell.
BROWN, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 23.

He slept an iron sleep,—
Slain fighting for his country.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 285. (Bryant, tr.)

9 In the field of proud honour—our swords in our hands,

Our King and our Country to save—
While victory shines on life's last ebbing sands,
O! who would not die with the brave!

BROWN, Song of Death, l. 14.
Oh who would not sleep with the brave?
A. E. HOUGHMAN, Soldier, l. 1.

10 I see before me the Gladiator lie:
He leans upon his hand—his manly brow
Consents to death, but conquers agony.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 140.

11 How sleep the brave, who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mold,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honour comes, a pilgrim grey,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall a-while repair,
To dwell a weeping hermit there!

WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode Written in 1746.

The snow shall be their winding-sheet,
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden. St. 8.

12 Toll for the brave—
The brave! that are no more:
All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore.

COWPER, On the Loss of the Royal George.

Far in foreign fields from Dunkirk to Belgrade
Lie the soldiers and chiefs of the Irish Brigade.
THOMAS DAVIS, Battle Eve of the Brigade.

13 We meet neath the sounding rafter,
And the walls around are bare;
As they shout back our peals of laughter,
It seems that the dead are there.
Ho! stand to your glasses steady!
'T is all we have left to prize.

A cup to the dead already,— Hurrah for the next that dies!
BARTHOLOMEW DOWLING, The Revel.

And hands that wist not though they dug a grave,
Undid the hasps of gold, and drank, and gave,
And he drank after, a deep glad kingly draught:
And all their life changed in them, for they quaffed

Death; if it be death so to drink, and fare
As men who change and are what these twain were.

SWINBURNE, Tristram of Lyonesse: The Sailing of the Swallow, l. 789.

14 For glory lights the soldier's tomb,
And beauty weeps the brave.

JOSEPH ROEMAN DRAKE, To the Defenders of New Orleans.

15 It is a sign of a soldier to believe that there is nothing left of man after death, except a corpse. (Militare est credere nihil hominis superesse post mortem, nisi cadaver.)

TERENTIUS, Hippus Amippos.

1 Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment Day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.
FRANCIS MILLS FINCH, The Blue and the Gray.
Each for his land, in a fair fight,
Encountered, strove, and died,
And the kindly earth that knows no spite
Covers them side by side.
RUDYARD KIPPLING, The American Rebellion:
After.

Sleep sweetly in your humble graves,
Sleep, martyrs of a fallen cause.
HENRY TIMMONS, Ode.

2 He that stepped forward to follow the flag,
To ride with a saber or march with a Krag,
You'll find now, with thousands, shipped home in a bag,
Just a little brass tag.
EDGAR A. GUEST, A Little Brass Tag.

3 Let those who have no homes at all,
Go battle for a long one.
THOMAS HOOD, The Volunteer, l. 69.

4 In a wood they call the Rouge Bouquet,
There is a new-made grave today,
Built by never a spade nor pick,
Yet covered with earth ten metres thick.
There lie many fighting men,
Dead in their youthful prime.
Never to laugh nor love again
Nor taste the Summertime.
JOYCE KILMER, Rouge Bouquet.

If any question why we died,
Tell them, because our fathers lied.
RUDYARD KIPPLING, Epitaphs of the War: Common Form.

5 We have met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Gettysburg Address, 19
Nov., 1863.

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty—they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the flag they rendered stainless, under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows, the embracing vines. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battles, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death.

R. G. INGHAM, Memorial Day Vision.

6 Nicanor lay dead in his harness.

Apocrypha: II Maccabees, xv, 28.

7 Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

JOHN MCCRAE, In Flanders Fields. First published in Punch, London, 8 Dec., 1915.

Your flaming torch aloft we bear,
With burning heart an oath we swear
To keep the faith, to fight it through,
To crush the foe or sleep with you
In Flanders fields.
C. B. GALBREATH, Answer to In Flanders Fields.

8 When soldiers brave death, they drive him into the ranks of the enemy.

NAPOLEON, Address to His Soldiers, two days after the battle of Jena.

9 "And where do we go now?" brave Bingham said.

And Bethell, with his feet among the dead
Feeling the slant plate sink, the waters thrust, Answered him cheerily, "Why, to heaven I trust."

ROBERT NICHOLS, The Souls of the Righteous.

O loved, living, dying, heroic soldier,
All, all, my joy, my grief, my love, are thine!
ROBERT NICHOLS, Fulfillment.

10 A soldier of the Legion lay dying in Algiers,
There was lack of woman's nursing, there was dearth of woman's tears; . . .
And he said, "I never more shall see my own,
my native land;

Take a message, and a token, to some distant friends of mine,
For I was born at Bingen,—at Bingen on the Rhine."

CAROLINE NORTON, Bingen on the Rhine.

11 The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on Life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen few.

On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.

Nor shall your story be forgot,
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where Valor proudly sleeps.
THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.

1 The tempests streaming upon Salmon's height,

2 Soldiers are citizens of death's grey land.
SIEGFRIED SASSOON, Dreamers.

3 Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er,
Dream of fighting fields no more;
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking,
Morn of toil, nor night of waking.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 31.

Death had been seen by sudden blow,
By wasting plague, by torture slow,
By mine or breach, by steel or ball,
Knew all his shapes and scorned them all.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 8.

Fell as he was in act and mind,
He left no bolder heart behind:
Then, give him, for a soldier meet,
A soldier's cloak for winding sheet.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 33.

4 O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 15, l. 64.

Cut is the branch that might have grown full
straight,

And burred in Apollo's laurel bough,
That sometime grew within this learned man.

MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus. Final chorus.

5 Died with their swords in hand
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 1, l. 36.

O, farewell, honest soldier.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 16.

God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fatter death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 47.

6 Sleep, soldiers! still in honored rest
Your truth and valor wearing:

The bravest are the tenderest,—

The loving are the dazing.

RAYARD TAYLOR, The Song of the Camp.

7 Home they brought her warrior dead,

8 Where are the boys of the old Brigade,
Who fought with us side by side?

F. E. WEAVER, The Old Brigade.

Not in the Abbey proudly kept:

Find they a place or party

The gallant boys of the old Brigade.

They sleep in Old England's heart.

F. E. WEAVER, The Old Brigade.

9 Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corse to the rampart we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.

CHARLES WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore After Corunna. In 1908, R. C. Newick published a pamphlet at Reidel, England, contending that this poem was written by a private soldier named Joseph Wolfe, a member of the squad which dug Moore's grave, but the ascription to Charles Wolfe is undoubtedly correct.

No useless coffin enclosed his breast,
Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him;
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest
With his martial cloak around him.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was dead,

And we bitterly thought of the morrow. . . .
Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory;
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone,
But we left him alone with his glory.

WOLFE, The Burial of Sir John Moore.

10 Dead on the field of honor. (Mort au champ d'honneur.)

Response to the roll-call for Théophile Malo, La Tour d'Auvergne, in his company after his death in action at Oberhausen, 27 June, 1800, according to an order of Napoleon, still in force.

II—Solitude: Its Virtues

12 Converse with men makes sharp the glittering wit.

But God to men doth speak in solitude.

JOHN STUART BLACKIE, Highland Solitude.

'Tis solitude should teach us how to die—
It hath no flatterers; vanity can give
No hollow aid; alone—~~man~~ with his God must strive.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 33.

12 O Solitude, the soul's best friend,
That men acquainted with himself dost make.

CHARLES COTTON, The Retirement.

13 Solitude is the nurse of enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is the true parent of genius. In all ages solitude has been called for—has been flown to.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 10.

So vain is the belief

That the sequestered path has fewest flowers.

THOMAS DOUBLEDAY, The Poet's Solitude.

14 Go cherish your soul; expel companions; set your habits to a life of solitude; then will the faculties rise fair and full within.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

I am sure of this, that by going much alone a man will get more of a noble courage in thought and word than from all the wisdom that is in books.

EMERSON, Journals, 1833.

What a saving grace is in poverty and solitude, that the obscure youth learns the practice instead of the literature of his Virtues!

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

15 Living in solitude till the fulness of time, I still kept the dew of my youth and the freshness of my heart.

HAWTHORNE: Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

16 By all means use sometimes to be alone.

CORNELIUS MURS, Solitude. (1566.)

I praise the Frenchman, his remark was shrewd—
"How sweet, how passing sweet is solitude!"
But grant me still a friend in my retreat,
Whom I may whisper—Solitude is sweet.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 739. The quotation has been attributed to LA BRUYÈRE.

2 Hail, mildly pleasing Solitude,
Companion of the wise and good;
But from whose holy piercing eye
The herd of fools and villains fly.
Oh! how I love with thee to walk,
And listen to thy whispered talk,
Which innocence and truth imparts,
And melts the most obdurate hearts.

JAMES THOMSON, Hymn on Solitude, l. 1.

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattle made:

Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honey-bee,

And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

W. B. YEATS, The Lake Isle of Innisfree.

3 O sacred solitude! divine retreat!
Choice of the prudent! envy of the great,
By thy pure stream, or in thy waving shade,
We court fair wisdom, that celestial maid.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire v, l. 254.

III—Solitude: Its Faults

4 Solitude affects some people like wine; they must not take too much of it, for it flies to the head.

MARY COLERIDGE, Gathered Leaves, p. 223.

5 Oh, solitude! where are the charms
That sages have seen in thy face?

Better dwell in the midst of alarms,
Than reign in this horrible place.

9 Overbearing austerity is always the companion of solitude. (Ἡ ἀπὸ αὐτοῦ ἀνδραγαθία καὶ ἐνδοξία.)

PLATO, Epistle to Dion. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades and Coriolanus, Ch. 2, sec. 2.)

Solitude would ripen a plentiful crop of despots.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nominatist and Realist.

10 Solitude prompts us to all kinds of evil. (Omnia nobis mala solitudo persuadet.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius, Epis. xrv, 6.

There are some solitary wretches who seem to have left the rest of mankind only as Eve left Adam, to meet the devil in private.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

IV—Solitude and the Crowd

11 Little do men perceive what solitude is, and how far it extendeth. For a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.

ST. FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

But 'midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men,
To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess,
And roam along, the world's tired denizen,
With none who bless us, none whom we can bless, . . .

This is to be alone; this, this is solitude!

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto ii, st. 26.

Among them, but not of them.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iii, st. 113.

How lonely we are in the world! . . . You and I are but a pair of infinite isolations, with some fellow-islands a little more or less near to us.

THACKERAY, Pendennis, Ch. 16.

12 The time when, most of all, you should withdraw into yourself is when you are forced to be in a crowd.

EPICURUS, Fragmentis, No. 209.

13 Far from the sweet society of men.

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xxi, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,

Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;

Along the cool sequester'd vale of life

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, St. 49.

Far from the clank of crowds.

WALT WHITMAN, Starting from Paumanah.

Sec. 2.

1 Man dwells apart, though not alone,
He walks among his peers unread;
The best of thoughts which he hath known
For lack of listeners are not said.
JEAN INGLEW, Afternoon at a Parsonage:
Afterthought.

2 Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous
men

Old Testament: Jeremiah, ix, 2. (Quis dabit me in solitudine diversorium viatorum.—Vul-
gate.)

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness,
Some boundless contiguity of shade.
Where rumour of oppression and deceit,
Of unsuccessful or successful war,
Might never reach me more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 1.

O Solitude! if I must with thee dwell,
Let it not be among the jumbled heap
Of murky buildings: climb with me the steep,— Nature's observatory; . . . let me thy vigils keep 'Mongst boughs pavilion'd, where the deer's swift leap

Startles the wild bee from the foxglove bell.
KEATS, Sonnet: O Solitude.

3 We need not bid for cloistered cell,
Our neighbour and our work farewell.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Morning.

The city does not take away, neither does the country give, solitude; solitude is within us.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest:
The Country. No. 48.

4 Avoid the reeking herd,
Shun the polluted flock,
Live like that stoic bird
The eagle of the rock.

ELINOR WYLLIE, The Eagle and the Mole.

5 I should have then this only fear:
Lest men, when they my pleasures see,
Should hither throng to live like me,
And so make a city here.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish.

V—Solitude and Loneliness

6 Yes: in the sea of life enis'd,
With echoing straits between us thrown,
Dotting the shoreless watery wild,
We mortal millions live alone.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, To Marguerite.

7 Indeed, though in a wilderness, a man is never alone, not only because he is with himself and his own thoughts, but because he is with the Devil, who ever consorts with our solitude. . . . There is no such thing as solitude, nor anything that can be said to be alone and by itself, but God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 11.

8 When is man strong until he feels alone?
ROBERT BROWNING, Colombe's Birthday. Act iii.
He travels the fastest who travels alone.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners.

9 Alone!—that worn-out word,
So idly spoken, and so coldly heard;
Yet all that poets sing, and grief hath known,
Of hope laid waste, knells in that word—
ALONE!

I am as one who is left alone at a banquet, the lights dead and the flowers faded.

BULWER-LYTTON, Last Days of Pompeii. Ch. 5.

I feel like one who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled, whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!

11 Alone, alone, all, all alone,
Alone on a wide wide sea!
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iv.

So lonely 'twas, that God himself
Scarce seemed there to be.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vii.

12 I am a lone lorn creature and everythink goes contrairy with me
DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 3.

13 Thrice happy he, who by some shady grove,
Far from the clamorous world, doth live
his own;
Though solitary, who is not alone.
But doth converse with that eternal love.
WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Uranis.

In solitude, where we are least alone.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 90.

14 Everything begins from loneliness.
JOHN ERSKINE, Adam and Eve. Ch. 1.

One aged man—one man—can't fill a house.
ROBERT FROST, An Old Man's Winter Night.

15 He will not take me where he goes,
He's deaf to me and blind.
Always, I am left at home,
Sitting in my mind.
AMANDA BENJAMIN HALL, The Wanderer.

Why should we faint and fear to live alone,
Since all alone, so Heaven has will'd, we die,

Nor e'en the tenderest heart, and next our
own,

Knows half the reasons why we smile and migh?

JOHN KEATE, The Christian Year: 24th Sunday after Trinity.

I shall die alone. (Je mourrai seul.)

In the years fled, lips that are dead

Sing me that song

MRS. R. A. M. STEVENSON, Song

Those high songs of thine

That stung the sense like wine,
Or fell more soft than dew or snow by night
SWINBURNE, To Victor Hugo St. 6

A love-song I had somewhere read,
An echo from a measured strain,
Best time to nothing in my head
From some odd corner of the brain.

It haunted me, the morning long,
With weary sameness in the rhymes,
The phantom of a silent song,
That went and came a thousand times

TENNISON, The Miller's Daughter St. 9

You sing the same old song (Cantilenam eandem canis)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 495 (Act III, sc. 2)

Bring the good old bugle, boys! we'll sing another song—

Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along—

Sing it as we used to sing it, fifty thousand strong,

While we were marching through Georgia

HENRY CLAY WORK, Marching Through Georgia

VI—Song and Singer

See also Poet and His Song

Of all the friends I used to love,

My harp remains alone;

Its faithful voice seems still to be

An echo of my own.

My tears, when I bend over it,

Will fall upon its string;

Yet those who hear me little think

I'm saddest when I sing

T. H. BAYLY, I'm Saddest When I Sing

For now to sorrow must I tune my song,

And set my harp to notes of saddest woe

MILTON, The Passion, l. 8

Our sweetest songs are those which tell of saddest thought

SHELLEY, To a Skylark St. 18

I can't sing. As a singer I am not, a success I am saddest when I sing. So are those who hear me. They are sadder even than I am

ARTHUR WILSON, Letters

At what I sing there's some way made,

While some, perhaps, will sigh

THOMAS MOORE, Not and Cages, l. 11.

And ever as he went some merry lay he sung.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minister Bk. I, l. 27.

Let the singing singers

With vocal voices, most vociferous,

In sweet musication out-vociferous

Even sound their

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Chronos and the Song Act I, sc. 1

1 He could songes make, and well endite.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 95.

He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 10.

2 On the beryl-rimmed rebecs of Ruby
Brought fresh from the hyaline streams,
She played on the banks of the Yuba
Such songs as she heard in her dreams.
THOMAS HOLLEY CHIVERS, Lily Adair.

Y'ought to hyeah dat gal a-warblin'
Robins, la'ks an' all dem things
Heish de mouffs an' hides dey faces
When Malindy sings.
PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, When Malindy Sings.

3 A wandering minstrel I—
A thing of shreds and patches,
Of ballads, songs, and snatches,
And dreamy lullaby
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act I.
Stog, minstrel, sing us now a tender song
Of meeting and parting, with the moon in it.
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses Act I, sc. 1.

4 A few can touch the magic string,
And noisy Fame is proud to win them:—
Alas for those that never sing,
But die with all their music in them!
O. W. HOLMES, The Voiceless. St. 1.

Songs may be mute; for songs may exist unsung, but voices exist only while they sound,
W. S. LARDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Abdi-Delille and Lardor

5 Because the road was steep and long
And through a dark and lonely land,
God set upon my lips a song
And put a lantern in my hand.
JOYCE KILMER, Love's Lantern.

6 In the ink of our sweat we will find it yet,
The song that is fit for men!
FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, The Song.

7 He touch'd the tender stops of various quills,
With eager thought warbling his Doric lay.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 183.

8 Sweetest the strain when in the song
The singer has been lost.
ELIZABETH STUART ELLIOT, The Poet and the Poem.

9 In Heaven a spirit doth dwell
Whose heart-strings are a lute;
None sing so wildly well
As the angel Israel.
EMERSON, Alamy Poe, Israel.

10 And the angel Israel, who has the sweetest voice
Of all God's creatures.
GEORGE SALE, Preliminary Discourse to the Koran, iv, 71. Often wrongly attributed to the Koran. Thomas Moore has the correct attribution in Lalla Rookh, pt. viii, l. 419, footnote; but Poe attributes it to the Koran, although he got it either from Sale, whose work he had reviewed, or from Moore. He interpolated the phrase, "whose heart-strings are a lute," which appears neither in the Koran, nor Sale, nor Moore, and which is undoubtedly his own. Thomas Holley Chivers, a Georgia physician and versifier, appropriated it, together with many other of Poe's phrases, and then alleged that Poe had stolen them from him. (See WOODBERRY, Life of Poe, l. 180.)

11 The sweet psalmist of Israel.
Old Testament: II Samuel, xliii, 1.

12 Scenes sung by him who sings no more!
His bright and brief career is o'er,
And mute his tuneless strains.
SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto iv, st. 11.

For him, no minstrel raptures swell
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, l. 8.

Why then a final note prolong,
Or lengthen out a closing song?
SCOTT, Marmion: L'Envoi.

He ceased. But still their trembling ears retained
The deep vibrations of his witching song.
JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto I, st. 20.

13 Sing, siren, for thyself.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act III,
sc. 2, l. 47.

The Siren waits thee, singing song for song.
W. S. LARDOR, To Robert Browning.

14 Sing again, with your dear voice revealing
A tone
Of some world far from ours,
Where music and moonlight and feeling
Are one.
SHELLEY, To Jane.

15 And round thee with the breeze of song
To stir a little dust of praise.
TERRYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxv.

Short swallow-flights of song, that dip
Their wings in tears, and skim away.
TERRYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xlviii.

16 Swift, swift, and bring with you
Song's Indian summer!
FRANCIS THOMSON, A Carrier Song. St. 2.

17 I do not sing unbidden. (Non injussa cano.)
VERON, Ecolagus. No. vi, l. 2.

18 Enough of mournful melodies, my lute!
Be henceforth joyous, or be henceforth mute.
Song's breath is wasted when it does but fan
The smouldering infelicity of man.
WILLIAM WATSON, Eden.

VII—Song: Discords

¹ The tenor's voice is spoilt by affectation,
And for the base, the beast can only bellow;
In fact, he had no singing education,
An ignorant, noteless, timeless, tuneless fellow.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 87.
Heard at conventicle, where worthy men,
Mised by custom, strain celestial themes
Through the preat nostril.
Cowper, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 437.

² And when that choir got up to sing,
I couldn't catch a word;
They sung the most doggonedest thing
A body ever heard!
WILL CARLTON, The New Church Organ.
Then they began to sing
That extremely lovely thing,
"Scherzando! ma non troppo, ppp."
W. S. GILBERT, The Story of Prince Agib.

³ Sir Joseph: Can you sing?
Ralph: I can hum a little, your honour.
W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.
Only a rash man ever asks me to hum
W. S. GILBERT, when Sullivan asked him to hum a tune.

⁴ There is this vice in all singers, that if asked to sing among their friends they are never so inclined, but unasked they never leave off.
(Omnibus hoc vitium est cantoribus, inter amicos Ut numquam inducant animum cantare rogati, Injussi numquam desistant.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 1.

⁵ He praised unblushingly her notes, for he was false as they.
RUDYARD KIPPLING, Army Headquarters.

⁶ Man was never meant to sing:
And all his mimic organs e'er expressed
Was but an imitative howl at best.
JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, ii, 223.
Their lean and flashy songs
Grate on their scannell pipes of wretched straw.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 123.

⁷ I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 3, l. 41.
Nay, now you are too flat
And hear the concord with too harsh a descent.
SHAKESPEARE, Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 2, 94.

VIII—Song and Love

⁸ It's the song of a merryman, knocking mum,
Whose song was sad, and whose glance was grim,
Who slipped no rap, and who craved no trumb
As he sighed for the love of a lady.
W. S. GILBERT, Peepshow of the Guard. Act i.

⁹ And when, beside me in the dale,
He carolled lays of love,
His breath lent fragrance to the gale
And music to the grove
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield.
Ch. 8.)

The swain responsive to the milkmaid sung.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 117

¹⁰ So she poured out the liquid music of her voice to quench the thirst of his spirit.
HAWTHORNE, Mosses from an Old Manse: The Birthmark.

She sang the tears into his eyes,
The heart out of his breast.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Maiden-Song.

¹¹ Bow down, my song, before her presence high
MORTON LUCE, Thyris. Sonnet iii.

¹² But I can only offer you, my sweet,
The songs I made on many a night of stars.
Yet have I worshipped honor, loving you
THEODORE MAYNARD, If I Had Ridden Horses.

As a skylark to the sky,
Up into thy breast I fly;
As a sea-shell of the sea
Ever shall I sing of thee.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Lines.

¹³ My heart is dead, my veins are cold:
I may not, must not, sing of love.
SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto ii, 30.

¹⁴ Every night he comes
With music of all sorts and songs composed
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us
To chide him from our eaves; for he persists
As if his life lay on 't
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iii, sc. 7, l. 39.

Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung
With feigning voice verses of feigning love.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 30.

¹⁵ Song like a rose should be;
Each rhyme a petal sweet;
For fragrance, melody,
That when her lips repeat
The words, her heart may know
What secret makes them so.
Love, only Love!

FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, Song.
¹⁶ Singing is sweet, but be sure of this,
Lips only sing when they cannot kiss.
JAMES THOMSON (B. V.), Sunday Up the River.

And what's a careless kiss or so
To one remembered song?
THEODORA HARRISON, The Kerry Lads.

IX—Some Familiar Refrains and Choruses *

1
Tin Pan Alley

MONROE H. ROSENFELD Said to be the title of an article on the music business published by Rosenfield in a New York newspaper about 1892 (See GOLDBERG, Tin Pan Alley, p. 173) Also claimed by Robert H. Dupee, who died at Carmel, Cal., 5 Oct., 1935 Just before his death, Dupee issued a statement to the press alleging that he had coined the phrase many years ago as a name for West Twenty Eighth Street then the home of many music publishing houses, while walking through the street with Epes W. Sargent, dramatic critic for the New York Morning Telegraph, who used it in his paper next day No date was given

2
Mister Jefferson Lord, play that barber shop chord

That soothing harmony, it makes an awful, awful hit with me

Play that strain just to please me, again,
Oh Lord play that barber shop chord!

WILLIAM TRACEY, Play that Barber Shop Chord (c. 1910) Music by Lewis Murr

That strain again! It had a dying fall

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act 1 sc. 1, l. 4

The willing harmonizer inevitably asks sooner or later, What has quartet singing to do with a barber shop? Whatever the historical association may be anyone familiar with quartet singing knows barber shop swipes by ear Those harmonies generally moving in opposite directions while the melody stands still are recognized by the musical treatises But they are called by very different names, such as tonic, dominant and sub dominant, of which the first alone has a truly consensual fragrance

SIGMUND SPAETH, Barber Shop Ballads Preface

I wonder who's kissing her now,
Wonder who's teaching her now,
Wonder who's looking into her eyes,
Breathing sighs telling lies

FRANK R. ADAMS and WILL M. HUGH, I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now (1909)
Music by J. E. Howard First sung in a musical comedy, The Prince of Tonight

4
Take back the heart thou gavest,
What is my anguish to thee?
Take back the freedom thou cravest,
Leaving the fetters to me

CHARLOTTE ALINGTON BARNARD (CLARINET),
Take Back the Heart (1860)

I'll be loving you, always,

*This section is continued in the Appendix and many other refrains and choruses will be found scattered throughout the book under appropriate headings. She Was Bred in Old Kentucky, for example, will be found under Kentucky; Carry Me Back to Old Virginia under Virginia; and so on. Not for just an hour,

Not for just a day,

Not for just a year, but always,

IRVING BERLIN, Always (1925)

Everybody's dom' it now

IRVING BERLIN Title and refrain (1911)

Remember we found a lonely spot,

And after I learned to care a lot,

You promised that you'd forget me not,

But you forgot to remember

IRVING BERLIN, Remember (1925)

What'll I do when you are far away

And I am blue, what'll I do, what'll I do?

IRVING BERLIN, What'll I Do (1923)

East side West side,
All around the town,

The tots sing "Ring-a-Rose,

London Bridge is falling down",

Boys and girls together,

Me and Mamie Rourke,

Trapped the light fantastic

On the sidewalks of New York

JAMES W. BLAKE, The Sidewalks of New York (1894) Music by Charles B. Lawlor

Used as a campaign song for Alfred E. Smith in the presidential campaign of 1928

In de ebening by the moonlight, you could hear us darkies singing,

In de ebening by the moonlight, you could hear de banjo ringin',

How de old folks would enjoy it, they would sit all night and listen,

As we sang in the ebening by de moonlight

JAMES A. BLAND, In the Evening by the Moonlight (1880) Bland was a Virginia negro and proclaimed himself to be 'the best Ethiopian song writer in the world' perhaps not an overstatement The unforgettable Carry Me Back to Old Virginia was also his See under VIRGINIA

Bunch up your conversation, that's what I demand,

And don't forget you're talkin' to a Lady

Down (1901) Music by Al Johns

If you want to win her hand,
Let the maiden understand

That she's not the only pebble on the beach

HENRY BRAISTEAD, You're Not the Only Pebble

on the Beach (1896) Sung by the "Little

Margaret," Lottie Gibson, for years

When you ain't got no money, well you needn't come 'round.

CHARLES S. BRAWLEY. Title and refrain of song set to music by A. B. Sloane in 1898

One of May Irwin's hits.

1 Oh, you beautiful doll!
SARAHOW BROWN Title and refrain. (1911)

2 Just for the sake of Society,
Baby is sad and lone,
Just for a thing called Propriety,
Mother's heart's turning to stone
ALFRED BRYAN, Just for the Sake of Society
(1904) Music by Kerry Mills The terrible situation was that the heartless mother had gone to a ball, leaving her baby alone, and it fell into the fire and was burned to death.
Smother me with kisses, hon, and kill me with
love,
Wrap yourself around me like a serpent 'round
a dove

ALFRED BRYAN, Smother Me with Kisses
(1914) Music by Harry Carroll Introduced by Lilian Lorraine at the New York Winter Garden

Sometime, someday, somewhere,
Mid other scenes more fair,
Your eyes of blue my face will view,
And its sad look of care
Because my heart was true,
To soothe my dark despair,
With glances sweet my gaze you'll meet,
Sometime, someday, somewhere

Also popularized by Nora Bayes.

4 Tarrymaw, Tarrymaw,
Big Chet sits in his lapce,
Chomping heaven to victory.
Tarrymaw, Tarrymaw,
Swamp 'em, swamp 'em, get the "swampard," Tarrymaw!

VINCENT BRYAN, Tarrymaw (1903) Music by "The Edwards. First sung at the school smoker of the National Democratic Club of New York City in the fall of 1905. Afterwards introduced by Jefferson De Angeli in Fantasia at the Lyric Theatre, New York City. Official song of Tammany Hall.

5 There are smiles that make us happy,
There are smiles that make us blue,
There are smiles that steal away the tear-drops

As the sunbeams steal away the dew
There are smiles that have a tender meaning,
That the eyes of love alone may see,
But the smiles that fill my life with sunshine
Are the smiles that you give to me

by Lee S. Roberts

6 Member dat rainy eve dat I drove you out,
Wid nothing but a fine tooth comb?
I knows I'se to blame, well ain't dat a shame?
Bill Bailey, won't you please come home?
HUGHIE CANNON, Bill Bailey, Won't You Please
Come Home! (1902) Introduced by John
Queen in a farce comedy called Town
Topics, at Newburgh, N. Y., it quickly produced a whole crop of songs dealing with the troubles of the Bailey family, among them

I wonder why Bill Bailey don't come home?

BILLY JOHNSON, Since Bill Bailey Came Back
Home (1902) Music by Seymour Furth

7 You can't keep a good man down
M. F. CARRY Title and refrain (1900)

8 'Tis years since last we met,
And we may not meet again,
I have struggled to forget,
But the struggle was in vain,
For her voice lives on the breeze,
And her spirit comes at will,
In the midnight on the seas,
Her bright smile haunts me still.
J. E. CAMPBELL, Her Bright Smile Haunts Me
Still, (1883) Music by W. T. Wrightson

9 So won't you grant me all my wishes,
Won't you sprinkle me with kisses,
If you want my love to grow?
EARL CARROLL, Sprinkle Me With Kisses
(1915) Music by Ernest R. Ball. Sung by Evelyn Nesbit.

10 Then drill, ye Tarriers, drill,
Drill, ye Tarriers, drill,
Oh, it's work all day without sugar in your tray
When ye work boyant on the railway,
And drill, ye Tarriers, drill
TOMMAS V. CAGLEY, Drill, Ye Tarriers, Drill
(1838) "Tarriers" was the name given na-skilled Irish laborers in New York, engaged in drilling out rock in making excavations for new buildings. The song was introduced to the town in Kay's A Brass Monkey, which opened at the Bijou Theatre, 15 Oct., 1888, and instantly became popular.

1 Oh, Mandy Lee, I love you, 'deed I do, my Mandy Lee,

Your eyes they shine like diamonds, love, to me.

THURLEIGH CHATTAWAY, Mandy Lee. (1899)

2 I'm sorry, dear, so sorry, dear,
I'm sorry I made you cry!

Won't you forget? won't you forgive?
Don't let us say good-bye!

One little word, one little smile,

One little kiss won't you try?

It breaks my heart to hear you sigh,
I'm sorry I made you cry!

N. J. CLEGG, I'm Sorry I Made You Cry (1918)

3 Too proud to beg, too honest to steal,
I know what it is to be wanting a meal,
My tatters and rags I try to conceal,
I'm one of the Shabby Genteel

HARRY CLIFTON, Shabby Genteel (c 1870)

4 I can't tell why I love you, but I do.
WILL D. COBB, Title and refrain (1900)

I don't want money—don't you think that's funny?

Come closer, honey, I'll tell you true;
I don't want jewelry, fine clothes or foolery
When I grows up, I wants just you

WILL D. COBB, I Don't Want Money. (1901)

SONNET

5 Rafael made a century of sonnets.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 2.

6 What is a sonnet? 'Tis the pearly shell
That murmurs of the far-off murmuring sea;
A precious jewel carved most curiously;
It is a little picture painted well.

RICHARD WATSON CHILDER, The Sonnet.

7 There Sackville's sonnets sweetly sauced
And fealty find be.

JACQUES HAYWOOD, Metrical Preface to the Thyestes of Seneca.

8 For, of all compositions, he thought that the sonnet

Best repaid all the toil you expended upon it.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 368.

9 The sonnet is a trunk, and you must pack
With care, to ship frail baggage far away;
The octet is the trunk; sestet, the tray;

10 Tight, but not overloaded, is the knack.
CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Thoughts While Packing a Trunk

A sonnet is a moment's memento,—
Memorial from the Soul's eternity
To one dead deathless hour,
D. G. ROBERTS, The Sonnet.

11 A torturer of phrases into sonnets.
SCOTT, Auchincloss. Pt. III, ch. 1.

12 I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act I, sc. 1, l. 205.

13 Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
V, sc. 2, l. 4.

Deep-brain'd sonnets.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 209

A halting sonnet of his own pure brain
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing Act
V, sc. 4, l. 87.

14 The Sonnet is a world, where feelings caught
In webs of phantasy, combine and fuse
Their kindred elements 'neath mystic dews
Shed from the ether round man's dwelling wrought.

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

Spare thou no pains; carve thought's pure diamond

With fourteen facets, scattering fire and light.
JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

Our Sonnet's world hath two fixed hemispheres—
This, where the sun with fierce strength masculi-nize

Pours his keen rays and bids the moonday shine;
That, where the moon and the stars, concordant
powers,

Shed milder rays, and daylight disappears
In low melodious music of still hours

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS, The Sonnet.

15 A sonnet is a wave of melody:
From heaving waters of the impassioned soul
A billow of tidal music one and whole
Flows, in the "octave"; then, returning free,
Its ebbing surges in the "sestet" roll
Back to the depths of Life's tumultuous sea.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Sonnet's Voice.

16 Scorn not the Sonnet; Critic, you have frowned,

Mindless of its just honours; with this key
Shakespeare unlocked his heart; the melody
Of this small lute gave ease to Petrarch's wound; . . . and, when a damp

Fall roused the poet of Milton, in his hand
The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew

Soul-animating strains—alas, too few!

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Scorn Not the Sonnet

"With this same key

Shakespeare unlocked his heart," once more!
Did Shakespeare? If so, the less Shakespeare he!

ROBERT BROWNING, House. St. 10.

Shall I sonnet-sing you about myself?

Do I live in a house you would like to see?

Is it scant of gear, has it store of pelf?

"Unlock my heart with a sonnet key?"

No: thanking the public, I must decline.

ROBERT BROWNING, House. St. 1.

"Scorn not the sonnet," though its strength be tapped,

Nor say malignant its inventor blundered;

The corpse that here in fourteen lines is wrapped

Had otherwise been covered with a hundred

RUSSELL H. LOMES, On a Magazine Sonnet.

I—Sorrow: Definitions

1 Sorrow is knowledge.

BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

'Tis held that sorrow makes us wise.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cviii.

2 For Sorrow's a woman a man may take
And know, till his heart and body break.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Sorrow That Cries.

3 There is no wisdom in useless and hopeless sorrow, but there is something in it so like virtue, that he who is wholly without it cannot be loved.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs Thrale, 1781.

4 Sorrow is a kind of rust of the soul, which every new idea contributes in its passage to scour away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 47.

5 Sorrow, the great idealizer.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Spenser.

6 Our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 4.

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 76.

7 Sorrow is held the eldest child of sin.

JOHN WILSON, Duchess of Malj. Act v, sc. 5.

Sorrow is good for nothing but sin.

II—Sorrow: Apothegms

9 Nothing comes to us too soon but sorrow.

P. J. BAILLY, Festus: Home

10 The busy bee has no time for sorrow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Sorrow preys upon its solitude . . .

The busy have no time for tears.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act iv, sc. 1.

11 All sorrows are less with bread. (Los duelos con Pan son menos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt li, ch. 13.

Fat sorrow is better than lean sorrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1507.

A lean sorrow is hardest to bear.

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more
Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act i, sc. 3, l. 302.

In wooing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act v, sc. 1, l. 93.

If sorrow can admit society,
Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act iv, sc. 4, l. 38.

Sorrow concealed, like an overstepp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, Act ii, sc. 4, 36.

To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, Act iii, sc. 1, 245.

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, Act iii, sc. 1, 245.

Say but to-morrow, and your present sorrow will be sorry, and will be chaste to meet.

BRADY, Childs Harold, Canto ii, st. 96.

But sorrow return'd with the dawning of morn,

And the voice in my dreaming ear melted
away.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Soldier's Dream.

Men die, but sorrow never dies;
The crowding years divide in vain,

And the wide world is knit with ties
Of common brotherhood in pain

SUSAN COOLIDGE, The Cradle Tomb in Westminster Abbey.

But when I came to Heartbreak Hill,
Silver touched the sea;

I knew that many and many a soul
Was climbing close to me,

I knew I walked that weary way
In a great company.

HELEN GRAY CONE, Heartbreak Road.

When I was young, I said to Sorrow,
"Come, and I will play with thee!"

He is near me now all day,
And at night returns to say,

"I will come again to-morrow—
I will come and stay with thee."

AUBREY DE VINE, Song: When I Was Young

Heavy the sorrow that bows the head
When love is alive and hope is dead!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore, Act i.

To each his sufferings; all are men,
Condemn'd alike to groan,—

The tender for another's pain,
Th' unfeeling for his own

Yet ah! why should they know their fate?
Since sorrow never comes too late

O, sorrow! Why dost borrow Heart's lightness from the merriment of

May?

KELKE, Analytical. Bk. iv, l. 164.

To Sorrow I bade good morrow,
And thought to leave her far away behind;

But cheerily, cheerily, she leaves me deeply;
She is so constant to me, and so kind.

KELKE, Analytical. Bk. iv, l. 173.

1 I have a silent sorrow here,
A grief I'll ne'er impart.
KOTIKQUI, The Stranger. Act iv, sc. 1.

2 Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.

Old Testament: Lamentations, i, 12.
Much then I learned and much can show
Of human guilt and human woe,
Yet ne'er have in my wanderings known
A wretch whose sorrows matched my own!
Scott, Rokeby. Canto iv, st. 23

3 Believe me, every man has his secret sorrows, which the world knows not, and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

LONGFELLOW, The Rainy Day.

Nor indolence, nor pleasure, nor the fret
Of restless passions that would not be stilled,
But sorrow, and a care that almost killed,
Kept me from what I may accomplish yet.

LONGFELLOW, Messo Cammari.

rain.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint. l. 7.

Ah, do not, when my heart hath 'scaped this sorrow,

Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;

Give not a windy night a rainy morn,

To linger out a purposed overthrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. 20.

12 I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:

But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,

Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
1, l. 37.

13 Sorrow so royally in you appears,
That I will deeply put the fashion on.

I—Soul: Definitions

17 Soul is the Man.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Are You What Your Fair

— Looks Express!

18 The soul of man is larger than the sky,
Deeper than ocean, or the abysmal dark

Of the unfathom'd centre.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, To Shakespeare.

19 A soul—a spark of the never-dying flame that separates man from all the other beings of earth.

J. FLETCHER COOPER, Afloat and Ashore. Ch. 12.

1 Our souls sit close and silently within,
And their own web from their own entrails spin;

And when eyes meet far off, our sense is such,
That, spider-like, we feel the tenderest touch.
DRYDEN, Marriage à la Mode. Act II, sc. 1.

2 The Supreme Critic on the errors of the past and the present, and the only prophet of that which must be, is that great nature in which we rest as the earth lies in the soft arms of the atmosphere; that Unity, that Over-Soul, within which every man's particular being is contained and made one with all other.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

3 The one thing in the world, of value, is the active soul.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The American Scholar.

4 Whether or not the philosophers care to admit that we have a soul, it seems obvious that we are equipped with something or other which generates dreams and ideals, and which sets up values.

JOHN ESKRINE (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 39.)

4 By the word soul, or psyche, I mean that inner consciousness which aspires. By prayer I do not mean a request preferred to a deity;
I mean . . . intense aspiration.

6 For every soul is a circus,
And every mind is a tent,
And every heart is a sawdust ring
Where the circling race is spent.

VACANT LUNAR, Every Soul is a Circus.

7 Hands of invisible spirits touch the strings
Of that mysterious instrument, the soul,
And play the prelude of our fate. We hear
The voice prophetic, and are not alone.

LEMMINGLOW, The Spanish Student. Act I, sc. 3, l. 111.

8 Men do not know what the nature of the soul is, whether it is engendered with us or whether it is infused into us at our birth; whether it perishes with us, dissolved by death, or whether it leaps the gloomy shades and bottomless pits of Orcus, or whether, by divine influence, it infuses itself into other animals (Ignoratur enim, quæ sit natura animæ;

Nata sit, an contra nascentibus insinuetur;
Et simul intereat nobiscum, morte diremta,
An tenebras Orci visat, vastasque lacunas;
An pecudes alias divinitus insinuet se.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. I, l. 113.

9 So the soul cannot exist separate from the body, and the man himself, whose body seems as it were the urn of the soul.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. III, l. 553.

My mind is incapable of conceiving such a thing as a soul. I may be in error, and man may have a soul; but I simply do not believe it.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Do We Live Again?

Nobody knows how the idea of a soul or the supernatural started. It probably had its origin in the natural laziness of mankind.

and loves just as naturally as it perceives, understands, and remembers.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 7.

14 Do you ask where the Supreme Good dwells?
In the soul. And unless the soul be pure and holy, there is no room in it for God. (Quis sit summi boni locus queris? Animus. Hic nisi purus ac sanctus est, deum non capit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliam. Epis. 87, 21.

The soul is more powerful than any sort of fortune; . . . of its own power it can produce a happy life, or a wretched one. (Valentior enim Erazine caput, pecudum si more pererrant?)

CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpine Bk. III, l. 41.

20 Two souls, alas! reside within my breast,
 And each withdraws from and repels its brother

GORTSE, Faust Pt I, sc 2 (Taylor, tr)
 I feel two natures struggling within me
GEORGE GRAY BARRETT Title of group of statues

The lark soars up in the air,
 The load sits tight in his hole,
 And I would I were certain which of the pair
 Were the truer type of my soul!
F. ANSTEE, Stanza Written in Depression Near Dulwich.

21 In me there meet a combination of antithetical elements which are at eternal war with one other.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore Act I

22 Awake, my Soul, and with the Sun,
 Thy daily stage of Duty run,
 Shake off dull Sloth, and early rise,
 To pay thy Morning Sacrifice

BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Morning Hymn (1695)
 Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
 As the swift seasons roll!

Leave thy low-vaulted past!
 Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
 Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
 Till thou at length art free,
 Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting
 sea!

O. W. HOLMES, The Chambered Nautilus

23 I count that soul exceeding small
 That lives alone by book and creed,—
 A soul that has not learned to read
JOSEPH MILLER, The Larger College.

24 Ah! there be souls none understand;
 Like clouds, they cannot touch the land.
 Unanchored ships, they blow and blow,
 Sail to and fro, and then go down
 In unknown seas that none shall know,
 Without one ripple of renown.

Call these not fools; the test of worth
 Is not the halt you have of earth.
 Ay, there are ghostliest souls sea-blown
 That know not any harbor known.
 Now is may be the reason is,
 They touch on faster shores than this.

JOSEPH MILLER, The Ship in the Desert, xlii.

25 There was a little Man, and he had a little Soul;

And he said, "Little Soul, let us try, try, try!"
 THOMAS MOORE, Little Man and Little Soul.

5 Thon turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
 And there I see such black and grained spots
 As will not leave their tinct

6 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act iii, sc. 4, l. 89

The soul of man is like the rolling world,
 One half in day, the other dipt in night;
 The one has music and the flying cloud,
 The other, silence and the wakeful stars.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Horton.

7 My soul is a dark ploughed field
 In the cold rain;

My soul is a broken field
 Ploughed by pain.

SARA TRASDALE, The Broken Field.

8 A sinful soul possess'd of many gifts,
 A spacious garden full of flowering weeds.

TENNISON, To —.

What profits now to understand

The merits of a spotless shirt—

A dapper boot—a little hand—

If half the little soul is dirt.

TENNYSON, The New Timon and the Poets.

(Published in Punch, 28 Feb., 1846, in answer to attack made by Bulwer-Lytton in The New Timon when Tennyson received a pension.)

9 "Two things," the wise man said, "fill me with awe:
 The starry heavens and the moral law."

Nay, add another wonder to thy roll—

The living marvel of the human soul!

A God to glorify:

A never-dying soul to save,

And fit it for the sky.

CHARLES WESLEY, Christian Fidelity.

IV—Soul and Body

12 To man, propose this test—

Thy body at its best,

How far can it perfect thy soul on its lone way?

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 8

13 Whoe'er thou art, O reader, know
 That Death has murdered Johnny!

And here his body lies fu' low—

For saul he ne'er had ony.

ROBERT BURNS, On Waa Johnny. John Wilson, the printer of Burns's poems, at Kilmarnock.

14 A fiery soul, which working out its way,
 Fretted the pigmy body to decay,
 And o'er informed the tenement of clay.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel Pt. i, l. 156.

He was one of a lean body and visage, as if his eager soul, biting for anger at the clog of his body, desired to fret a passage through it.

THOMAS FULLER, Life of the Duke of Alva.

For the sword outwears its sheath,

And the soul wears out the breast.

BYRON, So We'll Go No More a-Roving.

15 Though a sound body cannot restore an unsound mind, yet a good soul can, by its virtue, render the body the best possible.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato. See also MIND AND BODY.

16 It is much more necessary to cure the soul than the body, for death is better than a bad life. (Ψυχῆς σωτηρία ἀναγκαιότερον θανάτου καὶ τῶν κακῶν ἢ τοῦ τελευτᾶν κακοῦ)

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion. Frag. 32.

17 The soul needs few things, the body many.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The body is sooner dressed than the soul.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

18 The body, laden with yesterday's vices, drags down the soul as well, and fastens to the earth a fragment of the divine spirit. (Corpus onustum Hesternis vitiis animum quoque pręgravat una Atque adfigit humo divine particulam aure)

20 There is nothing the body suffers that the soul may not profit by.

CHARLES MERRITT, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. I.

21 The soul is nothing apart from the senses.

PROTAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Protagoras. Bk. ix, sec. 51.)

The body is the socket of the soul.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The perfect body, is itself the soul.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Before a Statue of Achilles.

22 It is the soul, and not the strong-box, which should be filled. (Animum impleri debere, non arcum.

SKENE, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. xcii, sec. 32.

1 So every spirit, as it is more pure,
And hath in it the more of heavenly light,
So it the fairer body doth procure
To habit in, and it more fairly dight,
With cheerful grace and amiable sight.
For, of the soul, the body form doth take,
For soul is form, and doth the body make.

EDMUND SPENSER, Hymn in Honour of Beauty, l. 127.

For what is form, or what is face,
But the soul's index, or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure.

2 How should I gauge what beauty is her dole,
Who cannot see her countenance for her soul,
As birds see not the casement for the sky?
And as 'tis check they prove its presence by,
I know not of her body till I find
My flight debarred the heaven of her mind.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait.

3 Our life is but the Soul made known by its fruits, the body. The whole duty of man may be expressed in one line: Make to yourself a perfect body.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 21 June, 1840.

V—Soul: The Unconquered Soul

4 No coward soul is mine,
No trembler in the world's storm-troubled sphere:

I see Heaven's glories shine,
And faith shines equal, arming me from fear.

EMILY BRONTË, Last Verses.

5 My feet are heavy now but on I go,
My head erect beneath the tragic years.

JOHN DAVIDSON, I Felt the World A-spinning on Its Nave.

6 The soul selects her own society.
Then shuts the door;
On her divine majority
Obtrude no more.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. 4, No. 13.

7 Let fortune empty her whole quiver on me.
I have a soul that, like an ample shield,
Can take in all, and verge enough for more.

DEYOUNG, Dea Sebastian. Act 1, sc. 1.

Give ample room, and verge enough.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 51.

8 Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

W. E. GLANVILLE, Imitation.

Out of the light that dazzles me,
Bright as the sun from pole to pole,
I thank the God I know to be
For Christ, the Conqueror of my soul.
DOBOTHEA DAY, Victims.

Dame Nature doubtless has designed
A man the monarch of his mind.
JOHN BYRON, Careless Content.

10 It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate.
I am the captain of my soul.
W. E. HENLEY, Invictus.

I am the captain of my soul;
I rule it with stern joy;
And yet I think I had more fun
When I was cabin boy.

KEITH PRESTON, An Awful Responsibility.

Arise, O Soul, and gird thee up anew,
Though the black camel Death kneel at thy
gate;
No beggar thou that thou for alms shouldst sue.
Be the proud captain still of thine own fate.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Black Camel.

Mistress of mine own self and mine own soul.
TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act iv, sc. 1.

11 God gave thy soul brave wings; put not those feathers

Into a bed, to sleep out all ill weathers.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 14.

12 Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives,
But though the whole world turn to coal,
Then chiefly lives.
GEORGE HERBERT, Virtue.

13 A frame of adamant, a soul of fire,
No dangers fright him, and no labours tire.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 191.

14 Give thanks, O heart, for the high souls
That point us to the deathless goals. . . .
The company of souls supreme
The conscripts of the Mighty Dream. . . .
Brave souls that took the perilous trail
And felt the vision could not fail.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Conscripts of the Dream.

15 Lord of myself, accountable to none.
But to my conscience, and my God alone.
JOHN OLDHAM, Satire Addressed to a Friend.

16 Make thee a soul that will abide; only that endures to the end. (Iam molire animum, qui durat; . . . Solus ad extremum permanet ille rogo.)

QUINT, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 419.

1 'Tis my soul
That I thus hold erect as if with stays,
And decked with daring deeds instead of ribbons.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act I, sc. 4.

2 I love a soul not all of wood,
Predestined to be good,
But true to the backbone
Unto itself alone
And false to none;
Born to its own affairs,
Its own joys and own cares;
By which the work that God begun
Is finished, and not undone.
H. D. THOREAU, Conscience.

3 They have mighty souls beating in narrow breasts. (Ingentes animos angusto in corpore versant.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 83.

LITTLE BODIES HAVE GREAT SOULS.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs

4 What a mighty soul in a narrow bosom. (Welch höher Geist in einer engen Brust.)

GÖTTE, Torquato Tasso. Act II, sc. 3, l. 199.

5 What do you suppose will satisfy the soul,
except to walk free and own no superior?
WALT WHITMAN, Lines for Creations.

Ever the undiscouraged, resolute, struggling soul of man; . . .
Ever the soul dissatisfied, curious, unconvinced
at last;

Struggling to-day the same—battling the same.
WALT WHITMAN, Life.

O my brave soul! O farther farther sail!
O daring joy, but safe! are they not all the seas of God?

O farther, farther, farther sail!
WALT WHITMAN, Passage to India. Sec. 9.

6 And the most difficult of tasks to keep Heights which the soul is competent to gain.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 138.

VI—Soul: Its Last Journey

7 To-day the journey is ended,
I have worked out the mandates of fate;
Naked, alone, undefended,

I knock at the Uttermost Gate.

Behind is life and its longing,

Its trial, its trouble, its sorrow,

Beyond is the Infinite Morning

Of a day without a to-morrow.

WENOMAN STEVENS ABBOTT, A Soul's Soliloquy.

8 There's a quiet harbor somewhere

For the poor a-weary soul.

H. H. BROWNELL, The Burial of the Dead.

9 A happy soul, that all the way

To heaven hath a summer day. . . .

And, when life's sweet fable ends,

Soul and body part like friends:—

No quarrels, murmurs, no delay;

A kiss, a sigh, and so away.

RICHARD CRABBE, *In Praise of Lessius's
Rules of Health*, l. 33.

10 Gentle little soul, hastening away, my body's guest and comrade, whither goest thou now, pale, fearful, pensive, not jesting, as of old?

(Animula, vagula, blandula

Hospes comesque corporis,

Quæ nunc abibis in loca,

Pallidula, rigida, nudula,

Nec, ut soles, dabis joca?)

HADRIAN, Morientsis, Ad Animam Suam
(ÆLIUS SEBASTIANUS, Life of the Emperor Hadrian.)

Ah! gentle, fleeting, wav'ring sprite,

Friend and associate of this clay!

To what unknown region borne,

Wilt thou now wing thy distant flight?

No more with wonted humour gay,

But pallid, cheerless, and forlorn.

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Byron, tr.)

Vital spark of heav'nly flame,

Quit, oh quit, this mortal frame!

Trembling, hoping, ling'ring, flying,

Oh, the pain, the bliss of dying! . . .

Hark! they whisper; angels say,

Sister Spirit, come away!

POPE, The Dying Christian to His Soul. (The Spectator, 15 Nov., 1711.)

Poor little pretty, fluttering thing,

Must we no longer live together?

And dost thou prune thy trembling wing,

To take thy flight thou know'st not whither?

Thy humorous vein, thy pleasing folly

Lies all neglected, all forgot:

And pensive, wavering, melancholy,

Thou dread'st and hop'st thou know'st not what.

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Prior, tr.)

Ma petite âme, ma mignonne,

Tu t'en vas donc, ma fille, et Dieu sçache où tu

vas:

Tu pars seulette, nue, et tremblotante, hélas!

Que deviendra ton humeur folichonne!

Que deviendront tant de jolis ébats!

HADRIAN, Ad Animam Suam. (Fontanelle, tr.)
Prior quotes Fontanelle's version before his own.

11 Ah, the souls of those that die

Are but sunbeams lifted higher.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv:

The Cloisters, l. 19.

The dust's for crawling, heaven's for flying,

Wherefore, O Soul, whose wings are grown,

Soar upward to the sun!

EDGAR LEE MARYES, The Spoon River Anthology: Julian Scott.

12 Return unto thy rest, my soul,

From all the wanderings of thy thought,
From sickness unto death made whole,
Safe through a thousand perils brought.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, Rest for the Soul.

I infected, how soon in the cup of Desires
The pearl of the soul may be melted away;
How quickly, alas, the pure sparkle of fire
We inherit from heav'n, may be quenched in the clay
THOMAS MOORE, Stanzas.

My soul, the seas are rough, and thou a stranger
In these false coasts; O keep aloof; there's danger,
Cast forth thy plummet; see, a rock appears;
Thy ship wants sea-room, make it with thy tears
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems Bk. iii, No. 11.

Go, Soul, the Body's guest,
Upon a thankless errand:
Fear not to touch the best,
The truth shall be thy warrant:
Go, since I needs must die,
And give the World the lie

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie Probably written by Raleigh during his imprisonment, 1592. Found in a manuscript of 1593.
Has also been attributed to Sir John Davies, Joshua Sylvester, Lord Pembroke and Richard Edwards.

Tell zeal, it lacks devotion;
Tell love, it is but lust;
Tell time, it is but motion;
Tell flesh, it is but dust!
And wish them not reply,
For thou must give the lie.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

Yet stab at thee that will,
No stab the soul can kill!
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

And the souls mounting up to God
Went by her like thin flames.
D. G. ROBERTS, The Blessed Damsel.

Her soul from earth to Heaven lies,
Like the ladder of the vision,
Whereto go To and fro,
In ascension and demission,
Star-docked feet of Paradise.

Animals share with us the privilege of having a soul.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIODORUS LAERTIUS, Pythagoras
Bk. vii, sec. 13.)

The soul, bound now in this creature, now is that, goes on a round ordained of necessity.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIODORUS LAERTIUS, Pythagoras
Bk. vii, sec. 14.)

I was Euphorbus at the siege of Troy.

PYTHAGORAS.

When I was a shepherd on the plains of Assyria.
THOREAU

Our souls are deathless, and ever, when they have left their former seat, do they live in new abodes and dwell in the bodies that have received them (Morte carent animae sem-perque priore Sede novis domibus vivunt habitantque receptae)
OVID, Metamorphoses Bk. xv, l. 158

The soul is immortal, and is clothed successively in many bodies

PLATO (DIODORUS LAERTIUS, Plato Sec. 40)

I hold that when a person dies
His soul returns again to earth;
Attayed in some new flesh-disguise
Another mother gives him birth
With sturdier limbs and brighter brain
The old soul takes the roads again.
JOHN MARSHFIELD, A Creed.

Thou almost makest me waver in my faith
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men

SOUND

I—Sound: Definitions

A thousand trills and quivering sounds

In airy circles o'er us fly,

Till, wafted by a gentle breeze,

They faint and languish by degrees,

And at a distance die.

AMBROSE, Ode for St Cecilia's Day St. 6

No sound is dissonant which tells of Life

S. T. COLERIDGE, This Lime-Tree Bower My Prison, l. 16.

There is in souls a sympathy with sounds.

COWPER, The Task Bk. vi, l. 1.

Own, by neglecting sorrow's wound,

The consonance of sound.

MATTHEW GREY, The Splendour, l. 152.

There is no sound but shall find some lovers, as the bitterest confessions are grateful to some palates

Act i, sc. 1, l. 143.

Idle sounds resembling parasites.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 848.

Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1, 158.

6 Sweet is every sound,
Sweeter thy voice, but every sound is sweet;
Myriads of rivulets hurrying thro' the lawn,
The moan of doves in immemorial elms,
And murmuring of innumerable bees.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 203.

And beauty born of murmuring sound.

WORDSWORTH, Three Years She Grew.

7 Sugar is not so sweet to the palate as sound to the healthy ear.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

II—Sound and Sense

8 If the speaker's words sound discordant with his fortunes, the Romans in box and pit alike, will raise a loud guffaw. (Si dicentis erunt fortunæ absorta dicta, Romani tollent equites peditesque cachinnum.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 112.

To all proportioned terms he must dispense
And make the sound a picture of the sense.

SPAIN AND THE SPANIARDS

11a The Spaniard is a bad servant but a worse master.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 116. (1629)

12 Poor Isabella's dead, whose abdication
Set all tongues wagging in the Spanish nation.
For that performance 'twere unfair to scold
her:

She wisely left a throne too hot to hold her.

To History she'll be no royal riddle—

Merely a plain parched pea that jumped the griddle.

AMBROSE BREECE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 11.

13 A whale stranded upon the coast of Europe.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons.

Referring to Spain. The original sentence was, "A whale stranded upon the sea shore of Europe."

14 Oh, Christ! it is a goodly sight to see

What Heaven hath done for this delicious
land!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 15.

Oh, lovely Spain! renown'd romantic land!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 35.

15 A nation swoln with ignorance and pride,
Who lick yet loathe the hand that waves the sword.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 16.

The land of war and crimes.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 16.

16 Her soil has felt the foot-prints, and her clime
Been winnowed by the wings of Liberty.

1597. "A common proverb in every man's mouth." (Notes and Queries, 10th Ser., Vol. ii, p. 23.)

18 Well here's to the Maine, and I'm sorry for Spain,

Said Kelly and Burke and Shea.

J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

19 Perhaps they may count me a beggar here,
With never a roof for the wind and the
rain,

But there is the sea with its wave-lashed pier,
And over the sea lies Spain.

C. W. COLEMAN, Over the Sea Lies Spain.

20 Singed the Spanish king's beard.

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE. (MURPHY, Pictorial History of England, iii, 245.)

He has singed the beard of the King of Spain.

GUARDIEL, Pastor Fido. (1585) Referring to Catherine of Austria. Philip II of Spain is supposed to have said, "The sun never sets upon my empire."

The sun never sets upon my dominions.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT. (WILLIAMS, Life. Ch.
13.) This was a boast repeated by many writers: for Rome by Claudian (De Consulatu Stilichonis, iii, 139); Ovid (Fasti, ii, 136); Tibullus (Elegia, ii, 5, 58); Vergil
(Æneid, vi, 795); for Portugal by Camoens
(Lusad, i, 8); for Philip II by James Howell (Familiar Letters).

It may be said of the Hollanders as of the Spaniards, that the sun never sets upon their dominions.

iung*. (1600)

4 The richest man in Christendom I'm called;
On my dominions never sets the sun.

(Ich heisse

Der reichste Mann in der getauften Welt;
Die Sonne geht in meinem Staat nicht unter.)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act i, sc. 6, l. 60.

The sun never sets on the immense empire of Charles V.

SCOTT, Life of Napoleon. Ch. 59.

5 Why should the brave Spanish soldiers brag?
The sun never sets in the Spanish dominions, but ever shineth on one part or other we have conquered for our king.

METRA, ye Loves and Graces, My lady's sparrow is dead, her pet, whom she loved more than her very eyes. (Lugete, O Veneres Cupidinesque, . .

Passer mortuus est mee puellae, Quem plus illa oculis suis amabat.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. ii, l. 1.

Tell me not of joy: there's none

Now my little sparrow's gone;

He, just as you, Would toy and woo.

WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT, Lesbia's Sparrow.

7 I thought the sparrow's note from heaven,

Singing at dawn on the alder bough;

I brought him home, in his nest, at even;

He sings the song, but it cheers not now,

For I did not bring home the river and sky;—

He sang to my ear,—they sang to my eye.

EMERSON, Each and All, l. 13.

8 He's cheerful in weather so bitterly cold

It freezes your bones to the marrow;

I'll admit he's a beggar, a gangster, a bum,

But I take off my hat to the sparrow.

MINNA IRVING, The Sparrow.

9 The sparrows chirped as if they still were proud

Their race in Holy Writ should mentioned be.

I—Speech: Definitions

10 Speech is the image of life. (ῥῶλον εἰδολον τοῦ βίου.)

DEMOCRITUS, Idylls. (BRATHWAIT, *English
Gentleman*, 51. 1641)

A man's character is revealed by his speech.
(Ἀνδρὸς χαρακτήρ διὰ λόγον γνωρίζεται.)

MENANDER, The Flute Girl: Fragment.

Man's speech is like his life. (Ὅλος ὁ βίος, τοιαύτος καὶ ὁ λόγος.)

SOCRATES. (CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, v, 47.)

A man cannot speak but he judges himself.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Language most shews a man: Speak, that I may see thee.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Oratio Imago Animi.
See also LANGUAGE: SINCERITY.

11 Usage, in whose hands lies the judgment, the right and the rule of speech. (Usus, Quem penes arbitrium est et jus et norma loquendi.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 71.

12 Speech is the only benefit man hath to express his excellency of mind above other creatures. It is the Instrument of Society.
... In all speech, words and sense are as the body and the soul.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Oratoris Digni-tate.

1 Speech is the mirror of the soul; as the man, so is his speech. (Sermo animi est imago; qualis vir, talis est oratio est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 1073.

Speech is the picture of the mind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Speech is the index and mirror of the soul.

T. W. ROBERTSON, Nightingale. Pt. i.

2 God, all-powerful Creator of nature and Architect of the world, has impressed man with no character so proper to distinguish him from other animals, as by the faculty of speech.

QUINTILIUS, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. II, ch. 17, sec. 2.

3 Speech is the mirror of action. (Ὅλον ἐκδούλον αἶψα τὸν ἔργον.)

SOLOON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 58.)

4 All speech, written or spoken, is a dead language, until it finds a willing and prepared hearer.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

5 The speech of men is like embroidered tapestries, since, like them, it must be extended in order to display its patterns, but when it is rolled up it conceals and distorts them.

THEMISTOCLES, to ARTAXERXES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 29, sec. 3.)

His speeches are like cypress trees; they are tall and comely, but bear no fruit.

PHOCION. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion)

6 All speech is a hazard; oftener than not it is the most hazardous kind of deed.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, The Life of Don Quixote. See also WORD AND DEED.

7 Speech, thought's canal; speech, thought's criterion, too!

Thought in the mine, may come forth gold or dross;

When coin'd in words, we know its real worth.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 469.

II—Speech: Apothegms

8 Though I say it that should not.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombsie. Act v, sc. 3. (1594)

I say it—that should not say it.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act II, sc. 1. (1599)

To say the truth, though I say 't that should not say 't.

BAUMONT and FLETCHER, Wit at Several Weapons. Act II, sc. 2. (1609)

9 What I have said, Charles Middlewick, 's my ulipomatium.

HENRY J. BYRON, Our Boys. Act II.

10

That's nothing to what I could say if I chose.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9.

"Then you should say what you mean," the March Hare went on.

"I do," Alice hastily replied; "at least—at least I mean what I say—that's the something, you know."

"Not the same thing a bit!" said the Hatter.

CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, 7.

11

He himself said it. (Ipse dixit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec.

10. Referring to the Pythagoreans.

Pythagoras, to whom was applied the phrase, "The Master said" (Ἀπὸ τοῦ ἑαῖ), which passed into a proverb of ordinary life.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, 46.

12

I speak this by permission, and not of commandment.

New Testament: I Corinthians, vii, 6.

13

The bearings of this observation lays in the application on it.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 23.

14

We never speak as we pass by

FRANK ROBERTSON, Refrain of song. (1883)

15

I can't say fairer than that, can I?

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

16

I will speak something notable, new, and hitherto unsaid by any other mouth. (Dicam in-signis, recens, adhuc Indictum ore alio.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 25, l. 7.

17

Now I'll say something to remember.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act I.

18

Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

New Testament: Matthew, xii, 34. (Ex abundantia cordis os loquitur.—Vulgate.)

19

For more than forty years I have been speaking prose without knowing it. (Il y a plus de quarante ans que je dis de la prose sans que j'en fusse rien.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, ii, 4, 179.

20

He speaks to a dead man: i. e., he wastes words. (Verba facit mortuo.)

PLAUTUS, Panulus, l. 840. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

21

The words are spoken to a dead man. (Verba sunt mortuo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 1015. (Act v, sc. 8.)

22

He never speaks but his mouth opens.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 193.

23

I do not much dislike the matter, but

The manner of his speech.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 113.

24

Say, and speak thick.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 58.

What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 33.

I will speak daggers to her, but use none.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 414.

Nor shall it be your excuse, that, murderer as you are, you have spoken daggers, but used none.
SHILLEY, Adonais: Preface.

She speaks poniards, and every word stabs.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 255.

Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, Act
v, sc. 1, l. 252.

He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke and bounce.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 462.

Mend your speech a little,
Lest it may mar your fortunes.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act i, sc. 2, l. 95.

Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 140.

She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor,
Act i, sc. 1, l. 48.

You may speak as small as you will.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
Act i, sc. 2, l. 52.

I'll speak in a monstrous little voice.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
Act i, sc. 2, l. 54.

There was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act v, sc. 2, l. 14.

I am not surprised, for I have heard him speak very disrespectfully of the Equator.

SWANNY SMITH, to Sir John Leslie, when the latter complained to him that Francis Jeffrey had attacked in the Edinburgh Review, an article of his dealing with the North Pole, and when he complained, had retorted,
"Oh, damn the North Pole!" (GREVILLE,
Memoirs, 1833; LADY HOLLAND, Memoirs,
Ch. 2.)

Inaulkin' the sun and quarterin' w' the equator.
JOHN WATSON, Noctes Ambrosianae, No. 24,
May, 1830.

God giveth speech to all, song to the few.
WALTER CHALMERS BARNES, Only Songs, No. 1,
Edinburgh, 1838.

Ho said enough. Enough said.

GRANTHER STEIN, Enough Said. The poem consists of these words, five times repeated.

The first duty of man is to speak; that is his chief business in this world.

R. L. STEVENSON, Talk and Talkers.

Who hath given man speech? or who hath set therein

A thorn for peril and a snare for sin?

SWINBURNE, Atlanta in Calydon: Chorus.

God's great gift of speech abused

Makes thy memory confused.

TEKLYSON, A Dirge, St. 7.

III—Speech: Speaking Well

The speaking in perpetual hyperbole is comely in nothing but in love.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

Every man, who can speak at all, can speak elegantly and correctly if he pleases, by attending to the best authors and orators; and, indeed, I would advise those who do not speak elegantly, not to speak at all; for I am sure they will get more by their silence than by their speech.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Dec., 1749.

The manner of speaking is full as important as the matter, as more people have ears to be tickled, than understandings to judge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt.

New Testament: Colossians, iv, 6.

Though I be rude in speech.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 6.

Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act i, sc. 3, l. 81.

The music that can deepest reach,
And cure all ill, is cordial speech.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: *Considerations by
the Way*.

In chatter excellent, but unable quite to speak. (Ακαὶρ ἑπὶ φωνῇ, ἀδυνατῶντες λέγειν.)
EUFOLE, Fragments, No. 95.

He speaks one word nonsense and two that have nothing in them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2025.

Speak clearly, if you speak at all;
Carve every word before you let it fall.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 408.

[Lowering] knit her brows and stamped her angry foot.

To hear a Teacher tell a riddle a riddle.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 406.

1 The flowering moments of the mind
Drop half their petals in our speech.

O. W. HOLMES, To My Readers, St. 11.

2 His speech flowed from his tongue sweeter than honey. (Τὸ καὶ ἀπὸ γλώσσης ἡλιότερος ῥήματος ἢρ ἀπὸ ἡ.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. i, l. 245.

The poetry of speech.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto iv, st. 58.

The sweet music of speech.

COWPER, Verses: Alexander Selkirk.

3 The greatest things gain by being said simply;
they are spoiled by emphasis. But one must say little things nobly, because they are propped up by expression, tone and manner.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères, Pt. ii, No. 82.

To speak and to offend, with some people, are but one and the same thing.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Cœur.

4 One speaks little when vanity does not make one speak. (On parle peu quand la vanité ne fait pas parler.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 137.

It is never more difficult to speak well than when one is ashamed to be silent. (Il n'est jamais plus difficile de bien parler que quand on a honte de se faire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes, No. 556.

5 He will no more speak fast, than he will run, for fear his tongue should go before his wit.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Of Seneca's Epistles.

6 When we make ourselves understood, we always speak well, and all your fine diction serves no purpose. (Quand on se fait entendre, on parle toujours bien, Et tous vos beaux dictionnaires ne servent pas de rien.)

MOLIERE, Les Femmes Savantes, Act ii, sc. 6.

7 Nor have I readiness in speaking. (Nec mihi dicere promptum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses, Bk. xiii, l. 10.

8 Grant me the power of saying things
Too simple and too sweet for words.

COMPTON PARKER, The Angel in the House:
Bk. i, sec. 1, Prelude.

9 You are skilled in knowing what to say and what not to say. (Dicenda tacendave calles.)

PETRUS, Satires, Sat. iv, l. 5.

10 Speak after the manner of men.

New Testament: Romans, vi, 19.

11 His ready speech flowed fair and free,
In phrase of gentle courtesy;

Yet seemed that tone and gesture bland

Less used to sue than to command.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake, Canto i, st. 21.

12 An angry man speaks in an angry way, an excitable man in a flurried way, and an effeminate man in a style that is soft and unresisting. (Iracundi hominis iracunda oratio est, commoti nimis incitata, delicati tenera et fluxa.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium, Epist. civ, 20.

The sailor speaks of winds, the ploughman of oxen;

The soldier tells his wounds, the shepherd his sheep.

(Navita de ventis, de tauris narrat arator; Enumerat miles vulnera, pastor oves.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies, Bk. ii, eleg. 1, l. 43.

13 To speak much is one thing, to speak well is another. (Χαλεπὸν τό τ' εἰπεῖν πολλὰ καὶ τὰ καλὰ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Coloneus, l. 808.

14 His speech is a burning fire.

SWINBURNE, Atlantis in Calydon: Chorus.

15 He knew the most effective time for speaking. (Qui novit mollissima fandi tempora.)

VERGIL, Aeneid, Bk. iv, l. 293.

I had a thing to say,

But I will fit it with some better time.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 25.

It may be right; but you are I' the wrong

To speak before your time.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, Act v, sc.
1, l. 85.

16 Choice word and measured phrase, above the reach

Of ordinary men; a stately speech;

Such as grave Livers do in Scotland use.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Indefatigability.
St. 14.

Æschylus.

18 The habit of common and continuous speech is a symptom of mental deficiency.

BAGGOT, Literary Studies, Vol. I, p. 47

19 His speech was a fine sample, on the whole,
Of rhetoric, which the learn'd call "rigmorole"

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto i, st. 174.

In that manner vulgarly, but significantly, called rigmorole.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, i, 191, note.)

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6367.

4 I feel as stupid, from all you've said
As if a mill-wheel whirled in my head.

(Mir wird von alledem so dumm,
Als ging 'mir ein Mühlrad im Kopf herum.)
GÖTTE, Faust: Act I, Schulerscene.

5 Stop not, unthinking, every friend you meet
To spin your wordy fabric in the street;
While you are emptying your colloquial pack,
The fiend Lambago jumps upon his back.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 336.

6 He has a rage for saying something when there's nothing to be said.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, to Dr. Burney, referring to Warburton. (BOSWELL, Life, 1738.)

7 But as they hadn't no gret things to say,
An' sed 'em often, I come right away.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. II, Mason and Shidell.

8 They think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

New Testament: Matthew, vi. 7.

9 With patient inattention hear him prate.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Bellerophon. St. 4.

10 And 'tis remarkable that they Talk most who have the least to say.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto II, l. 345.

In general those who nothing have to say
Contrive to spend the longest time in doing it;
They turn and vary it in every way,
Flashing it, stewing it, mincing it, ragouting it.

J. R. LOWELL, An Oriental Apologue. St. 15.

11 What cracker is this same that deafs our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act II, sc. 1, l. 147.

12 Why hays I habbided?

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act III, sc. 2, l. 132.

13 She sits tormenting every guest,
Nor given her tongue one moment's rest,
In phrases batter'd, stale, and trite.

Which modern ladies call polite.

SWIFT, The Journal of a Modern Lady.

V.—Speech: With Discretion

14 The wise man, before he speaks, will consider well what he speaks, to whom he speaks, and where and when. (Sapiens, ut loquatur, multiprius considerat, quid dicat, aut cui dicat, quo in loco, et tempora.)

ST. AMBROSE, De Officiis Ministrorum. Bk. I, ch. 10, sec. 35.

Si sapiens fore vis, sex serva que tibi mando:
Quid dicas, et ubi, de quo, cui, quomodo, quando.
UNKNOWN, Six Things to be Observed. (Notes and Queries, 23 Dec., 1911, p. 516.)

If that thou wilt speak aright,
Six things thou must observe then:
What thou speakest, and of what wight,
Where, to whom, why, and when.

UNKNOWN, Whatever Thou Say, Advise Thee Well. (MS. Trinity College, Cambridge, c. 1530.)

If you your lips would keep from slips
Five things observe with care;
To whom you speak, of whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.
W. E. NORRIS, Thirby Hall, l. 315. Quoted.

If you your ears would keep from fears,
These things keep meekly hid:
Myself and me, or my and mine,
Or how I do or did.
W. E. NORRIS, Thirby Hall, l. 315. Quoted.

15 Discretion of speech is more than eloquence.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

And let him be sure to leave other men their turns to speak.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

16 You, having a large and fruitful mind, should not so much labour what to speak as to find what to leave unspoken. Rich soils are often to be weeded.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Coke, expostulating with him on his verbosity.

17 Speak not at all, in any wise, till you have somewhat to speak; care not for the reward of your speaking, but simply and with undivided mind for the truth of your speaking.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

There is endless merit in a man's knowing when to have done.

CARLYLE, Essays: Francis.

18 A wise man, then, sets hatch before the door;
And, whilst he may, doth square his speech with heed.

THOMAS DELONEY, Strange Histories, l. 70.

Think all you speak; but speak not all you think: Thoughts are your own; your words are so no more.

Where Wisdom steers, wind cannot make you sink: Lips never err, when she does keep the door.

⁷ But ye, keep ye on earth
Your lips from over-speech,
Loud words and longing are so little worth,
And the end is hard to reach.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

VI—Speech: To Conceal Thought

For Candid Speech, see Candor

⁸ He who does not make his words rather serve to conceal than discover the sense of his heart, deserves to have it pulled out like a traitor's, and strewn publicly to the rabble.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remarks, II, 25. (1759)

The true use of speech is not so much to express our wants as to conceal them.

A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 25.

It oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 117.

Speech was given to the ordinary sort of men whereby to communicate their mind, but to wise men whereby to conceal it.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermon, preached in Westminster Abbey, 30 April, 1676.

Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts. (La parole a été donnée à l'homme pour déguiser sa pensée.)

TALLEYRAND. (BARRÈRE, Talleyrand, vi. HAREL, Le Nain Jaune) Harel afterwards alleged that the mot was really his own, and that he had put it into Talleyrand's mouth.

When Harel wished to put a joke or witticism into circulation, he was in the habit of connecting it with some celebrated name, on the chance of reclaiming it if it took. Thus he assigned to Talleyrand, in the Nain Jaune, the phrase, "Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts."

FOURMIEUX, L'Esprit dans l'Histoire.

Men use thought only to justify their wrongdoing, and employ speech only to conceal their thoughts. (Ils ne se servent de la pensée que pour autoriser leurs injustices, et emploient les paroles que pour déguiser leurs pensées.)

VOLTAIRE, Dialogues: No xiv, Le Chapeau et la Poularde. (1766)

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers Ser ii, No. 3.

I shall make you an impromptu at my leisure. (Je vous ferai un impromptu à loisir.)

MOLIERE, Les Précieuses Ridicules. Act i, sc. 11, l. 124.

Ward has no heart, they say, but I deny it; He has a heart, and gets his speeches by it.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Impromptu Epitaph upon Lord Dudley, alluding to the story that Dudley carefully practised the speeches which he pretended were extempore.

Forgotten—like a maiden speech,
Which all men praise, but none remember.

WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRADO, To a Lady.

What is the short meaning of this long harangue? (Was ist der langen Rede kurzer Sinn?)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act i, sc. 2, l. 160.

Even the most timid man can deliver a bold speech. (Est enim oratio etiam timidissimis audax.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. xvi, sec. 6.

I would be loath to cast away my speech, for besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 184.

On the day of the dinner of the Oystermongers' Company, what a noble speech I thought of in the cab!

SPENSER, EDMUND

Old Spenser next, warm'd with poetic rage,
In ancient tales amus'd a barb'rous age.

Anonymous, The Greatest English Poets, l. 17.

The palmy past and the glittering grade,
Of Spenser's magical song.

—ROBERT BROWNING, Chaucer.

¹ Like Spenser ever in thy Faery Queene, Whose like (for deep conceit) was never seen:

Crown'd mayst thou be unto thy more renown.

(As King of Poets) with a Laurell Crown.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Remembrance of Some English Poets.

Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, *To His Friend, Master
R. J.* This couplet is also in The Passionate Pilgrim. St. 8.

² Discouraged, scorn'd, his writings vilified, Poorly—poor man—he liv'd; poorly—poor man—he died.

PHILIP FLETCHER, The Purple Island. Canto
iv, st. 19.

³ The nobility of the Spencers has been illustrated and enriched by the trophies of Marlborough, but I exhort them to consider the Faerie Queene as the most precious jewel of their coronet.

EDWARD GIBSON, Memoirs, p. 3.

⁴ A silver trumpet Spenser blows,
And, as its martial notes to silence flee,
From a virgin chorus flows

A hymn in praise of spotless Chastity.
'Tis still! Wild warblings from the Æolian lyre

Enchantment softly breathe, and tremblingly expire.

KRATZ, Ode to Apollo. St. 6.

⁵ The English Virgil.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 5.

⁶ Here nigh to Chaucer, Spenser, stands thy hearse,

Still nearer standst thou to him in thy verse.
Whilst thou didst live, lived English poetry;
Now thou art dead, it fears that it shall die.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Spenser. (CAMDEN, Reges Regine Nobles. 1606.)

SPIDER

⁷ There webs were spread of more than common size,
And half-starved spiders prey'd on half-starved flies.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Pamela, l. 327.

⁸ Much like a subtle spider, which doth sit
In middle of her web, which spreadeth wide:

If aught do touch the utmost thread of it,
She feels it instantly on every side.
See JOHN DAVIES, The Immortality of the Soul: Ser. 16, Fasting.

Or almost like a spider, who, confin'd
In her web's centre, shaketh with every wind,
Moves in an instant if the buzzing fly
Stirs but a string of her lawn canopy.

DU BARTAS, Devins Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 6. (Sylvester, tr.)

⁹ A spider sewed at night

Without a light

Upon an arc of white. . . .

His strategy

Was physiognomy.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 27.

The spider as an artist

Has never been employed. . . .

Neglected son of genius,

I take thee by the hand.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 95.

¹⁰ The spider lost her distaff, and is ever since forced to draw her thread through her tail.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4765.

¹¹ "Will you walk into my parlour?" said a Spider to a Fly;

"'Tis the prettiest little parlour that ever you did spy."

MARY HOWITT, The Spider and the Fly

¹² The spider's touch, how exquisitely fine,
Feels at each thread, and lives along the line.

- 10 It is a dangerous grieving of the spirit, when, instead of drawing ourselves to the spirit, we will labour to draw the Spirit to us.
RICHARD SIBBES, The Fountain Sealed.
The life of any one can by no means be changed after death; an evil life can in no wise be converted into a good life, or an infernal into an angelic life: because every spirit, from head to foot, is of the character of his love, and therefore, of his life; and to convert this life into its opposite, would be to destroy the spirit utterly.
SWEDENBORG, Heaven and Hell, p. 527.

12 Somewhere—in desolate wind-swept space—
In Twilight-land—in No-man's-land—
Two hurrying Shapes met face to face,
And bade each other stand.

"And who are you?" cried one a-gape,
Shuddering in the gloaming light.

"I know not," said the second Shape,
"I only died last night!"

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Identity.

13 We are spirits clad in veils;

All our deep communing fails

To remove the shadowy screen.

CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CRANCH, Gnosis.

14 We spirits have just natures
We had for all the world, when human creatures;

And, therefore, I, that was an actress here,
Play all my tricks in hell, a goblin there.

DRYDEN, Tyrannick Love: Epilogue.

15 Aërial spirits, by great Jove design'd
To be on earth the guardians of mankind:
Invisible to mortal eyes they go,
And mark our actions, good or bad, below:
The immortal spies with watchful care preside,

And thrice ten thousand round their charges
glide:

They can reward with glory or with gold,
A power they by Divine permission hold.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 164.

Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth
Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 677.

So from the world of spirits there descends
A bridle of light, connecting it with this,
O'er whose unsteady floor, that aways and bends,
Wander our thoughts above the dark abyss.
LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 10

1
Spirits when they please
Can either sex assume, or both; so soft
And uncompounded is their essence pure,
Not tied or manac'd with joint or limb,
Nor founded on the brittle strength of bones,
Like cumbrous flesh; but in what shape they choose,

Dilated or condens'd, bright or obscure,
Can execute their aerie purposes,
And works of love or enmity fulfil.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 423.

Spirits that live throughout
Vital in every part, not as frail man
In entrails, heart or head, liver or reins,
Cannot but by annihilating die;
Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound
Receive, no more than can the fluid air:
All heart they live, all head, all eye, all ear,
All intellect, all sense, and as they please,
They limb themselves, and colour, shape or size
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare.

REYNOLD HENKE, *Hymn for Seventh Sunday
after Trinity*.

The Spring's already at the gate
With looks my care beguiling;

The country round appears straight
A flower-garden smiling.

ELIZABETH BISHOP, New Spring.

I come, I come! ye have called me long.
I come o'er the mountains with light and song!
Ye may trace my step o'er the waking earth,
By the winds which tell of the violet's birth,
By the primrose-stars, in the shadowy grass,
By the green leaves opening as I pass.

Mute rapture at the simple thing
Of lilacs blooming in the rain.

THOMAS S. JONES, JR., Beyond.

Alas, for us no second spring,
Like mallows in the garden-bed.

ANDREW LANG, Trioleis after Moschus.

The lovely town was white with apple-blossoms,
And the great elms o'erhead
Dark shadows wove on their aerial looms,
Shot through with golden thread.

LONGFELLOW, Hawthorne. St. 2.

Came the Spring with all its splendor,
All its birds and all its blossoms,
All its flowers, and leaves, and grasses.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xxi, l. 109.

Then came the lovely spring with a rush of blossoms and music,
Flooding the earth with flowers, and the air with melodies vernal.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. III, The Theologian's Tale.

Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,

And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prologue.

The holy spirit of the Spring
Is working silently.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Songs of Spring Days. Pt. II.

This wind is called Zephyrus, whose mild
And fruitful birth gets the young Spring with child,

Filling her womb with such delicious heat,
As breeds the blooming rose and violet.

SHACKLETON MARSHALL, Capit and Psyche.

Wag the world how it will,
Leaves must be green in spring.

HENMAN MEXFELLS, Melrose Hall.

O Spring! I know thee. Seek for sweet surprise

In the young children's eyes.

But I have learnt the years, and know the yet
Leaf-folded violet.

ALICE MEYNELL, In Early Spring.

Spring rides no horses down the hill,
But come on foot, a goose-girl still.

And all the loveliest things there be

Come simply so, it seems to me.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, The Goose-Girl.

In those vernal seasons of the year, when the air is calm and pleasant, it were an injury and sullenness against Nature not to go out and see her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with heaven and earth.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

The Spring returns!
Triumphant through the wider-arched cope
She comes, she comes, unto her tyranny,
And at her coronation are set ope
The prisons of the mind, and man is free!

CHARLES LEONARD MOORE, The Spring Returns.

Sound, jocund strains; on pipe and viol sound,
Young voices sing;

Wreath the every door with snow-white voices
round,

For lo! 't is Spring!

Winter has passed with its sad funeral train,
And Love revives again.

LEWIS MORRIS, Life-Music.

Spring, the sweet Spring, is the pleasant year's king.

THOMAS NASH, Spring.

16
Men are the devil—they all bring woe.
In winter it's easy to say just "No"

Men are the devil, that's one sure thing,
But what are you going to do in spring?
MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Men Are the Devil.

A trap's a very useful thing;
Nature in our path sets Spring.
It is a trap to catch us two,
It is planned for me and you.
MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Traps.

1 All the veneration of Spring connects itself with love. . . . Even the frog and his mate have a new and gayer coat for this benign occasion.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 178.

2 Spring! and the buds against the sky;
Heart, forget that you saw
The little brown bird that fluttered by—
The bird with the wing of straw
CAROLINE GILTINAN, Spring.

3 In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding:
Sweet lovers love the spring
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 3, l. 20

4 Love, whose mouth is ever May.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,

5 It is the season now to go
About the country high and low,
Among the lilacs hand in hand,
And two by two in fairy land.
R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

Now the hedged meads renew
Rustic odour, smiling hue,
And the clean air shines and twinkles as the world goes wheeling through;
And my heart springs up anew,
Bright and confident and true,
And my old love comes to meet me in the dawning and the dew.
R. L. STEVENSON, My Old Love.

6 In the spring a livelier iris changes on the burnished dove;
In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 19.

7 When Spring is old, and dewy winds
Blow from the south, with odors sweet,
I see my love in shadowy groves,
Speed down dark aisles on shining feet.
MAURICE THOMPSON, Adelante's Race.

8 Love knows no winter; no, no! It is, and remains the sign of spring.

(Die Liebe wintert nicht; Nein, nein! Ist und bleibt Frühlings-Schein.)
LUDWIG TIICK, Herbstlied.

9 This is the time when bit by bit
The days begin to lengthen sweet
And every minute gained is joy—
And love stirs in the heart of a boy.
KATHERINE TYNAN, Turn o' the Year.

10 The flowers that bloom in the spring, Tra la,
Have nothing to do with the case.

20 Come, children, let us shut up the box and the puppets, for our play is played out.
TRACKER, Fanny Fob. Conclusion.

II—Stage: Its Influence

Plays make mankind no better; and no worse.
BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 370.

A moral expression at the close of a lewd play is much like a pious expression in the mouth of a dying man. . . . The doctor comes too late for the disease and the antidote is much too weak for the poison.

JACKIE COLLIER, The Immorality of the Rag-Bush Stage.

To me it seems as if when God conceived the world, that was Poetry; He formed it, and that was Sculpture; He colored it, and that was Painting; He peopled it with living beings, and that was the grand, divine, eternal Drama.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN. (STEDMANS, Charlotte Cushman)

Keen satire is the business of the stage.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beasts' Stratagem: Prologue, l. 2.

There is nothing but heathenism to be learned from plays.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. III, ch. 11.

Life's moving pictures, well-wrought plays,
To others' grief attention raise.
Here, while the tragic fictions glow,
We borrow joy by pitying woe;
There gaily comic scenes delight,
And hold true mirrors to our sight.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 131.

Behind the curtain's mystic fold
The glowing future lies unrolled.

BRET HARTE, Address: Opening of the California Theatre, San Francisco, 19 Jan., 1870

In all ages the drama, through its portrayal of the acting and suffering spirit of man, has been more closely allied than any other art to his deeper thoughts concerning his nature and his destiny.

LUDWIG LEWISON, The Modern Drama, p. 1.

It hath evermore been the notorious badge of prostituted strumpets and the lewdest Harlots, to ramble abroad to Plays, to Play-houses; whether no hotter, chaste or sober Girls or Women; but only branded Whores and infamous Adulteresses, did usually resort in ancient times.

WILLIAM PETER, Histrio-Mastix.

That popular stage-plays are sinful, heathenish, lewd, vulgar, sporting, and most pernicious Corruptions, condemned in all ages, as indecent and obscene, is a Quadruple Assumption, to the misleading and misleading of men.

WILLIAM PETER, Histrio-Mastix.

I have heard

That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaimed their iniquities.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo, Act II, sc. 2, l. 617.

A woman that hath made away her husband,
And sitting to behold a tragedy,
At Lynn, a town in Norfolk,
Acted by players travelling that way—
Wherein a woman that had murder'd hers
Was ever haunted by her husband's ghost;
The passion written by a feeling hand,
And acted by a good tragedian,—
She was so moved with the sight thereof
As she cried out, "The play was made by her,"
And openly confess'd her husband's murder.

UNKNOWN, A Warning for Fair Women. (An Elizabethan drama sometimes ascribed to Shakespeare)

III—Stage: Plays Good and Bad

The growing drama has outgrown such toys
Of simulated stature, face, and speech:
It also peradventure may outgrow
The simulation of the painted scene,
And take for a worthier stage the soul itself,
Its shifting fancies and celestial lights,
With all its grand orchestral silences
To keep the pauses of its rhythmic sounds.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 335.

We have the challenge of the mighty line—
God grant us grace to give the countersign.
JOHN DRINKWATER, Lance for the Opening of Birmingham Repertory Theatre.

There is a mode in plays as well as clothes.
DRYDEN, Royal Ladies. Prologue.

Prologues precede the piece in mournful verse,
As undertakers walk before the bier.
DAVID GARRICK, The Apprentice: Prologue.

Prologues, like compliments, are loss of time;
Th' penning bows and making legs in rhyme.
GARRICK, Prologue to Cress's Virgin.

If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It: Epilogue, l. 3.

The observance or violation of the three unities of time, place, and action.

HAZLITT, Table Talk. Essay 21

The unities, sir [said Mr. Curdie], are a completeness—a kind of a universal devotedness with regard to place and time—a sort of a general oneness. . . . I take those to be the dramatic unities, so far as I have been enabled to bestow attention upon them.

DEKKE, Nickelby. Ch. 24.

Does a man have a fresh character, have it kept to the end as it was in the beginning, consistent with itself. (Personam formare novam, servetur ad imum, qualis ad incepto processerit, et sibi constet.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 126. Of play-writing. Nor let Medea slaughter her children in the sight of the audience. (Nec pueros coram populo Medea trucidet.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 185.

The last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respice Finem. (Emblems. Bk. i, No. 15.) See 1125:5.

The first Act's doubtful, but we say It is the last commends the Play.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Plaudite.

Act first, this Earth, a stage so gloom'd with woe You all but sicken at the shifting scenes.

And yet be patient. Our Playwright may show In some fifth act what this wild Drama means. TENNYSON, The Play.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE, see under WORLD.

2 Thesens: Is there no play To ease the anguish of a torturing hour? . . . Philostrate: A play there is, my lord, some ten words long, Which is as brief as I have known a play;

But by ten words, my lord, it is too long, Which makes it tedious; for in all the play There is not one word apt, one player fitted.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 61.

3 Through all the drama—whether damn'd or not—

Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot. R. B. SHERIDAN, The Rivals: Epilogue, l. 5.

4 Lo, where the Stage, the poor, degraded Stage, Holds its warped mirror to a gaping age!

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity, l. 127.

5 What are the plays of to-day? There're either so chock-full of intellect that they send you to sleep,—or they reek of sentiment till you yearn for the smell of a cabbage.

ALFRED SOTRO, The Man in the Stalls.

IV—Stage: Comedy and Tragedy

6 A perfect Tragedy is the noblest production of human nature.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 39.

7 Your true right tragedy is enacted on the stage of a man's soul, and with the man's reason as lone auditor.

BRANCH CABELL, Crown of the East, p. 236.

8 A talent, for comedy equal to that of the Greeks. (Coinita ut aequale virtus polleret homore Comœdici.)

GARTH BURNES, referring to Terence. (SUK-SOTREH, Lower: Terence. Sec. 5.)

9 And Tragedy should blush as much to stoop To the low mimic follies of a farce, As a grave matron would to dance with girls. HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 212. (Dillon, tr.)

10 You know the rites to jocund Flora dear, The festive quips and licence of the rout; Why on the scene, stern Cato, enter here? Did you then enter only to go out? (Nosses jocose dulce cum sacrum Floræ Festosque lusus et licentiam volgi. Cur in theatrum, Cato severe, venisti? An ideo tantum veneras, ut exires?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams: Bk. i, Introduction. The reference is to a story told by Valerius Maximus (ii, x, 8) to the effect that at the Floralia in 55 B. C., Cato left the theatre on finding that his presence checked the licence of the actors.

11 The theatre is no place for painful speculation; it is a place for diverting representation. H. L. MACKENZIE, Prejudices Ser. 1, p. 201.

12 Attic tragedies of stateliest and most regal argument.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

13 A long, exact, and serious comedy; In ev'ry scene some moral let it teach, And, if it can, at once both please and preach. POPE, Epistle to Miss Bount, l. 22.

What dear delight to Britons farce affords! Ever the taste of mobs, but now of lords. POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles Bk. ii, epist. 1, l. 310.

A comedy is often only a farce—by a deceased dramatist.

ARTHUR WING PINERO.

14 As in comedies, where all the characters find out everything. (Ut in comœdiis Omnia omnes tibi resciscunt.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 866. (Act v, sc. 4.)

Pat he comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 147.

V—Stage: The Audience

15 "Do you come to the play without knowing what it is?" "O, yes, Sir, yes, very frequently. I have no time to read play-bills. One merely comes to meet one's friends, and show that one's alive."

FANNY BURNES, Evelina. Letter 20.

16 Some very foolish influence rules the pit, Not always kind to sense, or just to wit.

DRYDEN, Epistles: To Mr. Southam, l. 3.

There still remains, to mortify a wit, The many-headed monster of the pit.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, Bk. ii, epist. 1, l. 304.

1 Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looker:
Plays are like suppers: poets are the cooks.
The founder's you: the table is this place:
The carvers we: the prologue is the grace.
Each act, a course; each scene, a different dish

FAUCONER, The Inconstant: Prologue, l. 1.

When first upon the stage a play appears
Tis not the multitude a poet fears,
Who, from example, praise or damn by rote,
And give their censure as some members vote.
But if in the expecting box or pit
The wretch discerns one true, substantial wit,
Tow'rd him his doubtful sight he'll still direct,
Whose very looks can all his faults detect.

ANNE FINCH, COUNTESS OF WINCHILSEA, Arismenes: Prologue, l. 1

2 The stage but echoes back the public voice;
The drama's laws, the drama's patrons give.
For we that live to please must please to live.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue at the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre, l. 52.

3 Would you were come to hear, not see a play. . . .

The maker . . . he'd have you wise.
Much rather by your ears than by your eyes.
BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Prologue.

4 I don't think the audience noticed it.

GEORGE KELLY, The Torch-Bearers Act II.

5 Fit audience find, though few.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 31.

6 'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here. some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; . . . others to hear the city

Abused extremely, and to cry "That's witty!"

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Epilogue, l. 1.

7 In other things the knowing artist may
Judge better than the people; but a play,
(Made for delight, and for no other use)
If you approve it not, has no excuse

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Book of Orm: First Song.

11 Flowers of the sky! ye, too, to age must yield,
Frail as your silken sisters of the field!

BRASIMUS DARWIN, Economy of Vegetation. Canto iv.

Silently one by one, in the infinite meadows of heaven,

Blossomed the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of the angels.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 3.

Stars are the daisies that begem

The blue fields of the sky,

Beheld by all and everywhere,

Bright prototypes on high.

DAVID MACBETH MOIR, The Daisy. St. 5.

Wide are the meadows of night

And daisies are shining there,

Tossing their lovely dew,

Lustrous and fair;

And through these sweet fields go,

Wanderers amid the stars—

BYRANT, Hymn to the North Star, l. 1

The number is certainly the cause. The apparent disorder augments the grandeur, for the appearance of care is highly contrary to our idea of magnificence. Besides, the stars lie in such apparent confusion, as makes it impossible on ordinary occasions to reckon them. This gives them the advantage of a sort of infinity.

fate

Of men and empires,—'tis to be forgiven,

That in our aspirations to be great,

Our destinies o'erleap their mortal state,

And claim a kindred with you; for ye are

A beauty and a mystery, and create

In us such love and reverence from afar,

That fortune, fame, power, life, have named themselves a star.

BROWN, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 88.

So may we read, and little find them cold:

Not frosty lamps illumining dead space,

Not distant allens, not senseless Powers.

The fire is in them whereof we are born;

The music of their motion may be ours.

GEORGE MURPHY, Meditation under Stars, 3.

The stars rule men: but God rules the stars.

(Astra regunt homines, sed regit astra Deus.)

CHALCANT, Chironomus Macroscopus. Pref.
99. (1661)

Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Melades, or loose the bands of Orion?

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 41.

Canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 42.

The stars in their courses fought against Sisera.

Old Testament: Judges, v, 20.

Thus some, who have the stars survey'd,
Are ignorantly led

To think those glorious lamps were made
To light Tam Fool to bed.

NICHOLAS ROWE, On a Fine Woman Who Had a Dull Husband

This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and traitors, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion whoremaster of man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 128.

When Princes meet, astrologers may mark it
An ominous conjunction, full of boding,
Like that of Mars with Saturn.

SCOTT, Quantum Dura Ch. 31. Quoted as from "An old play."

Eat, speak, and move, under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 56

The stars above us govern our conditions.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 35.

A breath thou art,
Serve to all the keyey influences.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 9.

There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 105.

A man gazing at the stars is proverbially at the mercy of the puddles on the road.

ters*.

But who can count the stars of heaven?
Who sing their influence on this lower world?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 528.

V—Stars: Morning and Evening

Star that bringest home the bee,

And sett'st the weary labourer free!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song to the Evening Star.

The morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7.

There is no light in earth or heaven

But the cold light of stars;

And the first watch of night is given

To the red planet Mars.

LOWELL, The Light of Stars. St. 2.

The star that bids the shepherd fold,

Now the top of Heav'n doth hold.

MILTON, Comus, l. 93.

Oft till the star that rose, at ev'ning bright, Toward Heav'n's descent had slop'd his westering wheel.

sc. 2, l. 219.

That full star that ushers in the even.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxii.

Many a night from yonder ivied casement,

ere I went to rest,

Did I look on great Orion sloping slowly to the west.

TENNISON, Locksley Hall, l. 7.

Many a night I saw the Pleiads, rising thro'

the meadow shade,

Gleeter like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid.

TENNISON, Locksley Hall, l. 9.

VI—Stars: "My Star"

What matter to me if their star is a world?

Mine has opposed its soul to me; therefore I love it.

ROBERT BROWNING, My Star.

My star, God's glow-worm!

ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.

I await my star. (J'attends mon astre.)

CARLO ALBERTO, King of Sardinia. Adopted as the motto of his house, the House of Savoy.

When Victor Emmanuel opened the first parliament in Rome, Nov., 1871, the common people peered all day into an unclouded sky searching for the Star of Savoy.

"If thou," he answered, "follow but thy star,

Thou canst not miss at last a glorious haven."

(Ed egli a me: "Se tu segui tua stella,

Non puoi fallire al glorioso porto."

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iv, l. 55. (Cary, tr.)

Courage, brother! do not stumble,

Though thy path be dark as night;

There's a star to guide the humble,

Trust in God and do the Right.

NORMAN MACLEOD, Trust in God.

A man must stoop sometimes to his star, but he must never lie down to it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 238.

My good stars, that were my former guides,

Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires

Into the abyss of hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,

sc. 13, l. 145.

What different lots our stars accord!

This babe to be hail'd and woo'd as a Lord!

And that to be shunned like a leper!

One, to the world's wine, honey, and corn,

Another, like Colchester native, born

To its vinegar, only, and pepper.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Birth,

l. 93.

Our jovial star reign'd at his birth.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 105.

I find my zenith doth depend upon

A most auspicious star, whose influence

If now I court not but omit, my fortunes

Will ever after droop.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 181.

Grapples with his evil star.

TENNISON, In Memoriam. Sec. lxxv.

VII—Stars and Love

Surely the stars are images of love.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Garden and Bower by the Sea.

When stars are in the quiet skies,

Then most I pine for thee;

Send on me then thy tender eyes,

As stars look on the sea.

BELLEVILLE-LYNN, When Stars Are in the Quiet Skies.

¹ The stars of the night
Will lend thee their light,
Like tapers clear without number.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece to Julia.

² When sunset flows into golden glows,
And the breath of the night is new,
Love finds afar eve's eager star—
That is my thought of you.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, Star Song.

³ Stars of the summer night!
Far in yon azure deeps

Hide, hide your golden light!
She sleeps! My lady sleeps!

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student: Serenade.
Act i, sc. 3.

⁴ When twilight dews are falling soft
Upon the rosy sea, love,
I watch the star, whose beam so oft
Has lighted me to thee, love.

THOMAS MOORE, When Twilight Dews.

⁵ Thou lookest on the stars, my Star? Would I were heaven, to look on thee with many eyes!
(Ἀστέρης εἰσαθρεῖς δατήρ ἐμὸν, εἰθε γυναικὴν Οὐρανός, ὡς πολλοὶς ὀφθαλμοῖς εἰς σὲ βλέπω.)

PLATO, (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 669.)

Or soar aloft to be the Spangled Skies
And gaze upon her with a thousand eyes!

S. T. COLERIDGE, *Loves: On an Autumnal
Evening*, l. 69.

O that my spirit were yon heaven of night,
Which gazes on thee with its thousand eyes.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto ix, st. 36.

⁶ Her blue eyes sought the west afar,
For lovers love the western star.

iii, st. 24.

VIII—Stars and Science

⁷ The starry Galileo, with his woes.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 54.

⁸ Oh never star
Was lost here but it rose afar.
ROBERT BROWNING, Waring. Pt. ii.

No star is ever lost we once have seen,
We always may be what we might have been.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Legend of Provence.

And like a fiery planet mount and burn.
N. P. WILLIS, Parrhasius.

⁹ Like the lost pleiad seen no more below.
BYRON, Beppo. St. 14.

Why, who shall talk of thrones, of sceptres given?

Bowed be our hearts to thought of what we are,
When from its height afar

A world sinks thus—and yon majestic heaven

Shines not the less for that one vanished star!
FELICIA DOROTHY HEMANS, The Lost Pleiad.

The line from Byron quoted above is used as a motto for this poem.

All for Love, or the Last Pleiad.

STIRLING COYNE. Title of play, produced in London, 16 Jan., 1838.

¹⁰ A wise man,
Watching the stars pass across the sky,
Remarked:

In the upper air the fireflies move more slowly.

AMY LOWELL, Meditation.

¹¹ Around the ancient track marched, rank on rank,
The army of unalterable law.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Lucifer in Starlight.

The stars of heaven are free because
In amplitude of liberty

Their joy is to obey the laws.

WILLIAM WATSON, *The Things That Are
More Excellent*. St. 4.

¹² At night astronomers agree.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Philis's Age. St. 3.

Devotion! Daughter of astronomy!

An undevout astronomer is mad.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 770.

¹⁴ These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights
That give a name to every fixed star
Have no more profit of their shining nights
Than those that walk and know not what they are.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 88.

STATE

See also Government, Nation

¹⁵ Not stones, nor timber, nor the art of building constitute a state; but wherever men are who know how to defend themselves, there is a city and a fortress.

ALCÆUS, Ode. Fragment. (ARISTIDES, Orations.
Vol. ii.) Only a single line remains of the ode, of which Aristides gives this summary:
Fighting men are the city's walls.

What constitutes a State?

Not high-crown'd battlement or labour'd mound,
Thick wall or moated gate;
Not cities proud with spires and turrets
crown'd;

No:—men, high-minded men, . . .

Men who their duties know,

But know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain . . .

These constitute a State.

States, as great engines, move slowly.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

A thousand years scarce serve to form a State;
An hour may lay it in the dust.

Byron, Childs Harold. Canto II, st. 24.

Ah me! what mighty perils wait
The man who meddles with a State
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Duckist. Bk. III, st. 1.

Better one suffer, than a nation grieve.
Dryden, Abraham and Achitophel Pt. I, l. 416.

But what's one woman's fortune more or less
Bends the schemes of kings!
THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts Part II, vi, 3.

It was only one life. What is one life in the affairs of a state?

BENITO MUSSOLINI. (GENERAL SMEDLEY E. BUTLER, Address, before the Contemporary Club, Phila., 19 Jan., 1931.) The Navy Department ordered General Butler court-martialed for making this speech, in which he accused Mussolini of not stopping when his automobile ran down a child, but the order was afterwards countermanded. Mussolini denied that such an incident had ever occurred.

I heard a shriek, . . . a shapeless little form lying in the road back of us. "Look, Your Excellency!" I cried "Never look back, my friend, always look forward," he [Mussolini] answered without turning, and we roared ahead.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR., Farewell to Fifth Avenue, p. 163.

To educate the wise man, the State exists; and with the appearance of the wise man, the State expires.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

The men are ripe of Saxon kind
To build an equal state—
To take the statute from the mind,
And make of duty fate.
RALPH WALDO KRAMERSON, Ode.

A State is never greater than when all its superfluous hands are employed in the service of the public.

ANDREW MARVELL, The First Anniversary.

States are not made, nor patched, they grow;
Grow slow through centuries of pain,
And grow correctly in the main,
But only grow by certain laws
Of certain bits in certain jaws.
MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 60.

The worth of a State in the long run is the worth of the individuals composing it.
JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty Ch. 5.

The state is the association of men, and not men themselves; the citizen may perish, and the man remain.

MONTEQUIVU, Spirit of the Laws Bk. x, ch. 3.

The State and the family are for ever at war.
GEORGE MOORE, The Bending of the Bough. Act I.

State, but a golden prison, to live in,
And torture free-born minds.

For as, of all the ways of life, but one—
The path of duty—leads to happiness;
So in their duty States must find at length
Their welfare, and their safety, and their strength.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Carmen Napulæ. St. 65.

Chiefs are mortal, the commonwealth is eternal. (Principes mortales, rempublicam eternam.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. III, cap. 6.

Individuals pass like shadows; but the commonwealth is fixed and eternal.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

STATESMAN

1 It is strange so great a statesman should
Be so sublime a poet.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 2.

2 A disposition to preserve, and an ability to improve, taken together, would be my standard of a statesman

EDMOND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

The three ends which a statesman ought to propose to himself in the government of a nation, are—1. Security to possessors, 2. Facility to acquirers; and 3. Hope to all

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 25 June, 1831.

3 Who's in or out, who moves this grand machine,

Nor stirs my curiosity nor spleen:
Secrets of state no more I wish to know
Than secret movements of a puppet-show;
Let but the puppets move, I've my desire,
Unseen the hand which guides the master-wire.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 257.

4 Most statesmen have long noses, which is very lucky because most of them cannot see

And a good pension gives them present ease:
That's the specific makes them all content
With any king and any government.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman:
Introduction

7 The world is wearied of statesmen whom democracy has degraded into politicians.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 17.

A statesman makes the occasion, but the occasion makes the politician.

G. S. HILLARD, Life and Services of Daniel Webster

A statesman is a successful politician who is dead.

THOMAS B. REED (LOOZE, The Democracy of the Constitution, p. 191.) Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, in a magazine article, told the story of the editor who thereupon telegraphed Reed, "Why don't you die and become a statesman?" To which Reed wired back, "No; fame is the last infirmity of a noble mind."

8 His life has been one great Appropriation Clause. He is a bungler of others' intellects.

... There is no statesman who has committed political petty larceny on so great a scale.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 15 May, 1846, referring to Sir Robert Peel

9 Art thou a statesman,
And canst not be a hypocrite? Impossible!
Do not distrust thy virtues.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act ii, sc. 1.

10 It is the duty of a minister to stand like a wall of adamant between the people and the sovereign.

GLADSTONE, Speech, at Garston, 14 Nov., 1868.

11 There is one statesman of the present day of whom I always say that he would have escaped making the blunders that he has made if he had only ridden more in omnibuses

STRAWBERRY

13 Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did.

DR. WILLIAM BUTLER, referring to the strawberry. (Thomas Fuller, Worthies of England: Suffolk, calls Butler the "Æsculapius of our age." Quoted in Walton's Compleat Angler, 2nd edition, pt. i, ch. 5.) See 672:6.

One of the chiefest doctors of England was wont to say that God could have made, but God never did make, a better berry.

America*, p. 98. (1643)

14 Strawberries lose their flavor in garden beds.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

15 The strawberry grows underneath the nettle
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1, l. 60.

Roses and violets are ever the sweeter and more odoriferous that grow near unto garlic and onions.

3 We acquire the strength we have overcome.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

It is as easy for the strong man to be strong, as it is for the weak to be weak.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

4 Success to the strongest, who are always, at last, the wisest and best.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

Not two strong men th' enormous weight could raise,

Such men as live in these degenerate days.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 371; bk. xii, l. 539 (Pope, tr.)

5 It is not strength, but art, obtains the prize, And to be swift is less than to be wise

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 383. (Pope, tr.)

Brute strength bereft of reason falls by its own weight. (Vis consilii expers male ruina.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 65.

'Tis slight, not strength, that gives the greatest lift.

MARSHTON, Michelinus Ferox. Act iv, sc. 1.

What is strength without a double share Of wisdom? vast, unwieldy, burdensome,

Proudly secure, yet fable to fall

By weakest subtleties, not made to rule,

But to subserve where wisdom bears command.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 53.

6 Their strength is to sit still.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 7.

7 They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 31.

8 Only be thou strong and very courageous.

Old Testament: Joshua, i, 7.

9 But noble souls, through dust and heat, Rise from disaster and defeat

The stronger.

10 Thy words smell of the apron.

ANTHOONY I, to Aristodemus, supposed to be a cook's son, when the latter advised him to moderate his gifts and expenses. (PLUTARCH, Apophthegms.)

11 Knowledge . . . will smell of the lamp.

C. C. COLTON, Laces: Preface. (1840)

12 This little volume of mine smelleth of the oil

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, Bk. II, No.
21.

13 A work not smelling of the lamp.

BEN JOSSON, The Staple of News: Prologus.

14 They smell of the lamp. (ἔσθλ' οὐκ ἔσθλ'.)

PYTHEAS, referring to the orations of Demosthenes, and alluding to the underground cave which the philosopher used as a study, and which was lighted only by a lamp. Demosthenes retorted, "Yes, but your lamp and mine, my friend, do not witness the same labor." (PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes: Sec. 8.) In his Life of Timoleon, Plutarch applies the expression to unfinished paintings, as well as to labored writing. The Latin proverb is, "Lucernam olet."

The saying of Pytheas is common and much spoken of, that the orations of Demosthenes smelled all of the candle, for that the same did in the night season write and record such things as he had to say to the people in the day time.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 379.) 1542.

15 A man who thinks much of his words as he writes them will generally leave behind him work that smells of oil.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Autobiography, Ch. 10.

III—Study: Its Virtues

16 Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies

Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; moral, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

The faithful study of the liberal arts humanizes character. (Ingenuus deducit fideliter artes Emollit mores.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto, Bk. II, epist. 9, l. 47.

17 Hiving wisdom with each studious year.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto III, st. 107.

18 We spent them not in toys, in lusts, or wine,
But search of deep philosophy,
Wit, eloquence, and poetry;
Arts which I lov'd, for they, my friend, were thine.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, On the Death of Mr. William Harvey.

19 Beholding the bright countenance of truth in the quiet and still air of delightful studies

MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Introduction, Bk. II.

1 Common studies, pursued in the same spirit, in all civilised countries, form, beyond the restrictions of diverse and often hostile nationalities, a great country which no war profanes, no conqueror menaces.

GASTON PARIS, Address, Collège de France, 1870.

2 For sure no minutes bring us more content,
Than those in pleasing, useful studies spent.
JOHN POMFRET, The Choice, l. 31.

3 What is the end of study? let me know.
Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?

Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 55.

Talk logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk;
Music and poetry use to quicken you;
The mathematics and the metaphysics
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you;

No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en;
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 34.

4 One of the best methods of rendering study agreeable is to live with able men, and to suffer all those pangs of inferiority which the want of knowledge always inflicts.

IV—Study: Its Faults

6 To spend too much time in studies is sloth.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

7 Who studies ancient laws and rites,
Tongues, arts and arms, and history,
Must drudge, like Selden, days and nights,
And in the endless labour die.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Who Strives to Mount Parnassus' Hill.

8 Much study had made him very lean,
And pale, and leaden-eyed.
HOOD, The Dream of Eugene Aram, l. 29.

9 We learn our lessons not for life, but for the lecture-room. (Non vitæ sed scholæ decemur.)

SÆCULA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. cvi, l. 12.
The studious class are their own victims; they are thin and pale, their feet are cold, their hands are hot, the night is without sleep, the day a fear of interruption,—pallor, squalor, hunger, and egotism.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

10 Study is like the heaven's glorious sun
That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:

Small have continual plodders ever won
Save base authority from others' books.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 84.

So study evermore is overshot:
While it doth study to have what it would
It doth forget to do the thing it should,
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
'Tis won as towns with fire, so won, so lost.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 143.

19 The style is the man himself. (Le style est l'homme même.)

BURTON, *Discourse, at reception into French
Academy*, 1753.

The style is the man; and some will add that, thus unsupported, it does not amount to much of a man. It is a sort of fighting and profane parody of the Old Testament.

G. K. Chesterton, The Victorian Age in Literature, p. 185. Referring to Swinburne.

It is most true, stylus virum arguit,—our style betrays us.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Anatomy of Melancholy: Demophris to the Reader.

Form is the Golden Vase wherein Thought, that fleeting essence, is preserved to Posterity.

ARISTOTLE FRANK, (COURNAY, Modern Plutarch, p. 29.)

What is called style in writing or speaking is formed very early in life, while the imagination is warm and impressions are permanent.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 185.

Style! style! why, all writers will tell you that it is the very thing which can least of all be changed. A man's style is nearly as much a part of him as his physiognomy, his figure, the throbbing of his pulse,—in short, as any part of his being is at least subjected to the action of the will.

Your language is that of the toga, skilled in clever phrasing, rounded but not full-mouthed. (Verba togæ sequuntur iunctura calidius acri, Ore teres modico.)

PETRUS, Satyræ. Sat. v, l. 14. That is, the language of the cultivated class.

1 The chief virtue of a style is perspicuity, and nothing so vicious in it as to need an interpreter. Words borrowed of antiquity do lend a kind of majesty to style, and are not without their delight sometimes. For they have the authority of years, and out of their intermission do win themselves a kind of grace-like newness. But the eldest of the present, and newest of the past language, is the best.

VOLTAIRE, L'Enfant Prodigue: Preface.

10 That graceful manner of thinking in Virgil seems to me to be more than style, if I do not refine too much, and I admire, I confess, Mr. Addison's phrase, that Virgil "loosed about his dung with an air of majesty."

WALPOLE, Letter to Pinkerton, 26 June, 1785.

III—Style: Bad Style

11 That's not good language that all understand not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculo Prudentum.

That must be fine, for I understand nothing of it. (Où, ça est si beau, que je n'y entends goutte.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act. II, sc. 4.

12 We say it is a fleshy style, when there is much periphrasis and circuit of words; and when, with more than enough, it grows fat and corpulent; arvina orationis, full of suet and tal-low.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Carnosa.

The fleshy gentlemen (Swinburne, Baudelaire and Rossetti) have bound themselves by solemn league and covenant to extol fleshiness as the distinct and supreme end of poetic and pictorial art.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fleshy School of Poetry.

13 The gloomy companions of a disturbed imagination; the melancholy madness of poetry, without the inspiration.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 7, 3 March, 1769.

14 It frequently happens that where the second line is sublime, the third, in which he meant to rise still higher, is perfect bombast.

LONGINUS, On the Sublime Sec. 3. Referring to Lucan's style.

That passage is what I call the sublime dashed to pieces by cutting too close with the fiery four-in-hand round the corner of nonsense.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk 20 Jan., 1834.

15 Ornate rhetoric taught out of the rule of Plato.

MILTON, Treatise of Education.

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise, Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation, Figures pedantic; these summer-flies Have blown me full of maggot ostentation.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 407.

Flowers of rhetoric, in sermons and serious discourses, are like the blue and red flowers in corn, pleasing to them who come only for amusement, but prejudicial to him who would reap the profit.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

The flowery style is not unsuitable to public speeches or addresses, which amount only to compliment. The lighter beauties are in their place when there is nothing more solid to say; but the flowery style ought to be banished from a pleading, a sermon, or a didactic work.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Style.

Some by old words to fame have made pretence,

Ancients in phrase, mere moderns in their sense;

Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style,
Amaze the unlearn'd, and make the learned smile.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. II, l. 124.

In a style, to be sure, of remarkable fullness,
But which nobody reads on account of its dullness.

J. G. Saxe, Pyramus and Thisbe.

It is no less degenerate to use no words except those which are striking, high-sounding, and poetical, avoiding what is familiar and usual. (Quam nolle nisi splendidis uti ac sonantibus et poeticis, necessaria atque in usu poetica vitare.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. cxiv, 14.

It begins to hunt for novelties in speech, summoning and displaying obsolete and old fashioned words, or coloring and misshaping unknown words.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. cxiv, 10.

With others it is not so much an arrangement of words, as it is a setting to music, so wheedling and soft is their gliding style.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. cxiv, 16.

Base is the style and matter mean withal.

SPEAR, Mother Hubbard's Tale, l. 44.

His style is chaos illumined by flashes of lightning. As a writer, he has mastered everything except language.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. Referring to George Meredith.

SUCCESS

I—Success: Definitions

Have little care that Life is brief,
And less that Art is long.

Success is in the silences

Though Fame is in the song.

BLESS CARMAN, Songs from Vagabondia: Essay.

In all things, success depends upon previous preparation, and without such preparation there is sure to be failure.

CONFUCIUS, Ancients. (Bacon, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.)

Success is the child of Audacity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Iskander. Ch. 4.

The secret of success is constancy to purpose.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 24 June, 1870.

The things you must scramble and elbow for are not worth having; not one of them. They are the swill of life, my son; leave them to swine.

E. S. MARTIN, A Father to His Freshman Son.

There is only one success—to be able to spend your life in your own way.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 85.

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much.

MRS. A. J. STANLEY, What Constitutes Success.

Only he is successful in his business who makes that pursuit which affords him the highest pleasure sustain him.

H. D. THORAU, Journal, 10 Jan., 1851.

Success, a sort of suicide, is ruin'd by success.

YOUNG, Resignation. Pt. II, l. 299.

Success shall be in thy courses tall,
Success in thyself, which is best of all,
Success in thy hand, success in thy foot,
In struggle with man, in battle with brute.

SVEND VONVED. Ancient Norse ballad.

II—Success: Apothegms

'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But we'll do more, Sempronius; we'll deserve it

ADDISON, Cato. Act I, sc. 2.

But though the place I never gain,

Herein lies comfort for my pain:

I will be worthy of it.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, I Will be Worthy of It.

Success in men's eyes is God and more than God. (Τὸ ὁ θεὸς αὐτῶν, τὸ δὲ ἐν ἁπλοῦς θεὸς καὶ θεοῦ πλεον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Chæphoroi, l. 59.

I have found it! I have found it! (Eureka! Eureka!)

ARCHIMEDES. (VITRUVIUS, De Architectura, ix, 215.)

When the idea flashed across his mind, the philosopher sprang out of the bath, exclaiming, "Eureka! eureka!" and without waiting to dress himself, ran home to try the experiment.

VITRUVIUS, of Archimedes, who discovered a method of testing the purity of Hiero's crown, while in the bath.

Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is a last-year's nest from which the birds have flown.

III—Success: How It Is Won

6 Those things which are not practicable are not desirable. There is nothing in the world really beneficial that does not lie within the reach of an informed understanding and a well-directed pursuit.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on the Plan for Economical Reform, 11 Feb., 1780.

7 Presence of mind and courage in distress Are more than armies to procure success.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zeb. Act. I.

8 The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 11.

Not to the swift, the race:

Not to the strong, the fight:

Not to the righteous, perfect grace:

Not to the wise, the right.

But often faltering feet

Come surest to the goal;

And they who walk in darkness meet

The sunrise of the soul.

11 If you can dream—and not make dreams your master;

If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim;

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster And treat those two impostors just the same;

If you can fill the unforgiving minute With sixty seconds' worth of distance run, Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it, And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

RUDYARD KIPLING, If. Said to have been written with George Washington in mind.

12 There are only two ways of getting on in the world, by one's own industry, or by the stupidity of others. (Il n'y a au monde que deux manières de s'élever, ou par sa propre industrie, ou par l'imbécillité des autres.)

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument on the Murder of Captain Wilde, 6 April, 1830.

II—Suicide: Its Folly

15 Suicide is the worst form of murder, because it leaves no opportunity for repentance.

CRURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

16 When Fannius from his foe did fly,
Himself with his own hands he slew;

Who e'er a greater madman knew,

Life to destroy for fear to die?

(Hocem cum fugeret, se Fannius ipse percussit.)

Hoc, rogo, non furor est, ne moriari, mori?)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Bk. ii, epig. 80.

It is folly to die through fear of dying. The executioner is upon you, wait for him. (Scutilla est timore mortis mori. Vultis qui occidat. Expecta.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epig. lxx, sec. 8.

Who doubting tyranny, and fainting under Fortune's false lottery, desperately run To death, for dread of death; that soul's most stout,

That, boding all mischance, dares last it out.

BAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 1.

Why should we Anticipate our sorrows? 'Tis like those That die for fear of death.

SIR JOHN DRYDEN, The Sophy.

The beasts had committed suicide to save themselves from slaughter

JOHN BRUNET, Speech, at Birmingham, 1867. Referring to the Conservatives.

III.—Suicide: Its Wisdom

1 We are in the power of no calamity while death is in our own

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici Pt. i, 44

The sweetest gift nature has bequeathed us . . . is that she has left us the key of the fields.

MONTAGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

Happy men that have the power to die.

TENNYSO, Tithonus, l. 70

But now that refuge of despair is shut,
For other lives have turned themselves with mine.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Lammas.

2 What, does he who is at liberty to leave the banquet when he will, and play the game no longer, keep on annoying himself by staying?

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 37.

3 If suicide be supposed a crime, it is only cowardice can impel us to it. If it be no crime, both prudence and courage should engage us to rid ourselves at once of existence when it becomes a burden. It is the only way that we can then be useful to society, by setting an example which, if imitated, would preserve every one his chance for happiness in life, and would effectually free him from all danger or misery.

DAVID HUME, Essays on Suicide.

4 Just as I shall select my ship when I am about to go on a voyage, or my house when I propose to take a residence, so I shall choose my death when I am about to depart from this.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epig. lxx, sec. 14.

5 Tranquillity can be purchased at the cost of a pin-prick. (Puncto securitas constat.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epig. lxx, 16.

6 He is truly great who has not only given himself the order to die, but has found the means. (Ille vir magnus est, qui mortem sibi non tantum imperavit, sed invenit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epig. lxx, 25.

7 That self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Plath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 1, l. 21.

Bravest at the last,
She leav'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 338.

She drank Prussic acid without any water,
And died like a Duke-and-a-Duchess's daughter!

R. H. BARRING, The Tragedy.

8 You good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick the bolt,
Then, free for ever!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

9 To be, or not to be: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 56.

For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,

The pangs of despised love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurs
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 70.

10 But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 96.

Ha! that cuts off twenty years of life
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 101.

11 Let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blench'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 166.

12 Why should I, beastlike as I find myself,
Yet beastlike and myself—my privilege—

What beast has heart to do it?

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 231.

Again the voice spake unto me:

"Thou art so steep'd in misery,

Surely I were better not to be."

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 46.

1 Though the Garden of thy Life be wholly waste, the sweet flowers withered, the fruit-trees barren, over its wall hang ever the rich dark clusters of the Vine of Death, within easy reach of thy hand, which may pluck of them when it will

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.

Pt. i, note.

IV—Suicide: Its Cowardice

2 Self-murder! name it not; our island's shame; That makes her the reproach of neighb'ring states

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 403.

Our time is fixed, and all our days are number'd; How long, how short, we know not:—this we know,

Duty requires we calmly wait the summons, Nor dare to stir till Heaven shall give permission

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 417.

3 The divinity who rules within us forbids us to quit this world without his command (Vetat dominans ille in nobis deus, in jussu hinc nos suo demigrare.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74.

Death may be call'd in vain, and cannot come, Tyrants can't him up from your relief:

Nor has a Christian privilege to die. . . .

Brutus and Cato might discharge their souls,

And give them furlo's for another world:

But we like sentries are oblig'd to stand

In starless nights, and wait th' appointed hour.

BROOKER, Don Sebastian. Act ii, sc. 1.

The thought is Cicero's, but how it is intensified by the "starless nights"! Dryden, I suspect, got it from his favorite, Montaigne.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Dryden.

4 Fool! I mean not

That poor-souled piece of heroism, self-slaughter;

Oh no! the miserablest day we live

There's many a better thing to do than die!

GEORGE DARLEY, Elizabeth.

5 Self-destruction is the effect of cowardice in the highest extreme.

DANIEL DEFOE, An Essay Upon Projects: Of Projects.

He is as cowardly

That longer fears to live, as he that fears to die.

FRANCIS FRANKLIN, The Purple Island. Canto vi, st. 2.

6 Who quails a world where strong temptations try,

And, since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly!

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 101.

7 When all the blandishments of life are gone, The coward sneaks to death, the brave live on. (Rebus in angustis facile est contemnere vitam.

Fortiter ille facit qui miser esse potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, 56. (Sewall, tr.)

8 Yet we should not, Howe'er besieged, deliver up our fort Of life, till it be forced.

MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act ii, sc. 4.

This life's a fort committed to my trust, Which I must not yield up till it be forced: Nor will I. He's not valiant that dares die, But he that boldly bears calamity.

MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act iv, sc. 3.

9 It is the rôle of cowardice, not of courage, to crouch in a hole, under a massive tomb, to avoid the blows of fortune. (C'est le rôle de la couardise, non de la vertu, de s'aller tapir dans un creux, sous un tombeau massive, pour éviter les coups de la fortune.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

10 To wish for death is a coward's part. (Timidi est optare necem.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 115.

11 We men are in a kind of prison and must not set ourselves free or run away. (Οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἐσμὲν οἱ ἀνθρώποι καὶ οὐ δεῖ δὲ αὐτοὺς ἐκ ταύτης λύσει οὐδ' ἀποδιδράσκειν.)

PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 62.

Nor at all can tell Whether I mean this day to end myself, Or lend an ear to Plato where he says, That men like soldiers may not quit the post Allotted by the Gods.

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 145.

12 You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worsen spirit tempt me again To die before you please!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 221.

13 Less base the fear of death than fear of life. YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 441.

SUMMER

I—Summer: Apophygms

14 Summer has set in with his usual severity. S. T. COLERIDGE, Letter to Charles Lamb, May, 1828.

If that the summer is not too severe.

KEATS, The Vision of Judgment. St. 53. A note to this passage says, "An allusion to Horace Walpole's expression in a letter," but Charles Lamb, in a letter to Bernard Barton (16 May, 1826), states that a letter received by him from Coleridge began with this phrase.

Summer, as my friend Coleridge waggishly writes, has set in with its usual severity.

LAMB, Letter to V. Novello, 9 May, 1826.

1 Summer is gone on swallow's wings.

THOMAS HOOD, The Departure of Summer.

2 There is something of summer in the hum of insects.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to Southey, 1810.

Do what we can, summer will have its flies.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

3 Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act I, sc. 2, l. 131.

The middle summer's spring.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act II, sc. 1, l. 82.

The Indian Summer, the dead Summer's soul.

MARY CLARKE, Presence, l. 62.

3a The present time of the year has been named the 'silly season.'

UNKNOWN, Article, London Punch, 9 Sept., 1871. Referring to August and September, when newspapers, for lack of real news, fill their columns with trivialities.

II—Summer: Its Beauty

4 Bring back the singing; and the scent Of meadowlands at dewy prime;—

Oh, bring again my heart's content,
Thou Spirit of the Summertime!
WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Song.

5 Now summer blinks on flowery braes,
And o'er the crystal streamlet plays.

BURNS, The Bards of Aberfeldy.

6 I question not if thrushes sing,
If roses load the air;
Beyond my heart I need not reach
When all is summer there.

JOHN VANCE CARMY, Love's World.

7 Here is the ghost Of a summer that lived for us,
Here is a promise Of summers to be.

W. E. HOSMER, Rhymes and Rhythms. No. 8.

8 All labourers draw hame at even,
And can to others say,

"Thanks to the gracious God of heaven,
Whilst sept this summer day."
ALEXANDER HUME, Eclogues. St. 2.

O summer day beside the japon sea!
O summer day so wonderful and white,
So full of gladness and so full of pain!

Forever and forever shalt thou be

To some the gravestone of a dead delight,
To some the landmark of a new domain.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

9 Where'er you walk cool gales shall fan the glade;

Trees, where you sit, shall crowd into a shade;
Where'er you tread, the blushing flowers shall rise,

And all things flourish where you turn your eyes

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 73.

10 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xviii.

11 In the good old summer time,
In the good old summer time,

Strolling thro' the shady lanes,
With your baby mine;
You hold her hand and she holds yours,
And that's a very good sign

That she's your tootsey-wootsey

In the good old summer time.

REN SHIELDS, In the Good Old Summer Time.

(1902) Music by George Evans. Sung by Blanche Ring in The Defender.

12 Then came the jolly Summer, being dight
In a thin silken cassock, coloured green,
That was unlined all, to be more light.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii. canto vii. st. 29.

13 Pale in her fading bowers the Summer stands,
Like a new Niobe with clasped hands,
Silent above the flowers, her children lost,
Slain by the arrows of the early Frost.

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, Ode.

14 Pride of summer passing by
With lordly laughter in her eye.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. II, st. 1.

Strong summer, dumb with rapture, bound
With golden calm the woodlands round.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. VII, st. 14.

15 The Summer looks out from her brazen tower,
Through the flashing bars of July.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Corymbus for Autumn.

16 From brightening fields of ether fair-disclosed,
Child of the sun, resurgent Summer comes.

THOMPSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1.

17 O, softly on yon banks of haze,
Her rosy face the Summer lays!
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

18 Sumer is icumen in,
Lhude sing cuccu!

UNKNOWN, Cuckoo Song. The oldest song in the English language, written, probably in 1276, by a monk at Reading Abbey, somewhat questionably identified as John of Fornsate. Original in the Hazleian MS., No. 978. The music to which it was sung still survives.

III—Summer: Its Heat

O thou who passest thro' our valleys in Thy strength, curb thy fierce steeds, allay the heat

That flames from their large nostrils! Thou,
O Summer,

*Oft pitched'st here thy golden tent, and oft
Beneath our oaks hast slept, while we beheld
With joy thy ruddy limbs and flourishing hair.*
WILLIAM BLAKE, To Summer.

O for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!
O for an iceberg or two at control!

O for a vale that at midday the dew cumbers!
O for a pleasure trip up to the pole!

ROSSITER JOHNSON, Ninety-Nine in the Shade.
As a lodge in a garden of cucumbers.
Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 8.

But sec, the shepherds shun the noonday heat,
The lowing herds to murmuring brooks retreat.

To closer shades the panting flocks remove:
Ye Gods! and is there no relief for love?
POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 85.

Summer's parching heat.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 81.

Heat, ma'am! It was so dreadful here that I found there was nothing left for it but to take off my flesh and sit in my bones.

9.)

The dogged dog-days had begun to bite.

JOHN TAYLOR, *A Very Merry-Wherry-Ferry
Voyage*, l. 6.

All-conquering heat, oh, intermit thy wrath!
And on my throbbing temples potent thus
Beam not so fierce! Incessant still you flow,
And still another fervent flood succeeds,
Pour'd on the head profuse. In vain I sigh,
And restless turn, and look around for night:
Night is far off; and hotter hours approach.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 451.

SUN

I—Sun: Apothegms

Fabrics finds certain spots and clouds in the sun.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
ii, sec. ii, memb. 3.

The sun is not all spots.

Series: John Miden*.

Make hay while the sun shines.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 41.

As thick as motes in the sun-beam.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 12.

As thick and numberless

As the gay motes that people the sunbeams.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 7.

The sun shines on both sides of the hedge.

DENHAM, Proverbs, 49.

The vernal sun new life bestows

Even on the meanest flower that blows.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto i, Introduction, l. 63.

The selfsame sun that shines upon his court

Hides not his visage from our cottage but

Looks on alike.

The east is blossoming! Yea, a rose,
Vast as the heavens, soft as a kiss,
Sweet as the presence of woman is,
Rises and reaches, and widens and grows
Large and luminous up from the sea,
And out of the sea, as a blossoming tree,
Richer and richer, so higher and higher,
Deeper and deeper it takes its hue;
Brighter and brighter it reaches through
The space of heaven and the place of stars,
Till all is as rich as a rose can be,
And my rose-leaves fall into billows of fire.

5
Whether the sun, predominant in Heav'n,
Rise on the earth, or earth rise on the sun, . . .
Solicit not thy thoughts with matters hid,
Leave them to God above, him serve and fear.
MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. viii, l. 160.

"But," quoth his neighbour, "when the sun
From East to West his course has run,
How comes it that he shows his face
Next morning in his former place?"
"Ho! there's a pretty question, truly!"
Replied our wight, with an uneasy
Burst of laughter and delight,
So much his triumph seemed to please him.
"Why, blockhead! he goes back at night,
And that's the reason no one sees him!"
HORACE SATIRE, The Astronomical Alderman.

6
And see—the Sun himself!—on wings
Of glory up the East he springs.
Angel of Light! who from the time
Those heavens began their march sublime,
Hath first of all the starry choir
Trode in his Maker's steps of fire!

Day, peeping from the east, makes the sun turn from black to red, like a boiled lobster.
RABELAIS, Works, Bk. v, ch. 7.

The sun had long since, in the lap
Of Thetis, taken out his nap,
And, like a lobster boil'd, the morn
From black to red began to turn.
BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 29.

It is true, I never assisted the sun materially in his rising; but, doubt not, it was of the last importance only to be present at it.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

First gilds the clouds, then shows his globe of light.

At such a distance from our eyes, as though He knew what harm his hasty beams would do.

² Come watch with me the azure turn to rose
In yonder West: the changing pageantry,
The fading alps and archipelagoes,
And spectral cities of the sunset-sea.

T. B. ALDRICH, Miracles.

³ The sun had gone down fiery red;
And if, that evening, he laid his head
In Thetis' lap beneath the seas,
He must have scalded the goddess's knees.

R. H. BARHAM, The Witches' Frolic.

As far as Phœbus first doth rise,
Until in Thetis' lap he lies.

SIR ARTHUR GORGES, Ode.

⁴ The sun descending in the west,
The evening star does shine;
The birds are silent in their nest,
And I must seek for mine.

The shadows lengthening as the vapours rise.
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 268.

⁸ Oft did I wonder why the setting sun
Should look upon us with a blushing face:
Is't not for shame of what he hath seen done,
Whilst in our hemisphere he ran his race?
LYMAN HEATH, On the Setting Sun.

⁹ A late lark twitters from the quiet skies;
And from the west,
Where the sun, his day's work ended,
Lingers as in content,
There falls on the old, grey city
An influence luminous and serene,
A shining peace.

W. E. HENLEY, Marguerite Sorori. St. 1.

The smoke ascends

In a rosy-and-golden haze. The spires
Shine, and are changed. In the valley
Shadows rise. The lark sings on. The sun,
Closing his benediction,
Sinks, and the darkening air
Thrills with a sense of the triumphing night—
Night with her train of stars
And her great gift of sleep.

W. E. HENLEY, Marguerite Sorori. St. 2.

¹⁰ Now deep in ocean sunk the lamp of light,
And drew behind the cloudy veil of night.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, l. 605. (Pope, tr.)

¹¹ The sun is a-wait at the ponderous gate of the West.

SIMON LANTIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

¹² Down sank the great red sun, and in golden, glimmering vapors
Veiled the light of his face, like the Prophet descending from Sinai.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 4.

After a day of cloud and wind and rain
Sometimes the setting sun breaks out again,
And, touching all the darksome woods with light,
Smiles on the fields, until they laugh and sing,
Then like a ruby from the horizon's ring,
Drops down into the night.

LONGFELLOW, Hanging of the Crane. Pt. vii.

¹³ The sun is set; and in his latest beams
Yon little cloud of ashen gray and gold,
Slowly upon the amber air unrolled,
The falling mantle of the Prophet seems.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

¹⁸ God is at the anvil, beating out the sun;
Where the molten metal spills,
At His forge among the hills
He has hammered out the glory of a day that's done.

LEW SARETT, God Is at the Anvil.

1 No pale quondam quench'd his ray,
No twilight drowns his wrath alloy;
With sicklier battle-target red
He rushes to his burning bed,
Dyes the wide wave with bloody light,
Then sinks at once—and all is night.
SCOTT, Rokeby, Canto vi, st. 21.

At the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 12.

5 When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 34.

6 The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives signal of a goodly day to-morrow.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act v, sc. 3, l. 19.

7 The beams of sunset hung their rainbow hues
High 'mid the shifting domes of sheeted spray
That canopied his path o'er the waste deep.
SMITH, Alastor, l. 334.

When, as a token at parting, magnificent Day, for remembrance,
Gives, unto men that forget, Ophirs of fabulous ore.

WILLIAM WATSON, Hymn to the Sea, Pt. iii,
l. 15.

A glory never sung,
Aloft on sky and mountain wall
Are God's great pictures hung,
WHITTIER, Sunset on the Bearcamp, St. 3.

8 There sinks the nebulous star we call the sun.
TENNYSON, The Princess, Pt. iv, l. 1.

9 Nobody of any real culture ever talks nowadays about the beauty of a sunset. Sunsets are quite old-fashioned. They belong to the time when Turner was the last hole in art.
OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

Ben Jonson, 1st Satire, l. 10.

40 And God made two great lights, great, for their use

To man, the greater to have rule by day,
The less by night altern.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. vii, l. 346.

12 The sun to me is dark
And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 86.

14 And teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, Act i, sc. 2, l. 334.

15 L'Abbé de Ville proposed a toast.
His master, as the rising Sun;
Reisbach then gave the Empress Queen,
As the bright Moon, and much praise won
The earl of Siam, whose turn came next,
Gave for his toast his own King Will,
As Joshua, the son of Nun,

Who made both Sun and Moon stand still.
UNKNOWN, (Anecdote Library, 1822.) The Empress Queen was Maria Theresa. The same anecdote is related of other men, notably of Benjamin Franklin, who, at a banquet in England, after toasts to Great Britain as the sun which gives light to the whole earth, and to France as the moon whose magic rays move the earth's tides, is said to have toasted Washington "the Joshua of America, who commanded the sun and moon to stand still —and they obeyed."

SUN-DIAL

I—Sun-Dial: Its Mission

16 Think: the shadow on the dial
For the nature most undone,
Marks the passing of the trial,
Proves the presence of the sun.

E. B. BROWNING, The Fourfold Aspect, l. 107.

17 The dial tells the golden-lighted hours
In gardens fair with roses.

DONALD CRONIN JENNISON, Country Gardens.

18 The old dial . . . stood as the garden god of Christian gardens. . . . It spoke of moderate labours, of pleasures not protracted after sunset, of temperance, and good hours. . . . The shepherd "carved it out quaintly in the sun";
and, turning philosopher by the very occupation, provided it with mottos more touching than tombstones

CHARLES LAMER, *Essays of Eliza: The Old
Brethren of the Inner Temple*.
Thou breathing dial since thy day began
The poorest hour was ever mark'd with hands.
W. S. LAMSON, The Sun-Dial.

1 Carve out the dial quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act II, sc. 5, l. 24.

2 A sun-dial which keeps very good time.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. II, p. 221

II—Sun-Dial Mottoes

2a I am a Shade: a Shadowe too arte thou.
I marke the Time: saye, Gossip, dost thou so?

AUSTIN DOBSON, The Sundial

3 Once at a potent leader's voice I stayed;
Once I went back when a good monarch prayed;

Mortals, howe'er we grieve, howe'er deplore,
The flying shadow will return no more.

WILLIAM HAMILTON, Sun-dial Motto. (CHALMERS, Poets of Scotland, xv, 620.)

4 Plant the seed of time so deep—
Time that shall outgrow all flowers—
That you shall forget to weep,
Beholding such a host of hours.

ROBERT HUNT, Legend for a Sun-dial.

5 A lumine motus (I am moved by the light.)
MASTERLENCE, Measure of the Hours' Motto.

I mark my hours by shadow;
Mayest thou mark thine by sunshine

C. B. HILTON-TURVEY, The Sundial, (The Van Heavens.)

7 Time can never take
What Time did not give;
When your shadows have all passed,
I shall live.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Dial.

8 Hours fly, Flowers die.
New days, New ways,
Pass by Love stays.

HENRY VAN DYKE, For Katrina's Sun-Dial.

9 Time is Too Slow for those who Wait,
Too Swift for those who Fear,
Too Long for those who Grieve,
Too Short for those who Rejoice,
But for those who Love
Time is not.

HENRY VAN DYKE, For Katrina's Sun-Dial

10 With warning hand I mark Time's rapid flight
From life's glad morning to its solemn night;
Yet, through the dear God's love, I also show
There's Light above me by the Shade below.

WHEATON, Insurrection on a Sun-dial for Dr. Henry I. Bowditch.

11 He knows but from its shade the present hour.
WOMENWORK, As Evening Walk, l. 43.

12 Flores non numero nil serenas. (I count only the hours that are bright.)

UNKNOWN Ancient sun-dial inscription.

Flores non numero nil serenas is the motto of a sun-dial near Venice. There is a softness and harmony in the words and in the thought unparalleled. Of all conceits it is surely the most classical. "I count only the hours that are serene"

WILLIAM HAZLITT, On a Sun-Dial.

There stands in the garden of old St. Mark
A sun-dial quaint and gray.

It takes no heed of the hours which in dark
Pass o'er it day by day.

It has stood for ages amid the flowers
In that land of sky and song
"I number none but the cloudless hours,"

Its motto the live day long

WILLIAM C. DOANE, Of a Sun-Dial in Venice.

Let others tell of storms and showers,
I'll only mark your sunny hours.

UNKNOWN. A variation of the foregoing.

13 The Natural Clock-work by the mighty ONE
Wound up at first, and ever since have gone.

Insurrection on sun-dial on south porch of Seaham church, Durham, England.

14 Our life's a flying shadow. God the pole,
The index pointing to Him is our soul;
Death the horizon, when our sun is set,
Which will through Christ a resurrection get.

near Hereford, England.

18 Vivite, ait, fugie (Live ye, he says, I flee.)
Motto on sun-dial of Bishop Francis Atterbury, at Rochester, England.

19 As the long hours do pass away,
So doth the life of man decay.

Insurrection on sun-dial in garden of Royal Hotel, Sevenoaks, Kent, England.

SUNFLOWER

20 Ah sunflower, weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the Sun,
Seeking after that sweet golden clime
Where the traveller's journey is done.
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, The Sunflower.

1 The seed a sun-flower; "Elle vous suit partout,"
The motto, cut upon a white cornelian.

Byron, Don Juan, Canto i, st. 198. Elle vous suit partout: She follows you everywhere.

As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets,
The same look which she turn'd when he rose.

THOMAS MOORE, Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms.

In the course of the evening, you find chance for certain

Soft speeches to Anne, in the shade of the curtain:
You tell her your heart can be likened to one flower.

"And that, O most charming of women, 's the
sunflower,

Which turns"—here a clear nasal voice, to your terror,

From outside the curtain, says, "That's all an error"

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 266.

2 Light-enchanting Sunflower, thou
Who gazest ever true and tender
On the sun's revolving splendour!

CALDERON, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 66.
(Shelley, tr.)

Restless Sunflower, cease to move.

CALDERON, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 76.
(Shelley, tr.)

3 The Sunflower, thinking 'twas for him foul shame

To nap by daylight, strove t' excuse the blame;
It was not sleep that made him nod, he said,
But too great weight and largeness of his head.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Poppy, l. 102.

4 With zealous steps he climbs the upland lawn,
And bows in homage to the rising dawn;
Imbibes with eagle eye the golden ray,
And watches, as it moves, the orb of day.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Loves of the Plants. Canto
i, l. 225.

5 Eagle of flowers! I see thee stand,
And on the sun's noon-glory gaze;
With eye like his, thy lids expand,
And fringe their disk with golden rays:
Though fix'd on earth, in darkness rooted
there,

Light is thine element, thy dwelling air,
Thy prospect heaven.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Sun-flower.

Heavily hangs the broad sunflower
Over its grave in the earth so chilly.

TEWKESBURY, Song.

6 But one, the lofty follower of the sun,
Sad when he sets, shuts up her yellow leaves,
Drooping all night; and, when he warm returns,

Points her enamour'd bosom to his ray.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 316.

SUPERSTITION

I—Superstition: Definitions

7 Superstition is the reproach of the Deity.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

The master of superstition is the people; and in all superstition, wise men follow fools.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

There is a superstition in avoiding superstition.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

8 Superstition, that poisons and destroys all peace of mind. (Superstitio, qua qui est imbutus quietus esse numquam potest.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 60.

9 A superstition is a premature explanation that overlays its time.

GEORGE LEE, Jottings.

10 The greatest burden in the world is superstition, not only of ceremonies in the church, but of imaginary and scarecrow sins at home.

MILTON, Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce.

11 It was necessary to succumb to superstitions, which are, more than ourselves, the kings of nations. (Il fallut succomber aux superstitions, qui sont, bien plus que nous, les rois des nations.)

VOLTAIRE, Eryphile. Act iii, sc. 2.

II—Superstition: Its Folly

12 I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 22.

All superstition from thy breast repel.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 175.

Better be dumb than superstitious.

BEN JONSON, Elegy on My Muse, l. 73.

13 Sickness and sorrows come and go, but a superstitious soul hath no rest.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 3.

14 Superstition, which is widespread among the nations, has taken advantage of human weakness to cast its spell over the mind of almost every man. (Superstitio, fusa per gentis, oppressit omnium fere animos atque hominum imbecillitatem occupavit.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. h, ch. 72, sec. 148.

15 All people have their blind side—their superstitions.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Mrs. Bath's
Opinions on Whisk*.

For not the rank nor sex confined

Is this vain age of the mind.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto ii, st. 11.

16 Look, how the world's poor people are amazed

At apparitions, signs and prodigies!

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 925.

No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause
And call them meteors, prodigies and signs,
Abortives, presages and tongues of heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act III, sc. 4, l. 153.

Ghost, kelpie, wraith,
And all the trumphy of vulgar faith.

CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe, l. 188.

He put this engine [a watch] to our ears, which made an incessant noise like that of a water-mill:
and we conjecture it is either some unknown animal or the god that he worships, but we are more inclined to the latter opinion.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Lilliput.

A pupil in the many-chambered school
Where superstition weaves her airy dreams.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 609.

III—Superstition and Religion

A great fear . . . is the parent of superstition;
but a discreet and well-guided fear produced religion.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 317.

I can hardly think there was ever any scared into Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. I, sec. 59.

Superstition is the religion of feeble minds.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Superstition is the only religion of which base souls are capable. (La superstition est la seule religion dont soient capables les âmes basses.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 27.

Foul Superstition! howsoever disguised,
Idol, saint, virgin, prophet, crescent, cross,
For whatsoever symbol thou art prized,
Thou sacerdotal gain, but general loss!
Who from true worship's gold can separate thy dross?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto II, st. 44.

For superstition will survive,
Purer religion to perplex.

APRIL BROWN, On Desire.

Superstition consists in a senseless fear of the gods, religion in the pious worship of them.
(Superstitio, in qua inanis timor Deorum; religio, quæ deorum pio cultu continetur.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. I, sec. 42.

The destruction of superstition does not mean the destruction of religion. (Superstitio tollenda religio tollitur.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. II, ch. 72, sec. 148.

O! Superstition is the giant shadow

Which the solicitude of weak mortality,
Its back towards Religion's rising sun,
Casts on the thin mist of th' uncertain future.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fragment. No. 42.

Superstition is godless religion, devout impiety.

JOSEPH HALL, Of the Superstitious.

A foolish superstition introduces the influences of the gods even in the smallest matters.
(Minimis etiam rebus prava religio inscribit deos.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxvii, sec. 23.

Superstition is related to this life, religion to the next; superstition is allied to fatality, religion to virtue; it is by the vivacity of earthly desires that we become superstitious; it is, on the contrary, by the sacrifice of these desires that we become religious.

MADAME DE STAËL (ABEL STEVENS, Life of Madame de Staël. Ch. 34.)

Crush the infamous thing! (Écrasez l'infâme!)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, 23 June, 1760

"By infâme," he wrote, "you will understand that I mean superstition: as for religion, I love and respect it as you do." Voltaire adopted this phrase as his motto.

Of great events stride on before the events,

And in to-day already walks to-morrow.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act v, sc. 1.
(Coleridge, tr.)

Against ill chances men are ever merry;
But heaviness foretells the good event.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 81.

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus and Coriolanus. Act I, sc. 3, l. 343.

Nay I have had some omens: I got out of bed backwards too this morning, without premeditation; pretty good that too; but then I stumbled coming down stairs, and met a vessel; had omens those: some bad, some good, our lives are chequer'd.

COMINGS, Love for Love. Act II, sc. 2.

Alas! you know the cause too well;
The salt is spilt, to me it fell;
Then to contribute to my loss,
My knife and fork were laid across:
On Friday, too! the day I dread!
Would I were safe at home in bed!
Last night (I vow to Heaven 'tis true)
Bounce from the fire a coffin flew
Next post some fatal news shall tell:
God send my Cornish friends be well!

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven.

Send a bird of omen; . . . let him appear upon my right hand.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 310.

How happily rose I on my right side to-day.

PAISGRAVE, Acadamas. M 3 (1540)

The menacing gods filled earth, sky, and sea with portents. (Prodigiis terras implorunt, aethera, pontum)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 525.

It is a bad sign; a Roman would have turned back.

NAPOLION BONAPARTE, when his horse stumbled and threw him as he was about to cross the Nieman on his invasion of Russia, 24 June, 1812. (LOCKHART, Life.) Marshes had said it before him.

There is something in omens. (Omina sunt aliqualid.)

OVIN, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 12, l. 3.

You shall be rewarded for that omen, Sir Omener! (Ob istuc omen, ominator, capies quod te condecet.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 722. (Act II, sc. 2.)

It's a bad sign when a man in a sweat shivers. (Pro monstro-exemplo est, quando qui sudat tremit.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 299. (Act II, sc. 2.)

This day black omens threat the brightest fair, That e'er descends a watchful spirit's care. From The Slave of the Lock. Canto II, l. 101.

Midnight hags,
By force of potent spells, of bloody characters,
And conjurations, horrible to hear,
Call fiends and speering across the yawning
And set the ministers of hell at work.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Act IV, sc. 1, l. 1.

Release, ye gods, release the mind from such omens. (Solvite tantis animus monstris, Solvite Superi!)

SENeca, Hercules Furor, l. 1063.

Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail,
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,
A nut, a cherry-stone;
But she, more covetous, would have a chain.
Master, be wise; an if you give it her,
The devil will shake her chain and fright us with it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors Act IV, sc. 3, l. 72.

In what particular thought to work I know not:

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 1, l. 67.

The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets;
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 1, l. 113.

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act II, sc. 2, l. 19

And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Caesar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act II, sc. 2, l. 24.

At my nativity
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning crests; and at my birth
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shaked like a coward.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act III, sc. 1, l. 13.

The owl shriek'd at my birth, an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time.
Dogs howled.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act V, sc. 6, l. 47.

These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 2, l. 112.

The night had been dirily: where we lay,
Our chamberlains were blown down; and, as they lay,

Lightnings did strike the air; strange screams of death,

And prophesying with accents terrible

Of dire combustion and confused events
New kindred to the weevil time: the obscure bird

Clamour'd the Eveslong night: some say, the earth

Was leverous and did shake.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act II, sc. 3, l. 59.

Stones have been known to move and trees to speak.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act III, sc. 4, l. 123.

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-faced moon looks bloody on the earth
And lean-look'd propheta whisper fearful change;
Rich men look sad and ruffians dance and leap,
The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs foretell the death or fall of kings.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act II, sc. 4, l. 8.

1
By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 44.

2
Then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black-Monday.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
II, sc. 5, l. 24.

If a man's nose bleeds one drop at the left nostril it is a sign of good luck, and vice versa.

SIR JOHN MELLON, Astrologaster. (1620)

3
It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act I, sc. 3, l. 54.

SURETY

4
Act as surety, and ruin is at hand. (Ἐγγύς, τάρα & ἄρα.)

CHILON (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Bk. I, sec. 73.) Diogenes Laertius states that this was Chilon's apothegm, but it has also been ascribed to Thales of Miletus. It was one of the three maxims inscribed upon the temple of Apollo at Delphi. See under MODERATION.

Act as surety, and ruin stands near you. (Ἐν ἐγγύς, τάρα & ἄρα, grace dicimus: Latium est, Spode, nose set presto tibi.)

TRAILL. (AUBONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientium, l. 180.)

I could give a thousand instances to prove that those who give bond or bail appear at the bar of regret. (Per mille possem curare exempla, ut problem Prodes vadesque penititudinis reos.)

AUBONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientium, l. 182.

Having consented to be one of three sureties, I was caught. So did the inscription at Delphi hold good for once, that suretyship is woe.

CRATINUS THE YOUNGER, Fragment.

Be surety for another and ruin is at hand.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 20. (1339)

5
A person who can't pay gets another person who can't pay to guarantee that he can pay.

Like a person with two wopden legs getting another person with two wooden legs to guarantee that he has got two natural legs. It don't make either of them able to do a walking match.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. I, ch. 23.

6
My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,
Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 1-2.

My son, if I, Hafiz, thy father, take hold of thy knees in my pain,
Demanding thy name on stamped paper, one day or one hour—refrain.

Are the links of thy fetters so light that thou cravest another man's chain?

RUDYARD KIPLING, Certain Maxims of Hafiz.
No. 29.

7
He that is surety for a stranger shall smart
for it: and he that hateth suretyship is sure.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 15.

He who is surety is never sure.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

8
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
IV, sc. 4, l. 3.

Procure your sureties for your days of answer.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 159.

Have pity, I'll be his surety.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act I, sc. 2, l. 475.

9
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 83.

Suspicious amongst thoughts are like bats amongst birds, they ever fly by twilight.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Suspicion.

There is nothing makes a man suspect much,
more than to know little.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Suspicion.

Suspicious that the mind, of itself, gathers, were but buzzes; but suspicions that are artificially nourished and put into men's heads by the tales and whisperings of others, have sting.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Suspicion.

And, when his first suspicions dimly stole,
Rebuked them back like phantoms from his soul.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 237.

There is one safeguard known generally to the

SWALLOW

I—Swallow: One Swallow Does Not Make
Summer

One swallow does not make spring, nor does one fine day. (Μία γὰρ χελιδὼν ἅπ' οὐ ποιεῖ, οὐδὲ μία ἡμέρα.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics Bk. i, ch. 7,
sec. 16.

One swallow does not make summer. (Una Golondrina sola no hace verano.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 13.

One swallow maketh not summer.

JOHN HAYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. II, ch. 5. (1546)

One foul wind no more makes a winter, than one swallow makes a summer.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 43.

One swallow proveth not that summer is near.

JOHN NORTHBROOK, Treatise against Dancing
(1577)

1 It's surely summer, for there's a swallow:
Come one swallow, his mate will follow.
The bird race quicken and wheel and thicken.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, A Bird Song. St. 2

2 The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 31.

3 It is not one swallow that bringeth in summer.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 25. (1539)

Nay soft (said the widow) one swallow makes not a summer, nor one meeting a marriage

THOMAS DELONEY, Jacke of Newberie. Ch. 1.
(c. 1597)

II—Swallow: Description

4 In truth, I rather take it thou hast got
By instinct wise much sense about thy lot,
And hast small care
Whether an Eden or a desert be Thy home, so thou remain'st alive, and free
To skim the air.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, *To a Swallow Building
under Our Eaves*.

5 Down comes rain drop, bubble follows;
On the house-top one by one

Flock the synagogue of swallows,
Met to vote that autumn's gone.

THÉOPHILE GAUTIER, Life, a Bubble.

6 But, as old Swedish legends say,
Of all the birds upon that day,
The swallow felt the deepest grief,
And longed to give her Lord relief,
And chirped when any near would come.

"Hugsvala seala sval honom!"

Meaning, as they who tell it deem,
Oh, cool, oh cool and comfort Him!

CHARLES GONFREY LELAND, The Swallow.

7 The swallow is come! The swallow is come!
O, fair are the seasons, and light

Are the days that she brings with her dusky
wings,

And her bosom snowy white!

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

8 The swallow is not ensnared by men because of its gentle nature. (At caret insidiis hominum, quia mitis, hirundo.)

OWID, Art Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 149.

9 Come, summer visitant, attach
To my reed roof your nest of clay,

And let my ear your music catch,
Low twittering underneath the thatch
At the grey dawn of day.

CHARLOTTE SMITH, The First Swallow.

10 Swallow, my sister, O sister swallow,
How can thine heart be full of the spring?

A thousand summers ~~are~~ ^{are} dead and dead.
What hast thou found in the spring to follow?
What hast thou found in thy heart to sing?
What wilt thou do when the summer is shed?

SWINBURNE, Italyas. St. 1.

For where thou fliest I shall not follow,
Till life forget and death remember,
Till thou remember and I forget.

SWINBURNE, Italyas. St. 5

11 Nature's licensed vagabond, the swallow.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

12 The swallow sweeps

The slimy pool, to build his hanging house.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 654.

17 The swan, with arched neck Between her white wings manthung proudly

rows

Her state with oary feet.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 438.

Like some full-breasted swan

That, fluting a wild carol ere her death,

Ruffles her pure cold plumage, and takes the flood

With swarthy webs.

TENNISON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 434.

18 I have seen a swan

With bootless labour swim against the tide

And spend her strength with over-matching waves.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 19.

All the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hoistly in the flood.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 101.

2 The stately-sailing swan
Gleams out his snowy plumage to the gale,
And, reaching proud his neck, with oary feet
Bristles forward fierce, and guards his oar-isle,
Protective of his young.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 778.

II—Swans: Their Death-Song

3 The jealous swan, against his death that singeth.
CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 342. (c. 1370)
The yellow swan famous and agreeable,
Against his death melodiously singing.

JOHN LYDGADE, Minor Poems, p. 157. (c. 1430)
Thus, like a dying swan, to a sad tune, I sing my own dirge

MASSINGER, Emperor of the East, v, 3. (1631)
Thus on Mæander's flowery margin lies
Th' expiring swan, and as he sings he dies.

Pope, The Rape of the Lock, Canto v, l. 65.

4 Not without cause is the swan dedicated to Apollo, because, foreseeing his happiness in death, he dies with a song of rapture.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum Bk. I, ch. 30, sec. 73.

The swan murmurs sweet strains with falling tongue, itself the minstrel of its own death. (Dulcia deflecta modulatur carmina lingua Cantator, cygnus, funus ipse sui)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 77.

A Latin proverb, Cygnus cantio, which among the common people is termed a lightning before death.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, 135. (1584)
See 397 13.

The cock swan is an emblem or representation of an affectionate and true husband to his wife above all other fowls; for the cock swan holdeth himself to one female only, and for this cause nature hath conferred on him a gift before all others; that is, to die so joyfully, that he sings sweetly when he dies, upon which the poet saith.

*Dulcia deflecta modulatur carmina lingua,
Cantator, cygnus, funus ipse sui, etc.*

SIR EDWARD COKE, Decisions, the Case of Swans, 1600. (4 Rep. 85.)

5 Death darkens his eyes, and unplumes his wings,

Yet the sweetest song is the last he sings:

Live so, my Love, that when death shall come,

Swan-like and sweet it may waft thee home.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, The Swan.

6 The immortal swan that did her life deplore.
OLIVIER RUSCHEN, Temptation and Victory of Christ.

7 The dying swan, when fears her tapers pierce,
In music strains breathes out her life and verge.

And, glowing her own song, thus on her dying breath, she sings:

My song is sweet, but mine is sad, for I am dying.

8 'Tis strange that death should sing.

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act v, sc. 7, l. 20.

9 He makes a swan-like end, fading in music.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 44.

I will play the swan, and die in music.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act v, sc. 2, l. 247.

There, swan-like, let me sing and die.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto iii, st. 86.

10 And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1161.

11 Will you not admit that I have as much of the spirit of prophecy in me as the swans?
For they, when they perceive approaching death, sing more merrily than ever, rejoicing in the thought that they are going to the god they serve.

SOCRATES (PLATO, Phædo, Sec. 84, fin.)

12 The wild swan's death-hymn took the soul
Of that waste place with joy

Hidden in sorrow At first to the ear

The warble was low, and full and clear.

TENNYSOON, The Dying Swan, St. 3.

To pile up honey upon sugar, and sugar upon honey, to an interminable tedious sweetness.

LAMB, Essays of Elia. A Chapter on Ears.

16 So sweet was ne'er so fatal.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 20.

17 Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,
Such fleet things sweet!

SWINBURNE, Fellows. St. 22.

18 Sweet as love,
Or the remembrance of a generous deed.

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. vi, l. 682.

II—Sweetness: Sweet and Sour

19 The bitter goes before the sweet. Yea, and for as much as it doth, it makes the sweet the sweeter.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. II.

The little sweet doth kill much bitterness.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 13.

20 No tasting earth's true food for men,
Its sweet in sad, its sad in sweet.

ROBERT BROWNING, Dr. Alister Vinson. SL 25.

21 The bad may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower.

COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

- ✓ 1 Much I muse,
How bitter can spring up, when sweet is sown.
(Come uscir può di dolce seme amaro.)
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto viii, l. 93. (Cary, tr.)
- 2 He deserves not sweet that will not taste of sour.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1834.
- ✓ He hath not deserved this sweet before he hath tasted some sour.
HENRY GOLDINGHAM, Garden Plot, p. 60. (c. 1575)
- Take the sweet with the sour.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
- He that desireth the sweet to assay,
He must taste bitter, this is no nay.
UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures. No. 21.
(c. 1535)
- 3 Sweet meat must have sour sauce.
BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act iii, sc. 1.
- 4 What is to some sad and bitter, may seem to others particularly sweet. (Aliis quod triste et amarum est, Hoc tamen esse aliis possit prædulce videri.)
LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 638.
- 5 Life to have its sweets must have its sour.
Love isn't always two souls picking flowers.
JOHN MASEFIELD, *The Widow in the Bye
Street*. Pt. iv, st. 25.
- ✓ 6 Ah, what a mixture of sweet and bitter you serve me now! (Dulce amarumque una nunc miscis mihi.)
PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 63. (Act i, sc. 1.)
- 7 Flee what is sweet if it can turn to bitterness.
(Dulce etiam fugias, fieri quod amarum potest.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 167.
- 8 Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 24.
- ✓ Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 193.
- 9 The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 334.
- 10 The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sour
Even in the moment that we call them ours.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 867.
- 11 Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 236. (1595)
- What is sweet in the mouth is bitter in the stomach.
UNKNOWN, Folktalephnia, 172. (1669)
- Good in the mouth and bad in the draw.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5511.

- It is sweet in the mouth but bitter in the belly.
CHARLES KINGSLY, Westward Ho. Ch. 11.
- 12 Sweet is the rose, but grows upon a briar;
Sweet is the juniper, but sharp his bough;
Sweet is the eglantine, but pricketh near;
Sweet is the firbloom, but his branches rough;
Sweet is the cypress, but his rind is tough;
Sweet is the nut, but bitter is his pill;
Sweet is the broom-flower, but yet sour enough;
And sweet is moly, but his root is ill.
So every sweet with sour is tempered still.
SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xxvi.
- Every excess causes a defect; every defect an excess. Every sweet hath its sour; every evil its good . . . For every grain of wit there is a grain of folly. For everything you have misad, you have gained something else; and for every thing you gain, you lose something.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.
- Every white will have its black
And every sweet its sour.
UNKNOWN, Sir Cauline. Pt. ii, l. 1. (c. 1450);
(PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, No. 4.)
See also under COMPENSATION.
- 13 One loving hour
For many years of sorrow can dispense:
A dram of sweet is worth a pound of sour.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto 3, st. 30.

SWIMMING

- 14 It is one method to practise swimming with bladders, and another to practise dancing with heavy shoes.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.
- But swam, 'till Fortune threw a rope,
Buoyant on bladders filled with hope.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 51.
- My whole life, since I was left to myself to swim, as they say, without bladders
JAMES HOWELL, Pre-eminence of Parliament, 17.
- Little wanton boys that swim on bladders.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 359.
- 15 Not to swim
I' th' lead o' th' current, were almost to sink.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Two Noble Kinsmen. Act i, sc. 2.
- 16 He could, perhaps, have pass'd the Hellespont,
As once (a feat on which ourselves we prided)
Leander, Mr. Ekenhead, and I did.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 105.
- I read it in the story-book, that, for to kiss his
dear,
Leander swam the Hellespont,—and I will swim
this here.
O. W. HOLMES, The Ballad of the Oysterman.
- 17 They told me you had been to her,
And mentioned me to him:
She gave me a good character,
But said I could not swim.
LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 13.

1 Good swimmers at length are drowned.
GILBERT HERRICK, Jocunda Prudentia.

2 He may lightly swim that is held up by the chin.
MILN, Commonplace-Book, p. 129. (c. 1490)
It is easy to swim when the head is held up.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

3 You will swim without cork; i. e., you will get on without help. (Nabia sine cortice.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 120.

3a Oh! the old swimmin'-hole! where the trick so still and deep
Looked like a baby-river that was laying half asleep.

J. W. RILEY, The Old Swimm'-hole.

4 Or sink or swim
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 194.
Ye reckon not whether I float or sink.

CHAUCER, The Complaynte of Pite, l. 110. (c.
1368) Repeated in The Knight's Tale, l. 1539.
They care not whether they sink or swim.
THOMAS STARKY, England, l. 3, 85. (1538)

5 An unpractised swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

SHAKESPEARE, The Raps of Lucrèce, l. 1098.
I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs; . . . his bold head
Bove the contentions waves he kept, and oar'd
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 114.

6 I can swim like a duck.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 133.
I can swim like a fish.

JOHN FLISCHER, The Sea-Voyage, l. 1. (1622)

7 A purer passion, a lordlier leisure,
A peace more happy than lives on land,
Fulfills with pulse of diviner pleasure

The dreaming head and the steering hand.
I lean my cheek to the cold grey pillow.
The deep soft swell of the full broad billow,
And close mine eyes for delight past measure,
And wish the wheel of the world would stand.

SWINBURNE, A Swimmer's Dream. Pt. v, st. 2.

8 Root, hog, or die: This is the refrain of each of the nine verses of the Bull-Whacker's Epic.
J. H. BAZZILL, Life in Fish, p. 227.

9a A man cannot make a cheerless purse of a sow's ear.

Obscure, French-English Dictionary: Figures.
(1611) Quoting a proverb already old.
You will never make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659)

You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.
SWISS, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1834)
Kubla-Khan, Classical Dictionary, iv, 179. (1848)

9 Thus says the prophet of the Turk:
Good mussulman, abstain from pork;
There is a part in ev'ry swine
No friend or follower of mine
May taste, whate'er his inclination,
On pain of excommunication. . . .
But for one piece they thought it hard
From the whole hog to be debar'd. . . .
With sophistry their sauce they sweeten,
Till quite from tail to snout 'tis eaten.

COWPER, Love of the World Reproved, l. 1.

10 Though he love not to buy the pig in the poke.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 3, ch. 9. (1546)

In doing of aught let your wit bear a stroke
For buying or selling of pig in a poke.

W G BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 200

9 Lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing Act
ii, sc 3, l. 18

10 II—Tailor: The Tailor Makes the Man
God makes and the tailor shapes
JOHN BAILLIE, Antirepunct, 236 (1640)

God makes and apparel shapes, but 'tis money that fashions a man
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No 1680

A man made by God and not by a tailor
ANDREW JACKSON, referring to Sam Houston
(McELROY, Great Cleveland, ii, 238.)

11 For though the tailor makes the man, the cook yet makes the dinner
JOHN ELSTON, The Bloody Brother Act iii, sc 2 (1616)

Believe it, sir,

That clothes do much upon the wit, as weather
Does on the brain, and thence, sir, comes your ' proverb,

The tailor makes the man
BEN JONSON, The Staple of News Act i, sc. 1
(1625)

What a fine man Hath your tailor made you!
MASSINGER, City Madam Act i, sc 2 (1658)

12 By a new creation of my tailor's
I've shook off old mortality
JOHN FORD, Fancies Chase and Noble, Act i,
sc 3

13 Thy tailor! that poor shred
Can bring more to the making up of a man,
Than can be hoped from thee thou art his creature,
And did he not, each morning, new create thee,

Thou dost stink and be forgotten
MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry Act iii, sc 1

14 Get me some French tailor
To new-create you
MASSINGER, The Renegade Act iii, sc 1

Yes if they would thank their maker,
And seek no further, but they have new creators,
God tailor and god mercer

MASSINGER A Very Woman Act iii, sc 1, l. 161

15 Thy tailor rascal made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline Act iv, sc 2, l. 81

16 Cornwall Thou art a strange fellow a tailor make a man?

Kent Ay, a tailor, sir, a stone cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though he had been but two hours at the trade

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act ii, sc 2, l. 61

III—Tailor Nine Tailors Make a Man

17 They say three tailors go to the making up of a man

DEKKER AND WESSIER, Northward Hoe Act
ii (1607)

Two tailors go to a man
UNKNOWN, Taylor's Jest, p. 20. (1611)

Some foolish knave at first began the slander that three tailors are one man
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER POET, Works, p. 73
(1639)

18 Like to nine tailors, who, if rightly spell'd
Into one man are monosyllab'd
JOHN CLEVELAND, Poems, p. 23 (1639)

Just like the manhood of nine tailors.

BUTLER, Scudibros. Pt. 1, canto 2, l. 22. (1653)

Nine tailors make but one man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

Does it not stand on record that the English Queen Elizabeth, receiving a deputation of eighteen tailors, addressed them with a "Good morning, gentlemen both!"

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

Thou wretched Fraction, wilt thou be the ninth part even of a tailor?

CARLYLE, France.

It takes nine tailors to make a man. (Il faut neuf tailleurs pour faire un homme.)

UNKNOWN. A Breton proverb, quoted by Comte de la Villemarqué.

TALE

I—Tale: Apothegms

Tell me the tales that to me were so dear,
Long, long ago.—long, long ago.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Long, Long Ago.

The story always old, and always new.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. ii, l. 214.

A tale of the times gone by. (Ein Märchen aus alten Zeiten.)

HEINE, Die Lorelei.

Unwritten, half-forgotten tales of old.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xi, l. 464.

'Tis an old tale, and often told.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 27.

But now the mystic tale that pleas'd of yore
Can charm an understanding age no more.

ANDERSON, An Account of the Greatest English Poets, l. 23.

I wrote tales beside,
Carved many an article on cherry-stones
To suit light readers.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 317.

Who will, may hear Sordello's story told.

Who would has heard Sordello's story told.
ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. First and last lines. It was Tennyson who remarked that he had been able to understand only two lines of Sordello, the first and the last, and both of them were lies.

When we meet next we'll have a tale to tell.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 84.

Story! God bless you! I have none to tell, Sir.

GEORGE CANING, The Friend of Humanity and the Knife Grinder.

Let every fellow tell his tale about.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 32.

Sey forth thy tale, and tarry not the time.

CHAUCER, The Reeves Prologue, l. 51.

For though myself be a full vicious man,
A moral tale yet I you telle can.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Prologue, l. 131.

Listen, every one

That listen may, unto a tale

That's merrier than the nightingale.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii, The Sicilian's Tale.

This tale's a fragment from the life of dreams.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Phantasm or Poet

Believe not every tale.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xix, 15.

This story will never go down.

HENRY FIELDING, Tombe-Down Dick. Air 1.

The tale runs as it pleases the teller.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4783.

Lest men suspect your tale untrue,

Keep probability in view.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Painter Who Pleased Nobody, l. 1.

A good tale ill told is a bad one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135.

No tale so good but may be spoiled in the telling.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 817.

Mar a curious tale in telling it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 35.

A tale never loses in the telling.

C. H. SPENCER, John Ploughman. Ch. 6.

Soft as some song divine, thy story flows.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 458. (Pope, tr.)

Why do you laugh? Change but the name and the tale is told of you. (Quid rides? Mutato nomine de te Fabula narratur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 69.

How strive you? De la fables!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust, last line.

I am always at a loss to know how much to believe of my own stories.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller: Preface.

A story without a head (or beginning).

(Ἀκρόατος ἄνωτος.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 264.

And thereby hangs a tale.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 2, 28; iv, l. 60; Merry Wives of Windsor, l. 4, 159; Othello, iii, 1, 8; Taming of Shrew, iv, l. 60.

Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 281.

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 90.

1 And when thou comest thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk.
SHAKESPEARE [?]. Passionate Pilgrim, l. 305.
An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 358.
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5,
l. 25.

2 He cometh unto you with a tale which holdeth children from play, and old men from the chimney corner.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, The Defense of Poesy. Pt. ii.
Such wondrous tales as childhood loves to hear.
SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. i, l. 227.

3 What cometh once in may never out, for fear of telling tales out of school.
WILLIAM TYNDALE, Practice of Prelates, 249.
(1530)

Beware of the porter's lodge for carrying tales out of school.
JOHN FORD, Fancies. Act i, sc. 2. (1638)
Fie, miss! fie! tell tales out of school?
THOMAS SHADWELL, The True Widow. Act iv,
sc. 1. (1679)

4 The first law of story-telling. . . "Every man is bound to leave a story better than he found it."
MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. i,
ch. 3.

II—Tale: Cock-and-Bull Stories

5 A schoolboy's tale, the wonder of an hour!
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 2.

6 If we take it for a Canterbury tale, why do we not refute it?
THOMAS CRANMER, Sermon on Rebellion. (c.
1545)

We might as well spend that time in reading of profane histories, of Canterbury tales, or fit of Robin Hood.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, 49. (1549)
That foolish young girl held us all in a Canterbury story; I thought she would never have done with it.

DANIEL DEFOE, Roxana. (1724)

7 What a tale of a cock and a bull he told my father.

JOHN DAY, Love Triches. Act iv, sc. 2. (1608)
Thou talk'st of cocks and bulls.
BRAMMANT AND FLETCHER, Chances. Act ii, sc.
4. (1623)

Things which some call a cock and a bull, and others the product of a lively imagination.
THOMAS BROWN, Works. Vol. ii, p. 94. (1702)
And then tell a familiar tale of a cock and a bull, and a whore and a bottle.

COWPER, Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 15.

8 Old wives' foolish tales of Robin Hood.
ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 1542)

This is a tale of Robinkhood, which to believe, might show my wits but weak.

SIR JOHN MARINGTON, Orlando Furioso, xlv,
105. (1591)

From idle tales of Robin Hood, the blessed Lord of Heaven deliver me.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, i, 8. (1600)

9 He tells old wives' tales appropriate to the case. (Garrit aniles Ex re fabellas.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 77.

A fool he is for his most felicity
Is to believe the tales of an old wife.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Ship of Fools, i, 72.
(1509)

Thinking every old wives' tale to be a truth.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 347.

The Old Wives Tale.
GEORGE PEELE. Title of play (c. 1585); ARNOLD
BENNETT. Title of Novel.

10 This is a fair tale of a tub told us of his election.

SIR THOMAS MORE, *Confutation of Tyndale's
Answers*. (1532)

Ye say they follow your law,
And vary not a shaw,
Which is a tale of a tub.
JOHN BALE, Three Laws. Pt. ii. (1538)

Having entertained the fellow with a tale of a tub.

DANIEL DEFOE, Memoirs of a Cavalier, p. 97.
Tale of a Tub.

BNJ. JOHNSON. Title of play; JONATHAN SWIFT.
Title of satire.

Do not believe what I tell you here any more than if it were some tale of a tub.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 38.

Note: A tale of a tub is a cock-and-bull story,
a rigmarole, usually told with intent to deceive;
a tale of Robin Hood is a fiction, usually told as such; a Canterbury tale is a traditional story designed to amuse, and sometimes long-winded;
an old wives' tale is any marvellous, legendary story.

III—Tale: Twice-Told Tales

11 'Tis hard to venture where our betters fail,
Or lend fresh interest to a twice-told tale.
BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 183.

12 A tale twice told is cabbage twice sold.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 429.

It ought to be a good tale that is twice told.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3041.

13 It is an irksome thing to tell again a plain-told tale. (Ἐχθρὸν δὲ μὲν ἄλλοις ἀπὸ τῆς ἀπλοῦς ἐκφράσεως μυθολογεῖν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, last line.

And what so tedious as a twice told tale?

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, last line. (Pope, tr.)

Often would he tell the same tale in other words. (Ille referre aliter aspe solebat idem.)

OVIN, Art Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 128.

A good tale is none the worse for being twice told.

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 7.

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 108.

IV—Tale: Long-Winded Tales

See also Brevity

Various and strange was the long-winded tale.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 388.

Three stories high, long, dull, and old
As great lords' stories often are.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Maid of the Moor.

A story, in which native humour reigns,
Is often useful, always entertains:
A graver fact, enlisted on your side,
May furnish illustration, well applied;
But sedentary weavers of long tales
Give me the fidgets, and my patience fails.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 203.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct;
The language plain, and incidents well link'd;
Tell not as new what every body knows;
And, new or old, still hasten to a close.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 235.

It is a foolish thing to make a long prologue,
and to be short in the story itself.

APOCRYPHA: II Maccabees, ii, 32.

This is a long preamble of a tale.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 831.

"Skool! to the Northland! skool!"

—Thus the tale ended.

LONGFELLOW, The Skeleton in Armor.

O, Sir! the story will make your heart bleed,
... but it is too long to be told now.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

But that's another story.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Soldiers Three: Mulvaney.

V—Tale: Sad Tales

All the piteous tales that tears
Have water'd since the world was born.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 11.

The tale is worth the hearing; and may move Compassion, perhaps deserve your love
And approbation.

MASINGBER, Believe as You List: Prologue.

I will tell ye now

What never yet was heard in tale or song,

From old or modern bard, in hall or bower.

MILTON, Comus, l. 43.

Masters, I have to tell a tale of woe,
A tale of folly and of wasted life,
Hope against hope, the bitter dregs of strife,
Ending, where all things end, in death at last.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Prologue. St. 6.

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 15.

I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 1, 64.

A sad tale's best for winter: I have one
Of sprites and goblins.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 25.

Come listen to my mournful tale,
Ye tender hearts and lovers dear;

Nor will you scorn to heave a sigh,
Nor need you blush to shed a tear.

WILLIAM SEENSTONE, Jemmy Dawson.

For seldom shall she hear a tale
So sad, so tender, yet so true.

WILLIAM SEENSTONE, Jemmy Dawson.

Listen to my tale of woe.

EUGENE FIELD See 1475:15.

A lamentation and an ancient tale of wrong,
Like a tale of little meaning tho' the words are strong.

TENNISON, The Lotus-eaters, l. 118.

I shudder as I tell it. (Horresco referens.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 204.

TALENT

See also Genius and Talent

To do easily what is difficult for others is the mark of talent.

AMIEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1856.

Talent is habitual facility of execution.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

Her talents were of the more silent class.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 49.

Few boys are born with talents that excel,
But all are capable of living well.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 509.

The difference between talents and character is adroitness to keep the old and trodden round, and power and courage to make a new road to new and better goals.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Profound sincerity is the only basis of talent, as of character.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

Talent is developed in retirement; character is formed in the rush of the world. (Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille. Sich ein Charakter in dem Strom der Welt.)

GÖTTER, Tasso. Act I, sc. 2.

Each man has his own vocation. The talent is the call.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

Each man has an aptitude born with him.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success

Every man has his gift, and the tools go to him that can use them.

CHARLES KIMBLEY, Saint's Tragedy. Act II, sc. 6.

Talents differ; all is well and wisely put; If I cannot carry forests on my back,

Neither can you crack a nut.

EMERSON, Fable.

And sure th' Eternal Master found His single talent well employ'd.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Mr. Robert Levett. St. 7.

That one talent which is death to hide.

MILTON, Sonnet: On His Blindness.

And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 25.

Let us not overstrain our talents, lest we do nothing gracefully. (Ne forçons point notre talent; Nous ne ferions rien avec grâce.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. IV, fab. 5.

Let the path be open to talent.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

Hidden talent counts for nothing. (Occultæ musicæ nullum esse respectum.)

NERO, quoting a Greek proverb, when arranging to make his debut as a singer.

SUETONIUS, Lives: Nero. Ch. 20, sec. 2.)

Suetonius records that the debut was made at Naples. The theatre was shaken by an earthquake shock while Nero was singing, but he finished the number. The theatre collapsed just after the audience dispersed.

Hide not your talents, they for use were made.

What's a Sam-dial in the Shade?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

The Fables were invited to be present at the birth of my son, and each one conferred a talent on him—he possesses them all. Unfortunately we had forgotten to invite an old fairy, who, arriving after all the others, exclaimed, "He shall have all the talents, except that to make good use of them."

DIONYSIUS D'OLIVIERA, referring to the Duc d'Orléans, Regent of France during the minority of Louis XV. (L'Orléans, The Great Mississippi Bubble.)

Often the greatest talents lie dormant. (Superba ingenia in occultis latent.)

PLUTARCH, Cypselus, l. 165. (Act I, sc. 2.)

Nathaniel: A rare talent!

Dull: If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, IV, I, 46.

Talents angel-bright, If wanting worth, are shining instruments In false ambition's hand, to finish faults Illustrious, and give infamy renown.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night VI, l. 273.

TALK

See also Conversation, Speech

I—Talk: Definitions

A great thing is a great book, but greater than all is the talk of a great man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby Bk III, ch. 1.

The most fluent talkers or most plausible reasoners are not always the justest thinkers.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Prejudice.

Talking is like playing on the harp; there is as much in laying the hands on the strings to stop their vibration as in twanging them to bring out their music.

HOLMES, Autocrat of Breakfast-Table Ch. 1.

The man who talks to unburthen his mind is the man to delight you.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, III, 247.)

A good talker, even more than a good orator, implies a good audience.

LESLIE STEPHENS, Life of Samuel Johnson Ch 3

All natural talk is a festival of ostentation; and by the laws of the game each accepts and fans the vanity of the other.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers.

II—Talk: Apothegms

Two great talkers will not travel far together.

GEORGE BORROW, Lodogro. Ch. 35. Cited as a Spanish proverb.

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "To talk of many things:

Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—

Of cabbages—and kings—

And why the sea is boiling hot—

And whether pigs have wings."

CARLETON, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 4.

When I can't talk sense, I talk metaphor.

JOHN FURBER CUMMIS. (MORSE, Life of Sheridan, II, 29, note.)

True he can talk, and yet he is no speaker. (Admir. Agrippa, Admirator Agrippa.)

EUPOLUS, Demetri. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades, III, 2.) Of Alcibiades.

Talkative rather than eloquent. (Loquax magis quam facundus.)

SALLUST, History, Bk. iv, sec. 43.

Time will explain it all. He is a talker, and needs no questioning before he speaks.

EURIPIDES, Alcetes, Fragment 38.

People may come to do anything almost, by talking of it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, v, 286.)

You talk just like a book. (Vous parlez tout comme un livre.)

MOLIERE, Don Juan, Act I, sc. 2, l. 100.

Strange the difference of men's talk!

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 1660.

A botch-potch of talk. (Santiago loquendi.)

PETRUS, Satires, Sat. i, l. 80.

You are talking cobble-stones. (Lapides loqueris.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 152. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

This is idle talk. (Verba multa facimus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 638. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

The talk of the lips tendeth only to penury.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 23.

I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 162.

And all talk died, as in the grove all song
Beneath the shadow of some bird of prey.
TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 594.

III.—Talk: Table-Talk

In dinner talk it is perhaps allowable to fling any faggot rather than let the fire go out.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grisel, p. 34.

A civil guest
Will no more talk all, than eat all the feast.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch, St. 51.

A table-talk rich in sense,
And witty without wit's pretence.
COTTON MATHER, Epitaph on Anne Bradstreet.

And not to serve for table-talk.
MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. ii, ch. 3.

Let it serve for table-talk.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act iii, sc. 5, l. 93.

In after dinner talk,
Across the walnuts and the wine.
TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, St. 4.

IV.—Talk: Almsgiving

Talk often, but never long; in that case, if you do not please, at least you are sure not to tire your hearers.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Oct., 1748;

Men of your kidney talk little; they glory in taciturnity, and cut their hair shorter than their eyebrows. (Rarus sermo illis et magna libido tacendi. Atque supercilio brevior coma.)

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. ii, l. 14.

We know well enough that we should not talk of our wives, but we seem not to know that we should talk still less of ourselves. (On sait assez qu'il ne faut guère parler de sa femme, mais on ne sait pas assez qu'on devrait encore moins parler de soi.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 364.

Let your talk be such as is worthy of belief, and your words such as are commonly used. (Sit tibi credibilis sermo, consuetaque verba.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria, Bk. i, l. 467.

Talk to every woman as if you loved her, and to every man as if he bored you.

V.—Talk: Familiar Talk

The charm and playfulness of his talk. (Lepos et festivitas orationis.)

CICERO, De Oratore, Bk. ii, sec. 56.

They would talk of nothing but high life, and high-lived company; with other fashionable topics, such as pictures, taste, Shakespeare, and the musical glasses.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield, Ch. 9.

No season now for calm, familiar talk.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. xxi, l. 169. (Pope, tr.)

And the talk slid north, and the talk slid south,
With the sliding puffs from the hookah-mouth

Four things greater than all things are,—
Women and Horses and Power and War.
KEPLING, Ballad of the King's Jest.

To beguile with talk the slow-moving hours. (Tarde tempora narrando fallat.)

OVID, Tristia, Bk. iii, eleg. 3, l. 11.

We were wont to spend long hours in talking, the day not sufficing for our discourse. (Solentibus consumere longa loquendo tempora, nunc non sufficiens dies.)

OVID, Tristia, Bk. v, eleg. 13, l. 28.

His talk was like a stream which runs
With rapid change from rocks to reeds:

It slipped from politics to puns:

It passed from Mahomet to Moses:

Beginning with the laws which keep

The planets in their radiant courses,

And ending with some precept deep

For dressing eels or shoeing horses.

WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED, The Vicar.

1 Come, let's now talk with deliberation, fair and softly, as lawyers go to heaven.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 28.

2 Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs; . . .

Let's choose executors and talk of wills.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 145.

3 I am not one who oft or much delight

To season my fireside with personal talk.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. No. 1.

VI—Talk: Loquacity

See also Speech: Loquacity;

Words: Verbosity

4 The talk of empty-headed, vain and tiresome babblers . . . has justly been thought to come from the lips and not from the heart. The tongue ought not to be unrestrained and rambling, but guided by cords connected with the inmost breast.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 1.

5 It would talk; Lord, how it talked!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act iv, sc. 1.

Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 64.

6 Folded his two hands and let them talk,
Watching the flies that buzzed! and yet no fool.

ROBERT BROWNING, An Epistle, l. 123.

So much they talked, so very little said.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rascals, l. 550.

7 He who talks much says many foolish things.

(Qui parle beaucoup dit beaucoup de sottises.)

CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Sequel. Act iii, sc. 1.

Much talk, much foolishness.

The Talmud.

8 But far more numerous was the herd of such,
Who think too little, and who talk too much.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achishophel. Pt. i, l. 533.

Those that merely talk and never think.

BEN JONSON, An Epistle, Answering One That Asked to be Sealed of the Tribe of Ben, l. 9.

They never taste who always drink;

They always talk who never think.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Upon a Passage in the Scalligeriana. The French say, "Moin on pense, plus on parle" (The less people think, the more they talk).

10 Though I'm anything but clever,
I could talk like that for ever.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

11 He who talks much cannot always talk well.
(Chi parla troppo non può parlar sempre bene.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 6.

12 And there's our well-dressed gentleman, who sits,

By right divine, no doubt, among the wits,

Who airs his tailor's patterns when he walks,

The man that often speaks, but never talks.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, l. 63.

13 Whom the disease of talking still once possesseseth, he can never hold his peace. Nay, rather than he will not discourse, he will hire men to hear him.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Optanda: Thersites Homeri.

14 Oft has it been my lot to mark

A proud, conceited, talking spark.

JAMES MERRICK, The Chameleon.

15 You interrupt him with your talking. (Sermones huic obsonas.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 74.

16 Talkativeness has another plague attached to it, even curiosity; for praters wish to hear much that they may have much to say.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Of Talkativeness.

17 Talk thy tongue weary: speak.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 115.

18 If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;

I had it from my father.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 26.

19 The red wine first must rise

In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em

Talk us to silence.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 43.

20 For the watch to babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 37.

With volleys of eternal babble.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 453.

They only babble who practise not reflection.

SHERIDAN, Piccolo. Act i, sc. 1.

21 A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 4, l. 155.

1 In my youth people talked about Ruskin; now they talk about drains.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. II, ch. 12.

TARIFF, THE

2 Protection and patriotism are reciprocal. This is the road that all great nations have trod.

J. C. CALHOUN, Speech, House of Representatives, 12 Dec., 1811.

3 It is a condition that confronts us—not a theory.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1887, referring to the tariff.

There's one more President for us in Protection. JAMES G. BLADNE, Letter, Dec., 1887, after Cleveland's tariff message.

4 Free trade is not a principle, it is an expedient.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech on Import Duties, 25 April, 1843

Protection is not a principle, but an expedient. DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

5 Free-trade, they [parties] concede, is very well as a principle, but it is never quite time for its adoption.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

6 What more incongruous than the administering of custom-house oaths and the searching of trunks and hand-bags under the shadow of "Liberty Enlightening the World"?

HENRY GEORGE, Protection or Free Trade. Ch. 9.

7 The tariff question is a local question.

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK, Interview, Paterson, N. J., Daily Guardian, 8 Oct., 1880, during his campaign for the Presidency, a remark widely ridiculed and which helped to lose him the election.

8 Our interest will be to throw open the doors of commerce, and to knock off all its shackles, giving perfect freedom to all persons for the vent of whatever they may choose to bring into our ports, and asking the same in theirs.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. II, p. 240.

We should encourage home manufactures to the extent of our own consumption of everything of which we raise the raw material.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. XII, p. 236.

I do not mean to say that it may not be for the general interest to foster for a while certain infant manufactures, until they are strong enough to stand against foreign rivals, but when evident that they will never be so, it is against right to make the other branches of industry support them

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 432.

9 It accorded well with two favorite ideas of mine, of leaving commerce free, and never keeping an unnecessary soldier.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvii, p. 330.

10 I have come to a resolution myself, as I hope every good citizen will, never again to purchase any article of foreign manufacture which can be had of American make, be the difference of price what it may.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 223.

11 Free trade, one of the greatest blessings which a government can confer on a people, is in almost every country unpopular.

MACAULAY, Essays: Milford's History of Greece.

12 The tariff is the Gulf Stream of politics. It flows through both parties, and each is trying to catch the other in bathing and steal his clothes

PATRICK FRANCIS MURPHY, Speech, at Manhattan Club.

13 This talk 'bout the Revenoo is of the bosh, boshy.

ARTEMUS WARD, Things in New York.

TASTE

14 Every one carries his own inch-rule of taste, and amuses himself by applying it, triumphantly, wherever he travels.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 182.

15 Want of taste plays the chief part among men and plethora of words. (Ἀνομία τὸ πλεονέκτημα τῶν ῥημάτων.)

CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. i, sec. 91.)

16 Other virtues are in request in the field and workyard, but a certain degree of taste is not to be spared in those we sit with.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Those who are esteemed umpires of taste are often persons who have acquired some knowledge of admired pictures or sculptures, and have an inclination for whatever is elegant; but if you inquire whether they are beautiful souls, and whether their own acts are like fair pictures, you learn that they are selfish and venal.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

17 Men lose their tempers in defending their taste.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. 8, p. 147.

1 Every man to his taste. . . The creation of beauty is Art.

BACON, Nature, Addresses to Beauty.

2 You can't get high æsthetic tastes like trousers, ready made.

W. S. GILBERT, Pollence. Act II.

3 Shocking to Taste, and to Fine Arts a treason.

THOMAS HOOE, Ode to Rsa. Wisdom, l. 285.

4 A fine judgment in discerning art (Judicium subtile videndis artibus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epia. 1, l. 242.

A judge of matters of taste. (Elegantia arbitror.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, sec. 18. Usually quoted: Arbitror elegantiarum.

5 Men have not all the same tastes and likes. . . Their tastes vary. and they call for widely different things (Non omnes eadem mirantur amantque . . . Poscentes variis multum diversa palato.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epia. 2, l. 58.

There are as many thousands of tastes as there are living men. (Quot capium vivunt, totidem steriorum Milia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 1, l. 27.

Such and so various are the tastes of men

AKENSIDE, Pleasures of Imagination, III, 567.

Now who shall arbitrate?

Ten men love what I hate,

Shun what I follow, slight what I receive.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Esau. St. 22.

In different courses different tempers run;
He hates the moon, I cicken at the sun;
Wound up at twelve at noon, his clock goes right;
Mine better goes, wound up at twelve at night.

CHARLES CRURCHILL, Night, l. 81.

6 The wild vicissitudes of taste.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue on the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre, l. 48.

7 Taste is the literary conscience of the soul.

(Le goût est la conscience littéraire de l'âme.)

JOUBERT, Pensées, No. 366.

8 I wish you all sorts of prosperity, with a little more taste.

LE SÈNE, Gé. Blas. Bk. VII, ch. 4.

9 Well, for those who like that sort of thing I should think that is just about the sort of thing they would like.

AMERICAN LITERARY, Remark, to Robert Dale Owen, the apothecary, who had insisted on reading to him a long manuscript on spiritualism, and then asked his opinion of it. (Glean, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 94.)

10 Taste here were sacrilege.

WILLIAM BLAKE, England's Sacred. Bk. II, l. 21.

11 Every man to his taste. (Chacun à son goût.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 16. Quoting an old French proverb.

Every one as they like, as the woman said when she kissed her cow.

PETER MOTTREUX, tr., Nobels. Bk. v, ch. 29.

12 No one thing pleases all: one man gathers thorns and another roses (Non omnibus unum est quod placet hinc spinas colligit, ille rosas.)

PETRONIUS, Fragmenta. No. 74.

13 Talk what you will of taste, my friend, you'll find

Two of a face as soon as of a mind.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, II, 2, 268.

One likes the pheasant's wing, and one the leg;

The vulgar boil, the learned roast an egg.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, II, 2, 84.

But different taste in different men prevails,

And one is fired by beads, and one by tails.

POPE, A Sermon Against Adultery, l. 35.

14 I have always suspected public taste to be a mongrel product, out of affectation by dogmatism.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

15 There can be no disputing about tastes. (De gustibus non est disputandum.)

JEREMY TAYLOR, Reflections upon Ridicule, p. 122. Quoting a widely used Latin proverb.

TAXES

16 Neither will it be that a people over-laid with taxes should ever become valiant. . . No people over-charged with tribute is fit for empire.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of the True Greatness of Kingdoms.

17 To tax and to please, no more than to love and to be wise, is not given to men.

EDMUND BURKE, On American Taxation.

We might not be quite so ready with our taxes,

until we can secure the desired representation.

EDMUND BURKE, State of the Nation. (Works, II, 138.) 1769.

Taxation without representation is tyranny.

JAMES OTIS, Argument on the Illegality of the Writs of Assistance, Feb. 1761. See ATLANTIC, p. 2296.

The corruption of democracies proceeds directly from the fact that one class imposes the taxes and another class pays them. The constitutional principle, 'No taxation without representation,' is utterly set at naught.

DEAN W. R. INGE, Outspoken Essays, I, II.

18 [Lord Suffolk] at last paid his tribute to the common treasury which we all must be taxed.

SPEAKER BURNES, Speeches, House of Commons, 1841, Feb. 1850.

1 What is't to us if taxes rise or fall?
Thanks to our fortune, we pay none at all.

CHARLES CRUTCHFIELD, Night, l. 264.

No statesman e'er will find it worth his pains
To tax our labours, and excise our brains.

CHARLES CRUTCHFIELD, Night, l. 271.

2 Revenues, the sinews of the state. (Vectigalia, nervos rei publicæ.)

CICERO, Pro lege Manilia. Ch. 7, 17. See WAR

3 In sooth, the sorrow of such days
Is not to be express'd,

When he that takes and he that pays
Are both alike distress'd.

COWPER, The Yearly Distress. St. 5.

4 Of all debts men are least willing to pay the taxes. What a satire is this on government!
Everywhere they think they get their money's worth, except for these. Hence the less government we have the better—the fewer laws and the less confided power.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

5 Was it Bonaparte who said that he found vices very good patriots?—"he got five millions from the love of brandy, and he should be glad to know which of the virtues would pay him as much." Tobacco and opium have broad backs, and will cheerfully carry the load of armies.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

6 But in this world, nothing is certain but death and taxes. (Mais dans ce monde, il n'y a rien d'assuré que la mort et les impôts.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Leroy, 1789.

"It was as true," said Mr. Backis, . . . "as taxes is. And nothing's truer than them."

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 21.

7 Taxation must not lead men into temptation, by requiring trivial oaths, by making it profitable to lie, to swear falsely, to bribe or to take bribes. . . . Taxation must not take from individuals what rightfully belongs to individuals.

HENRY GEORGE, The Condition of Labor, p. 11.

8 No one should be permitted to hold natural opportunities without a fair return to all for any special privilege thus accorded to him, and that value which the growth and improvement of a community attaches to land should be taken for the use of the community. . . . We are in favor of raising all public revenues by a single tax upon land values.

HENRY GEORGE, The Single Tax Theory.

9 All taxes must, at last, fall upon agriculture.

GREEN, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire Ch. 8.

10 Robin: On Tuesday I made a false income tax return. All: Ha! ha! 1st Ghost: That's nothing. 2nd Ghost: Nothing at all. 3rd Ghost: Everybody does that. 4th Ghost: It's expected of you.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act II.

11 Unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation.

ABRAHAM S. HEWITT, Democratic platform, 1884.

12 The purse of the people is the real seat of sensitivity. Let it be drawn upon largely, and they will then listen to truths which could not excite them through any other organ.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 59.

The marvel of all history is the patience with which men and women submit to burdens unnecessarily laid upon them by their governments.

WILLIAM H. BORAH, Speech, U. S. Senate.

13 Excise: A hateful tax levied upon commodities.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary.

The Devil's awa wi' th' Exciseman.

BURNS, The Devil's awa wi' the Exciseman.

14 Taxes milks dry, but, neighbor, you'll allow Thet havin' things unsettled kills the cow.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers: Mason and Shidell

The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in.

LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

15 O that there might in England be
A duty on Hypocrisy,

A tax on humbug, an excise

On solemn plausibilities.

HENRY LUTTRELL, An Aspiration.

16 That the power of taxing it [the bank] by the States may be exercised so as to destroy it, is too obvious to be denied. . . . That the power to tax involves the power to destroy [is] not to be denied.

CHIEF JUSTICE JOHN MARSHALL, Decision,
McCulloch v. Maryland 1819 (Wheat, iv, 427, 431.) Usually quoted, "The power to tax is the power to destroy." Marshall was echoing Daniel Webster, who, during his argument in the case (p. 327), stated, "An unlimited power to tax involves, necessarily, the power to destroy."

The power to tax is not the power to destroy while this court sits.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Dissenting Opinion,
Panhandle Oil Co. v. Knox 1928. (227 U.S., 218, 223.)

17 "I would," says Fox, "a tax devise
That shall not fall on me."

"Then tax receipts," Lord North replies,

"For those you never see."

RICHARD BIRMINGHAM SHERMAN, Epigram.

18 We can inform Jonathan what are the inevitable consequences of being too fond of glory:
—Taxes upon every article which enters the mouth, or covers the back, or is placed on the foot . . . taxes on everything on earth, and in the waters under the earth.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Review of Seybert's Statistical Annals of the United States.

The schoolboy whips his taxed top, the beardless youth manages his taxed horse with a taxed bridle, on a taxed road; and the dying Englishman, pouring his medicine, which has paid seven per cent., flings himself back on his chintz bed, which has paid twenty-two per cent., and expires in the arms of an apothecary, who has paid a license of a hundred pounds for the privilege of putting him to death.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Review of Seybert's Annals.

Men who prefer any load of infamy, however great, to any pressure of taxation, however light.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters on American Debts.

It is the part of a good shepherd to shear his flock, not flay it. (Boni pastoris esse tonsdere pecus, non deglubere.)

TIBERIUS CÆSAR, to certain governors who recommended burdensome taxes. (Suetonius, Lives: Tiberius. Ch. xxxii, sec. 2.)

What am I now to take out of all this scarcity? (Quid ego ex hac inopia nunc capiam?)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 167. (Act i, sc. 3.)

TEA

The would-be wits and can't-be gentlemen, I leave them to their daily "tea is ready," Smug coterie, and literary lady.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 76.

Tea! thou soft, thou sober, sage, and venerable liquid, . . . thou female tongue-running, smile-smoothing, heart-opening, wink-tipling cordial, to whose glorious insipidity I owe the happiest moment of my life, let me fall prostrate.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Lady's Last Stake. Act i, sc. 1.

Free yourselves from the slavery of tea and coffee and other slop-kettle.

WILLIAM CORBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 1.

Oh some are fond of Spanish wine and some are fond of French, And some 'll swallow tay and stuff fit only for a wench.

JOHN MASSEFIELD, Captain Stratton's Fancy.

Retired to tea and scandal, according to their ancient custom.

WILLIAM COMMERCE, The Double Dealer. Act i, sc. 1.

Love and scandal are the best sweeteners of tea. (Young, Love in Several Masques, Act iv, sc. 2.)

Now stir the fire, and close the shutters fast, Let fall the curtains, wheel the sofa round, And, while the bubbling and loud hissing urn Throws up a steamy column, and the cups, That cheer but not inebriate, wait on each, So let us welcome peaceful ev'ning in.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 36. (1785)

[Tar water] is of a nature so mild and benign and proportioned to the human constitution as to warm without heating, to cheer but not inebriate.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Siris. Sec. 217. (1744) Quoted by SCOTT, St. Roman's Well: Heading, ch. 7.

Polly put the kettle on, we'll all have tea. DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 17.

Tea, though ridiculed by those who are naturally coarse in their nervous sensibilities, . . . will always be the favourite beverage of the intellectual.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an English Opium-Eater.

There is a great deal of poetry and fine sentiment in a chest of tea.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration; Representative Men: Montaigne.

We had a kettle: we let it leak: Our not repairing it made it worse. We haven't had any tea for a week. . . . The bottom is out of the Universe! RUDYARD KIPPLING, Natural History.

Soft yielding minds to water glide away, And sip, with Nymphs, their elemental tea. POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 61.

Here, thou, great Anna! whom three realms obey, Dost sometimes counsel take—and sometimes tea. POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 7. It should be remembered that in Pope's day, tea was pronounced tay.

Thank God for tea! What would the world do without tea? how did it exist? I am glad I was not born before tea.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 383.)

Venus her myrtle, Phoebus has his bays; Tea both excels, which she vouchsafes to praise. . . .

The Muse's friend, tea does our fancy aid, Repress those vapours which the head invade, And keeps that palace of the soul serene. EDMUND WALLER, Of Tea.

For her own breakfast she'll project a scheme, Nor take her tea without a stratagem.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 190

11 Look out, gentlemen, the schoolmaster is abroad!

LORD BROUGHAM, *Address, London Mechanics'
Institute*, 1825, referring to the secretary,
John Reynolds, a schoolmaster.

Let the soldier be abroad if he will, he can do nothing in this way. There is another creature,
—a creature less imposing in the eyes of men,
perhaps insignificant. The schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier, in full military array.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, 20 Jan., 1828.

The victory of the Prussians over the Austrians was a victory of the Prussian over the Austrian schoolmaster.

PRINCE COUNTESS PRINCEZ. (Amsterdam No.

The Prussian schoolmaster won the battle of Sadowa. (Der preussische Schulmeister hat die Schlacht bei Sadowa gewonnen.)

VON MOLTEK, Speech, Reichstag, 16 Feb., 1874.

12 'Tis pleasing to be school'd in a strange tongue

By female lips and eyes—that is, I mean,
When both the teacher and the taught are young.

The Spirit only can teach. Not any sensual, not any bar, not any slave can teach.

EMERSON, Notes, Addresses and Lectures: An Address Delivered before the Senior Class in Divinity College, Cambridge, 15 July, 1838.

18 A mere professor, spite of all his coat, is Not a whit better than a Mantis,—

An insect, of what clime I can't determine,
That lifts its paws most parson-like, and thence,

By simple savages—there's sheer pretence—
Is reckon'd quite a saint amongst the vermin.

1 The average schoolmaster is and always must be essentially an ass, for how can one imagine an intelligent man engaging in so puerile an avocation?

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. III, p. 244.

2 Beside your straggling fence that skirts the way,

With blossom'd furze unprofitably gay,
There, in his noisy mansion, skill'd to rule,
The village master taught his little school;
A man severe he was, and stern to view,
I knew him well, and every truant knew;
Well had the boding tremblers learn'd to trace

The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laugh'd, with counterfeited glee,

At all his jokes, for many a joke had he,
Full well the busy whisper, circling round,
Convey'd the dismal tidings when he frown'd;

Yet he was kind; or if severe in sight,
The love he bore to learning was in fault.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 193.

3 The vanity of teaching often tempteth a man to forget he is a blockhead.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 240

4 The times were hard when Rip to manhood grew;

They always will be when there's work to do.
He tried at farming.—found it rather slow,—
And then at teaching—what he didn't know.

5 For him the Teacher's chair became a throne.
LONGFELLOW, Parker Cleaveland.

6 Teacher, spare your simple flock. . . . Let the dismal rods, sceptres of pedagogues, have a rest. (Ludi magister, parce simplici turbæ; . . . ferulaque tristes, sceptra pedagogorum, cessant.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 62.

The twig is so easily bended

I have banished the rule and the rod:
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge,

They have taught me the goodness of God:
My heart is the dungeon of darkness,

Where I shut them for breaking a rule;

My frown is sufficient correction;

My love is the law of the school.

Twice he away'd, and shag, in spite of
sorrow,

Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. I, l. 619.

Look, they weep;
And I, an ass, am onion-eyed; for shame,
Transform us not to women.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 34.

Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 186.

All my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 31.

See, see what showers arise,
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 85.

What I should say
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 4, l. 73.

Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forced me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 428.

O, I could play the woman with mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 230.

These foolish drops do something drown my manly spirit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 13.

Did he break into tears? . . . There are no faces truer than those that are so washed.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
I, sc. 1, l. 24.

One whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 348.

Scorn the 'proud man that is asham'd to weep.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 108.

VII—Tears of Women

A lady's tears are silent orators.

BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act III,
sc. 3.

With the persuasive language of a tear.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Times, l. 308.

Tears are sometimes as weighty as words. (Interdum lacrimae pondera verba habent.)

OWEN, Epitaphs ex Poetis. Bk. III, epig. 1, l. 158.

So bright the tear in Beauty's eye,

Love half regrets to kiss it dry.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto 1, st. 8.

For Beauty's tears are lovelier than her smile.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 180.

There shall be love, when genial morn appears,

Like pensive Beauty smiling in her tears.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 95.

Yet ah, how lovely in her tears!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 10.

Oh! too convincing—dangerously dear—

In woman's eye the unanswerable tear!

That weapon of her weakness she can wield,

To save, subdue—at once her spear and shield.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto ii, st. 15.

What lost a world, and bade a hero fly?

The timid tear in Cleopatra's eye.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto ii, st. 15.

2 And the tear that is wip'd with a little address,

May be follow'd perhaps by a smile.

COWPER, The Rose, l. 19. See also SMILE AND TEAR.

3 Then Niobe dissolves into a tear.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 168.

Like Niobe, all tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 149.

4 She would have made a splendid wife, for crying only made her eyes more bright and tender.

O. HENRY, Options.

5 Women laugh when they can and weep when they will.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentium.

6 She has an abundant supply of tears always ready, awaiting her command to flow. (Ube-ribus semper lacrimis semperque paratis In statione sua atque expectantibus illam, Quo

jubeat manare modo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 273.

She makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc.

2, l. 156.

7 She's somewhere in the sunlight strong,

Her tears are in the falling rain.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.

8 By ready tears a woman can always gain a respite for her soul's suffering.

Tell me the rising storm is nigh.

PRIOR, The Lady's Looking-Glass, l. 33.

13 Many indeed shed tears for show, and as soon as an onlooker is gone they have dry eyes. (Plerique enim lacrymas fundunt, ut

ostendant; et toties siccos oculos habent, quoties spectator defuit.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 15.

14 Tears. . . the best brine a maiden can season her praise in.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act

i, sc. 1, l. 55.

15 I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l.

156.

16 At a few drops of women's rheum, which are

As cheap as lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 46.

17 Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears

Had left the flushing in her galled eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 154.

Then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew

Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iii, sc. 1,

l. 111.

18 O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies

In the small orb of one particular tear!

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 288.

Women's weapons, water-drops.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 280.

19 And he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc.

1, l. 259.

20 If that the earth could teem with woman's

tears,

Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 256.

1 I wept thee for the tear thou couldst not hide.

TEKNOVON, The Bridemaid.

Why wilt thou ever sorrow me with thy tears?

TEKNOVON, Thaumas, l. 46.

2 One small pretended tear, which, with grievous rubbing of the eyes, she could scarcely squeeze out by force. (Una falsa lacrimula, Quam oculos terendo misere vix vi expressit.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 67. (Act I, sc. 1.)

3 Grief is the unhappy charter of our sex: The gods who gave us readier tears to shed, Gave us more cause to shed them.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, Cremor.

4 Crying is the refuge of plain women, but the ruin of pretty ones.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act I.

5 It is as great pity to see a woman weep as a goose to go barefoot.

UNKNOWN, A Hundred Merry Tales, x, 20. (1526)

VIII.—Tears: Tearlessness

6 A stoic of the woods—a man without a tear.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. I, st. 23

Mute and magnificent, without a tear.

DREYER, Therapsia Augustalis, l. 52.

7 He bids me dry the last—the first— The only tears that ever burst From Outalissi's soul.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 39.

8 I wept not, so of stone grew I within. (Io non piangeva, sì dentro impietrai.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxiii, l. 49.

9 "Oh, weep with me, Daphne," he sighed, "for you know it's

A terrible thing to be pestered with poets!" But, alas, she is dumb, and the proverb holds good,

She never will cry till she's out of the wood!"

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 73.

10 Tell me, you winged winds,

That round my pathway roar,

Know ye not some spot

Where mortals weep no more?

—Celestial Machine; Tell Me Ye Winds.

11 Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail Or touch the breast.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1721

12 I cannot weep; for always God's visitation

Scarcely serves to quench my (shame-burning) heart.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act II, sc. 1, l. 79.

No, I'll not weep:

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws Or ere I'll weep.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act II, sc. 4, l. 286.

12 Hush'd be that sigh, be dry that tear, Nor let us lose our Heaven here.

Dry be that tear!

R. B. SHRIDAN, Dry Be That Tear.

13 Weep no more, lady, weep no more, Thy sorrow is in vain,

For violets pluckt, the sweetest showers Will ne'er make grow again.

UNKNOWN, The Prior of Orders Gray. (Pierce's Reliques. Ser. I, bk. 2, No. 18.)

Oh! sing unto my roundelay;

Oh! drop the briny tear with me;

Dance no more at holiday;

Like a running river be.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, Alia: Minstrel's Song

Weep no more, nor sigh, nor groan,

Sorrow calls no time that's gone:

Violets pluck'd the sweetest rain

Makes not fresh nor grow again.

JOHN FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act IV, sc.

1. Perhaps a spurious addition to the play.

Weep no more, my lady, oh! weep no more to day!

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, My Old Kentucky Home.

TEMPERAMENT

14 Perhaps he confuses temperament, character and individuality? . . . Individuality is a matter of psychology; temperament, a matter of sensation or aesthetics; character alone is a matter of morals

AMEL, Journal, 30 Aug., 1869. Referring to Schopenhauer.

15 So well she acted all and every part By turns—with that vivacious versatility, Which many people take for want of heart. They err—'tis merely what is call'd mobility,

A thing of temperament and not of art. Though seeming so, from its supposed facility;

And false—though true; for surely they're sincerest

Who're strongly acted on by what is nearest.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 97

16 The nerves, they are the same!

—Camilla's Exclamation, Act on the stage.

17 Betsy, like all good women, had a temper of her own.

—WILLIAM CAMPBELL, Betsy and I Are One.

Of all bad things by which mankind are cursed,
Their own bad temper surely are the worst.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Menander.

A lady of what is commonly called an uncertain temper—a phrase which being interpreted signifies a temper tolerably certain to make everybody more or less uncomfortable.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 7.

Good temper is an estate for life.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Plain Speaker: On Personal Character.

Our temperatures differ in capacity of heat,
or, we boil at different degrees.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

It is often temperament which makes men brave and women chaste. (Le tempérament font souvent la valeur des hommes et la vertu des femmes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 220.

There was no resisting the vortex of his temperament.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Captain Jackson.

Sensitive, swift to resent, but as swift in atonement for error.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish:
Pt. ix, The Wedding Day. St. 3.

Though I am not splenitive and rash,
Yet have I something in me dangerous.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 284.

You know the fiery quality of the duke.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 93.

He's full of alteration and self-reproving.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 1, l. 3.

Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 114.

Were not I a little pot and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 5.

These flashes on the surface are not he.
He has a solid base of temperament.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 234.

Suit your manner to the man. (Ut homo est, ita morum geras.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 431.

TEMPERANCE

See also Moderation

Health, longevity, beauty, are other names for personal purity; and temperance is the regimen for all.

A. B. ARNOTT, Table Talk: Habits.

Temperance is a bridle of gold.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
II, sec. II, mem. 1, sub. 2

Let us become more cheerful and we will become a more temperate people. . . . Men cannot be driven into temperance.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Works, p. 112.

Temperance is the firm and moderate dominion of reason over passion and other unrighteous impulses of the mind. (Temperantia est rationis in libidinem atque in alios non rectos impetus animi firma et moderata dominatio.)

CICERO, De Inventione Rhetorica. Bk. II, ch.
54, sec. 164.

Temperance consists in foregoing bodily pleasures. (Temperantia autem constat ex prætermis-sionibus voluptatibus corporis.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. III, ch. 15, 38.

Temperate in every place—abroad, at home,
Thence will applause, and hence will profit
come;

And health from either he in time prepares
For sickness, age, and their attendant cares.

CRABBE, The Borough. Letter xvii, l. 198.

Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography Ch. 1.

Temperance, the first of thirteen virtues which Franklin tried to practise. The others were silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquillity, chastity, humility.

If we give more to the flesh than we ought,
we nourish an enemy; if we give not to her necessity what we ought, we destroy a citizen.

ST. GREGORY, Homilies. No. 3.

Drink not the third glass, which thou canst not tame,

When once it is within thee; but before Mayst rule it, as thou list: and pour the
shame,

Which it would pour on thee, upon the floor.
It is most just to throw that on the ground,
Which would throw me there, if I keep the round

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch St. 5.

If all the world
Should in a pet of temperance feed on pulse, Drink the clear stream, and nothing wear but freize,

Th' all-giver would be unthank'd, would be unprais'd. . . .

And we should serve him as a grudging magister,

And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons.
MILTON, Comus, l. 720.

¹ Impostor do not charge most innocent Nature,

As if she would her children should be riotous
With her abundance; she, good cateress,
Means her provision only to the good
That live according to her sober laws,
And holy dictate of spare Temperance.
MILTON, Comus, l. 762.

² Temperance controls our desires; some it hates and routs, others it regulates and restores to a healthy measure. Temperance knows that the best measure of the appetites is not what you want to take, but what you ought to take.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 29.

³ Though you can guess what temperance should be,

You know not what it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 13, l. 121.

Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandizing.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV Act v, sc. 5, l. 56.

Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only

Which your disease requires.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 124.

⁴ I prefer temperance hotels—although they sell worse liquor than any other kind of hotels.

ARTEMUS WARD, Temperance.

⁵ Temperance is the nurse of chastity.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act
iii, sc. 3.

TEMPTATION

⁶ It is good to be without vices, but it is not good to be without temptations.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 237.

⁷ If thou wilt go seek for a thief, no wonder if thou be robbed. . . . If thou wilt go seek fire to put in the thatch, no wonder if thy house be burned. . . . If thou canst not keep at a distance nor forbear the presence of the bait, thou art not like to forbear the sin.

RICHARD BAXTER, Works. Vol. iii, p. 447.

⁸ Why comes temptation but for man to meet
And master and make crouch beneath his foot,

And so be pedestaled in triumph?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book:
The Pope, l. 1135.

⁹ What's done we partly may compute,

But know not what 's resisted.

BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid, l. 63.

¹⁰ So you tell yourself you are pretty fine clay
To have tricked temptation and turned it
away,

But wait, my friend, for a different day;

Wait till you want to want to!

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Desire.

¹¹ The subtlest tempter has the smoothest style;
Sirens sing sweetest when they would betray.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Legend of Maidula the Fair.

¹² As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptation we resist.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

¹³ How much, preventing God, how much I owe
To the defences thou hast round me set;
Example, custom, fear, occasion slow,—
These scorned bondmen were my parapet.

I dare not peep over this parapet
To gauge with glance the roaring gulf below,
The depths of sin to which I had descended,
Had not these me against myself defended.

in fine gay colours, that are but skin-deep.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries, Genesis. iii.

¹⁸ No man is tempted so, but may o'ercome,
If that he has a will to masterdom.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptations.

Temptations hurt not, though they have access:
Satan o'ercomes none, but by willingness.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptations.

The devil tempts us not—'tis we tempt him,

Reckoning his skill with opportunity.
GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 47.

1 There are temptations that require all of one's strength to yield to.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xi, 86.

Do you really think that it is weakness that yields to temptation? I tell you that there are terrible temptations which it requires strength, strength and courage, to yield to.

Were there strong temptations planted
In thy path of life?
WHITTIER, What the Voice Said. St. 8.

14 I can resist everything except temptation.
OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act I.
The only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it.
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

TENNYSON, ALFRED

15 Of borrowed notes, the mock-bird's modish tune,
The jingling medley of purloined conceits,
Out-babying Wordsworth and out-glittering Keats;
Where all the airs of patchwork pastoral chime

To drown the ears in Tennysonian rhyme!
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. I, sec. 6.

You talk of tinsel! why, we see
The old mark of rouge upon your cheeks.
You prate of Nature! you are he
That spilt his life among the cliques.
TENNYSON, The New Timon and the Poets.
Tennyson's rejoinder to Bulwer-Lytton's attack. Published in Punch, 28 Feb., 1846. See also SOULS: GOOD AND BAD.

Ah God! the petty foals of rhyme
That shriek and sweat in pigmy wars
Before the story face of Time,
And look'd at by the silent stars;
Who hate each other for a song,
And do their little best to bite
And pinch their brethren in the throng;
And scratch the very dead for spite.

TENNYSON, Literary Squabbles. Originally printed in Punch, 7 March, 1846, entitled Aster-thought. Referring to the attack by Bulwer-Lytton.

16 He [Tennyson] has a great deal to say; but he had much more power of expression than was wanted for anything he had to say. He could not stick up to the height of his own towering style.

G. K. CHAMBERS, The Victorian Age in Literature, p. 193.

1 Brother of the greatest poets, true to nature,
true to art;
Lover of Immortal Love, uplifter of the human heart;
Who shall cheer us with high music, who shall sing, if thou depart?
HENRY VAN DYKE, Tennyson.

2 Death's little rift hath rent the faultless lute:
The singer of undying songs is dead.
WILLIAM WATSON, Lacrimæ Musarum.

3 Now finale to the shore,
Now land and life finale and farewell,
Now Voyager depart, . . .
Embrace thy friends, leave all in order,
To port and hawser's tie no more returning,
Depart upon thy endless cruise old Sailor
WALT WHITMAN, Now Finale to the Shore.

THAMES, THE

4 And the thronged river toiling to the main
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, The Thames.

5 O, could I flow like thee! and make thy stream
My great example, as it is my theme;
Tho' deep yet clear, tho' gentle yet not dull;
Strong without rage, without o'erflowing full
See JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hall, l. 189.

Serene yet strong, majestic yet sedate,
Swift without violence, without terror great.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Carmen Seculare, l. 282 Imitating Denham.

6 Say, Father Thames, for thou hast seen
Full many a sprightly race
Disporting on thy margent green,
The paths of pleasure trace.
THOMAS GRAY, On a Distant Prospect of Eton College, l. 21.

7 The great street paved with water, filled with shipping,
And all the world's flags flying and seagulls dipping.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Biography, l. 53.

8 Flow proudly, Thames! the emblem bright
And witness of succeeding years!
Flow on, in freedom's sacred light,
Nor stained with blood, nor swelled with tears.

Sweet is thy course, and clear, and still.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. I, pt. II, ch. 9, sec. 7.

10 Slow let us trace the matchless vale of Thames;
Fair-winding up to where the Muses haunt
In Twit'nam's bowers.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1425.

11 He had to restrain himself from . . . accompanying some passer-by with the question, "Say!
But is this little wet ditch here the Historical River Thames?"

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Brilling Sees It Through. Bk. I, ch. 1.

12 The river glideth at his own sweet will;
Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;
And all that mighty heart is lying still!
WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Composed upon Westminster Bridge.

THANKSGIVING DAY

13 Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of Harvest-home!
HENRY ALFORD, Thanksgiving Day.

Heap high the board with plenteous cheer, and gather to the feast,
And toast the sturdy Pilgrim band whose courage never ceased.
Give praise to that All-Gracious One by whom their steps were led,
And thanks unto the harvest's Lord who sends our "daily bread"
ALICE WILLIAMS BROTHERTON, The First Thanksgiving Day

14 Thanksgiving-day, I fear,
If one the solemn truth must touch,
Is celebrated, not so much
To thank the Lord for blessings o'er,
As for the sake of getting more!
WILL CARLETON, Captain Young's Thanksgiving.

15 Over the river and through the wood,
Now grandmother's cap I spy!
Hurrah for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah for the pumpkin pie!
LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Thanksgiving Day.

16 So once in every year we throng
Upon a dry apart,
To praise the Lord with feast and song
In thankfulness of heart.
ARTHUR GUTTERMAN, The First Thanksgiving.

17 And taught by thee the Church prolongs
Her hymns of high thanksgiving still.
KEBLE, The Christian Year: St. Luke the Evangelist. St. 18.

 Gather the gifts of Earth with equal hand;
 Henceforth ye too may share the birthright soil.

The corn, the wine, and all the harvest-home.
 E. C. STEDMAN, The Feast of Harvest.

2
 And let these altars, wreathed with flowers
 And piled with fruits, awake again
 Thanksgivings for the golden hours,
 The early and the latter rain!

WHITTIER, For an Autumn Festival. St. 12.

Ah! on Thanksgiving day, when from East and from West,

From North and South, come the pilgrim and guest,

When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board

The old broken links of affection restored,
 When the care-wearied man seeks his mother
 once more,

And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before.

What moistens the lip and what brightens the eye?

What calls back the past, like the rich Pumpkin pie?

WHITTIER, The Pumpkins. St. 3.

 And after solve 'em in a trice;

As if Divinity had caught
 The itch, on purpose to be scratched.

 Theology is an attempt to explain a subject by men who do not understand it. The intent is not to tell the truth but to satisfy the questioner.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. XX, p. 81.

 Get theology out of education. Nothing should be taught in school that somebody does not know. . . . Let us put theology out of religion. Theology has always sent the worst to heaven, the best to hell.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Myth and Miracle.

It is an old habit with theologians to beat the living with the bones of the dead.
